RELIEF ON WAY FOR SWELTERING CITY

Today

He Wants to Be Dead.
The Astors Bought Land.
England's Air Plans.
Men Eat, Women Think.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

MANY OLD MEN will read this with sympathy: "Fred Schlundt inhaled gas and killed himself in a little furnished room. In his pocket was six cents and this note:

"Don't try to revive me. I want to be dead. I am over seventy-four."

Many younger than seventy-four know how that suicide felt.

IN NEWPORT, R. I., tomorrow, a young Mr. Astor will marry a young Miss French and reporters who attend to that sort of "copy" are deeply interested in this "great society event."

One of them says that, after Mr. Astor, descendant of the original fur trader, has given to his bride money and other things amounting to two million dollars, he will modestly live on eight thousand dollars a year, work hard and be happy.

MORE IMPORTANT even than that announcement is the reminder that the Astors are still rich after more than a hundred years because they bought real estate and kept it. Ten thousand speculators in stocks, ten thousand builders of great commercial fortunes have come, seen their day and gone.

The Astors, Goelets, Gerrys and others still march on through Fifth avenue, the "society columns," the Social Register and Newport, because their ancestors knew enough to buy good real estate and keep it. Don't forget that when you ask yourself:

"In what shall I invest?"

UNIVERSAL SERVICE says when Norman H. Davis, mysterious "United States ambassador-at-large," urged Britain to reject Japan's demand for naval equality, "Britain's response was cold." Cold or hot, it was a common sense response. Why should we travel over the earth telling nations what they may or may not do in the way of national defense?

Why don't we stay home and attend to our own business, protecting this country? Has anybody in Washington noticed an announcement by the Marquess of Londonderry, British secretary of state for air, that the British government having abandoned hope of disarmament agreements, will "proceed immediately to build an air force adequate for the defense of British shores?"

STANLEY BALDWIN, lord president of the council, had already said that "his government would see to it that in air strength and in air power this country shall no longer be in a position of inferiority to any country within striking distance of our shores."

This American nation is in a position of pitiful inferiority to every one of the first class.

Could not some set of initials be set up to provide cash for national protection; for instance, some "afsf" fund, which would mean "air fleet, submarine fleet."

MRS. ANTONIO was given a 24-hour stay last night just before she was to die in New York State's electric chair. Before learning of the stay, she gave her three children, Phyllis, 9; Marie, 6, and Frank, 3, to her brother to take care of them.

The two men convicted of helping her murder her husband were given a similar stay after one of them made a last-minute statement. It is this statement that Gov. Lehman is studying carefully today.

THERE SEEMS to be a difference between women and men convicted of murder. Murderers are always asked what they want for a last meal and can have anything they want. One of Mrs. Antonio's hired murderers, Faetta, ordered for his last dinner veal cutlets, tomato salad, ice cream, jelly roll and cigars.

The other hired murderer, Feraci, ordered a steak, smothered in onions, tomato salad, strawberry short cake and milk. He leaves a wife and ten children.

Mrs. Antonio said:

"I want nothing to eat."

It must be unpleasant for Governor Lehman to decide that it is his duty to permit the execution of a woman with three young children. There is no excuse for her, although it was shown at the trial that her husband was a peddler of drugs, therefore a dangerous public enemy, and that he beat and otherwise illtreated her. That may have had more to do with her planning his murder than

CLOSED SHOP STEEL ISSUE ELIMINATED

Miss Perkins' Aide Gives View as New Board Organizes

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—The National Steel Labor Relations Board organized swiftly today for an effort to bring lasting peace in the steel industry.

The three-man board sat down with Secretary Perkins within 24 hours after its creation by President Roosevelt.

Judge Walter P. Stacy, of the North Carolina Supreme Court, chairman of the board, reported there would be no action until the members could "orient" themselves to the situation.

Simultaneously, there came from an authoritative Labor Department spokesman a statement that the "closed shop" issue definitely had been eliminated from the negotiations under the Roosevelt plan.

The "closed shop" means that all employes must be labor union members.

MAJORITY RULE PLAN

Speculation was officially discounted that such a condition would result from the majority rule plan laid down by the President's executive order.

This provides for secret employe elections where necessary, in which the majority choice would speak for the others in collective bargaining.

The federal labor authority,

Mulls Sentenced 10 to 20 Years In Sewer Death

Roy and Grace Mull today were sentenced to the limit—10 to 20 years—for the murder of Margaret Schwickrath, the mystery girl of the Morgue.

Husband and wife showed no emotion whatever as they stood before Judge George V. Moore in Criminal Court late today for sentence.

First Judge Moore refused the North Side couple a new trial or arrested judgment. They had been convicted of murder in the second degree.

LED BACK TO JAIL

Then Attorney Robert B. Ivory, Jr., asked the court to fix bail in case he appeals to the higher courts. Judge Moore instructed Ivory to decide definitely first whether there would be an appeal.

The Mulls were then led back over the Bridge of Sighs to the County Jail where they have languished since they were convicted.

Margaret Schwickrath, the murder victim, lived with the Mulls on the North Side and worked alongside Mrs. Mull in a North Side packing house.

BODY IN SEWER

Eight months ago the unclad, bullet-torn body of the mystery girl was found stuffed in a sewer off the Allegheny River boulevard, near Verona.

For days her body lay unidentified at the morgue. Thousands passed by. She was tentatively identified as a dozen different persons.

With the official identification of Margaret Schwickrath, the Mulls were arrested. Their son, Elmer, also was tried on the murder charge, but he was acquitted in a verdict ordered by the court.

PWA TO GIVE 12,000 JOBS IN COUNTY

24½ Million Granted For Tube, Street, Bridge Projects

Jobs for between 12,000 and 15,000 unemployed men were assured today when a $24,500,000 loan and grant from the Federal government to Allegheny County was officially confirmed.

The huge loan and grant was allotted the County Authority by Public Works Administrator Ickes to carry on a road, tunnel and bridge construction program. Of the amount allotted here, $18,500,000 is a loan, the rest an outright grant.

While the loan application had been for $31,108,000, the amount allotted was reduced to $24,500,000 after the PWA vetoed some of the proposed projects.

As announced in Washington, the specific projects approved by PWA and the estimated amount each will cost include:

The Pittsburgh-Homestead High Level Bridge	$2,863,000
Liberty Tunnels toll plaza	1,412,000
Highland Park Bridge	2,800,000
Ft. Duquesne Bridge and Twin Tunnels	8,650,000
The Glenwood Bridge	2,551,000
Jerome Street Bridge to McKeesport	883,000

Among the projects disapproved by PWA were:

5 a. m.	78	1 p. m.	91
6 a. m.	78	2 p. m.	93
7 a. m.	77

The record-smashing heat that scorched the country from the Rockies to the Atlantic held on today, but with welcome news of relief on the way.

Dropping only to 77 overnight the mercury began soaring under the sun's fierce rays, as the humidity continued high.

Two deaths in Allegheny County were attributed to the heat. More than a score of deaths throughout the country from heat or drowning were reported by the Associated Press.

NEW RECORD LIKELY

Observer W. S. Brotzman indicated the temperature would break the record of 94 for today, established in 1901, and that it might approach the all-time June record of 98.

Clear skies and blistering temperatures were reported throughout the Mid-West. In many instances the mercury shot above 100.

Seeking relief, a large part of the population flocked to swimming pools, parks and highways. Hundreds lay on newspapers spread on the ground or on park benches last night.

WOMAN DIES

Mrs. Frances Figer, 90, of 3557 California avenue, was fatally stricken by the heat in her home last night, according to the Coroner's report.

Boys diving in Deer Creek at Indianola found the body of Sam Harahi, 26, a miner employed by the Colonial Coal Company, last night, the Coroner reported. He is believed to have been seeking relief from the heat when drowned.

Albert McCoy, 35, of 911 Sandusky street, collapsed from the heat today in the Sun-Telegraph Building, where he is employed as a utility man. He was taken to Mercy Hospital where his condition was said to be serious.

Overcome by the heat, Patrolman Leon Dayton collapsed at the wheel of a radio scout car in Frankstown avenue yesterday. He was taken to the Pittsburgh Hospital.

Franklin, Pa., reported 101 degrees yesterday the highest on record.

COTTON BRITISH GOLF WINNER

SANDWICH, England, June 29.—Henry Cotton, 27-year-old British professional, today won the British Open golf championship with a 72-hole aggregate of 283. His victory marked the first time the title has been won by other than an American since 1923, and his 283 total enabled him to equal the record for the event set by Gene Sarazen, American pro, two years ago.

Despite the fact that Cotton missed a three-foot putt on the home green which, had it dropped, would have given him a fourth round 78 and a new record for the tournament, his play here made history. As a result of his par 72 in the third round this morning, he was 12 under par for 54 holes of title play and 17 under par for 120 holes played this week, including the 36-hole qualifying round.

On the first day of the qualifying test he shot a 66 at St. Georges to tie Bobby Jones' qualifying record. In the first round he shot a 67 to tie Walter Hagen's championship low round. In the second round he shot a 65 to break all low-score records for major championships in England and America.

Sarazen today finished well back in the field with a 72-hole score of 302. He trailed three other American entrants, Joe Kirkwood and MacDonald Smith, each of whom had 292, and Denny Shute, defending champion, who had 301.

PATRON SLAIN IN CAFE BRAWL

CANONSBURG, Pa., June 29.—A drunken brawl in a beer garden today cost the life of W. A. Carney, 32, district manager of the West Penn Power Company, according to the police.

Under arrest was Dan Verona, of Houston, bartender in the Plaza Beer Garden in Canonsburg's Jefferson avenue.

Police Chief Harold Addis reported that Carney had been in several arguments during the evening.

Verona knocked him to the floor, where his skull was fractured, in trying to separate him in a brawl with another patron, the chief said.

A manslaughter charge was brought against Verona, who surrendered, according to Addis.

Carney died several hours after the fight, which occurred around midnight.

The victim lived in nearby Houston. He was married and the father of two children.

Marie Dressler Losing Battle Against Death

International News Service.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., June 29.—Marie Dressler once beat up Wallace Beery on the waterfront.

And she was losing. Death was near.

"Her fighting spirit is remarkable."

That statement was made by Queen Marie's personal physician, Dr. F. R. Nuzum. But he added:

"But we don't expect her to live through the day."

High Dive From Bureau Kills Boy 'Acrobat'

A trouper's death today was met in true trouper fashion by 8-year-old Robert Smythe, of 116 Bertha street, Mt. Washington. He smiled at the end.

Robert, 8

Robert was going to be a circus acrobat when he grew up.

Yesterday he was playing at "high dive" from the top of his six-foot dresser onto the soft springs of his quarter-size bed.

His laughter was heard all through the house, until he suddenly screamed, according to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell D. Smythe.

On his last jump he had missed the springs and his little body had struck the steel end of the bed.

Internally injured, he kept smiling until the end came this morning in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Bobby, as he was known to the members of the Smythe family, was playing with his older brother, "Buddy," who told his parents that both of them had made the "leap for life" many times before.

Bobby's collie dog, "Handsome," cannot understand why his master does not play with him any more. He wanders around the house, wimpering.

The little red-headed trouper was first in his class at St. Mary's of the Mount.

His father, Russell D. Smythe, is a city employe. Funeral services will be held Monday morning at St. Mary's of the Mount Church, Mt. Washington. Interment will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Man Found Slain In Woman's Garb

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., June 29.—(AP.)—The body of a man, about 35, dressed in women's clothing, which included two pairs of stockings and three suits of underclothing, was found on a golf course near here. Around the neck was a rope which was tied to a tree, and on the temple was a mark of a blow.

PRESIDENT SEES NEW PROGRESS

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt's lashing of "die-hards" and pledge of a vaster New Deal promised today to resound in the campaigns for the fall elections.

Sitting in the Oval Room of the White House, in the steaming heat of a Washington summer, the President gave a radio talk last night in which he:

1—Praised Congress as the most unpartisan since the time "of President Washington himself."

2—Cited statistics to show gains in wages, employment, farm prices and consuming power.

4—Declared the "most vociferous of the doubting Thomases" are those who seek special political or financial privileges.

5—Said the toes of harmful self-seekers "are being stepped on and are going to be stepped on."

6—Reaffirmed his faith in what has come to be known as the "Brain Trust."

Saved From Chair At 11th Hour by Condemned Man

OSSINING, N. Y., June 29.—(AP.)—A story that came tumbling from the lips of a condemned man even as the hour set for his death was striking has saved Anna Antonio—for at least a day—from the electric chair.

"She's absolutely innocent of the murder of her husband," said Vincent Saetta.

Warden Lawes, into whose ear, as they sat together last night in the deathhouse, Saetta whispered his story, telephoned Gov. Lehman at Albany. For more than half an hour they talked. Midnight had passed when the Governor issued a brief statement:

"I have directed the warden of Sing Sing Prison to postpone the execution of Mrs. Anna Antonio, Vincent Saetta and Samuel Feraci until Friday night, June 29, in order that I may have time to study and consider a long statement made by Saetta."

Thus he postponed — though only for a day—the execution of the woman and two men she was convicted of hiring to kill her hus-

Ziegfeld's Daughter Launched in Movies

HOLLYWOOD, June 29.—(AP.)—Patricia Ziegfeld, 18-year-old daughter of the late Florenz Ziegfeld and Billie Burke, was off on a career in motion pictures today. She hopes eventually it will bring her to realization of her fondest hope—that of being another Peggy Fears, outstanding New York stage impressario.

Miss Ziegfeld has become associated with William A. McGuire, who, with Miss Burke, is producing "The Great Ziegfeld," a movie based on the life of the Follies producer.

THREAT ISSUED BY HINDENBURG

International News Service.

BERLIN, June 29.—President Paul von Hindenburg has threatened to resign if Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen, former military attache at Washington, and leader of the conservative faction in the Hitler government, leaves the cabinet.

This report, which fell with stunning effect in the midst of the internal German domestic crisis this afternoon, aroused the greatest concern at the foreign office, because of the bad effects the resignation would create abroad.

The letter threatening resignation is said to be in the possession of Von Papen, whose criticism of the radical elements within the Nazi regime in a speech at Marburg was so energetic that Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels, minister of propaganda, ordered German newspapers not to publish it.

Some sort of a compromise is considered inevitable.

It is reported that Chancellor Hitler made two trips to Neudeck to confer with Von Hindenburg. The aged President, who is quite ill, was unable to receive him the first time, it was understood.

Nudists Wearing Smile Wed at World Fair

CHICAGO, June 29.—(AP.)—Dressed in a smile and—the bride at least, a wedding ring—an Amarillo girl and a Milwaukee bridegroom were pronounced man and wife today in strictly nudist ceremony at the World's Fair they call "A Century of Progress."

The bride was Jean May, 23, of Amarillo, Tex., and her husband Charles Mueller, 24, of Milwaukee.

Of the wedding party of nine, only the minister deigned to wear clothing. He was dressed in a goat skin, and walked about gingerly in bare feet, stubbing his toe now and then.

The nudists had selected as a background for their ceremony the setting of dinosaurs, triceratops, brontosaurus and other denizens of the "world a million years ago" at the World's Fair site.

Camermen and reporters furnished the necessary blushes, watching the bridal party step into a boat to glide down a "lost river," disrobe behind the scenes and then reappear properly dressed for the wedding.

Miss May had been an adherent of the Roselawn, Ind., nudist colony, and Mueller was a disciple at Mirror Lake, Wis.

The bridesmaid was Yvonne Stacey, 22, known down at the Roselawn Camp as "Zorine, daughter of the sun." Probably her father furnished her beautiful coat of tan for a wedding gown.

It was a great day for it. The sun started out early pounding the thermometer bulbs, and clothes were not at all necessary for warmth.

There have been several sudden closings of night clubs at the Fair this year because of the decisions of the censors that fan dancers and models wore next to nothing. But it seemed to be a mystery today whether the censors knew about the nudist wedding, or, if they did, whether nothing was better than next to nothing.

DEATH IN TROLLEY STRIKE RIOT SPURS PEACE EFFORT

BIG POWER LINE DYNAMITED IN FEUD

Paralysis of Service Extends as Priest Works for Peace

MILWAUKEE, June 29.—(AP.)—One death in a new outburst of violence spurred peacemakers on to redoubled efforts to end the strike of union employes of the Milwaukee Electric Railway Company, which threatened today to spread to other industries.

The Rev. Francis J. Haas, of Washington, chief conciliator of the National Labor Board, sought the quickest method of putting a stop to the reign of violence after Eugene Domagalski, 24, leader of a band of strike sympathizers and pickets, died last night after a raid on the company's huge lakeside power plant.

Domagalski died en route to a hospital after he had been hurled to the ground by an electrical charge when the iron fence post he was using to batter a path into the generating plant swung against a switchboard.

LINE DYNAMITED

A pole carrying a high tenson power line today was dynamited at Vernon Center, 25 miles southwest of here.

It was the first instance of the use of explosives in the strike.

Electric service in the neighborhood was affected as the pole toppled and tore down the trolley wire of the Milwaukee-Mukwonago interburban line, delaying a train carrying the mail.

The damage occurred as the strike went into its fourth day. Only four street cars left the barn this morning, and transportation directors of the utility indicated trolley and bus systems would probably remain paralyzed throughout the day.

SERVICE PARALYZED

Paralysis of service spread today to Racine, Wis., also served by the Milwaukee utility, when all conveyances were ordered off the streets after a bus driver was injured.

One death, six hospital cases and 22 arrests comprised the toll of last night's rioting at the giant Lakeside power plant and four scattered car barns of the company. Police estimated 30,000 persons witnessed the rioting.

Father Haas and John D. Moore, government mediators, after all night conferences with officials of the utility and the three American Federation of Labor unions which ordered the walkout, said prospects of a settlement soon were "excellent."

VOTE TO JOIN STRIKE

Meanwhile, 35 representatives of 25 building trades and crafts unions voted unanimously to call a general strike of nearly 6,000 men in their lines in sympathy with the utility strike.

If the A. F. L. unions fostering the utility strike wish the support offered, the building trades propose to join the strike within 48 hours, leaders said.

A companion of Domagalski received burns from the charge.

The fatal mishap, climaxing three successive nights of disorders, occurred when a throng of 8,000 reached the peak of rioting after knocking out all lights in the section with rocks. Employes of the plant sought to keep back the crowd with streams of water, but it stubbornly refused to disband until reinforcements of deputies fired tear gas bombs.

After a day of sporadic disorders which caused utility officials to abandon car service, the tragic raid brought an abrupt halt to further pillaging for the night.

3 JAILBREAKERS RECAPTURED

SUTTON, W. Va., June 29.—(AP.)—The freedom which three convicts purchased at the cost of a jailer's life is at an end.

They were captured last night in a clearing eight miles from Sutton after bloodhounds had been placed upon their trail.

State police returned the three, Camden Rood, 30, of Frametown; Elliott Keener, 18, of Dane, Webster County, and Raymond Mace, 19, of Chemical, near Sutton to the office of the Braxton County prosecuting attorney for questioning.

Later they were lodged for safekeeping in Kanawha County jail, charaged with murder.

As the trio fled from the Braxton County Jail Wednesday, they left behind Jailer Earl (Turtle) Bland, mortally wounded. He had been beaten on the head with an iron bar sawed from the jail corridor and died soon afterwards.

State police said they found Rood on a lonely road. He surrendered without a struggle. Rood led the officers to the clearing where Keener and Mace were hiding. They, too, surrendered without a struggle.

A Happy Awakening :-: By QUIN HALL

threefold plan for "security" through providing better homes, planning land and water resources and social insurance.

STRANGE NAMES

The President said:

"A few timid people, who fear progress, will try to give you new and strange names for what we are doing. Sometimes they will call it 'Fascism,' sometimes 'Communism,' sometimes 'regimentation,' sometimes 'Socialism.'

"But in so doing, they are trying to make very complex and theoretical something that is really very simple and very practical.

"I believe in practical explanations and in practical policies. I believe that what we are doing today is a necessary fulfillment of what Americans have always been doing—a fulfillment of old and tested American ideals."

After citing statistics to show progress of recovery, he said:

"But the simplest way for each of you to judge recovery lies in the plain facts of your own individual situation. Are you better off than you were last year? Are your debts less burdensome? Is your bank account more secure? Are your working conditions better? Is your faith in your own individual future more firmly grounded?

WHAT PRICE FOR GAINS

"Also, let me put to you another simple question. Have you, as an individual, paid too high a price for these gains?

"Plausible self-seekers and theoretical die-hards will tell you of the loss of individual liberty. Answer this question, also out of the facts of your own life. Have you lost any of your rights or liberty or constitutional freedom of action and choice?

"Turn to the Bill of Rights of the Constitution, which I have solemnly sworn to maintain, and under which your freedom rests secure.*I have no question in my mind as to what your answer will be."

JOHNSON SPURS WAR ON MILL

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Recovery Administrator Johnson today reiterated his determination to seek compliance of the Harriman Hosiery Mills, Harriman, Tenn., with NRA provisions, regardless of the Department of Justice finding that no ground for criminal prosecution existed.

The company recently shut down its mill, throwing hundreds of employes out of work, following the NRA's action in forcing surrender of the Blue Eagle for alleged non-compliance with labor provisions of the NRA. Johnson said:

"There is a violation of Section 7-A of the NRA. The Recovery Administration will stand by its decision to require the hosiery mill to comply with provisions of the textile code and the recovery act.

"The hosiery mill cannot obtain restoration of the Blue Eagle until it meets the requirements laid down by the Recovery Administration."

RUNS BUSINESS FROM CELL

YORK, Pa., June 29.—(AP.)—His jail cell has become his office and Fred C. Perkins continues to direct—although by remote control—the storage battery business in which he defied NRA as an affront to his "rugged individualism."

The defiance is the reason for his imprisonment. He has been unable to raise bail set in Federal Court, so he called in his secretary for dictation and interviews his son in his cell to give instructions in running the plant.

Perkins refused to sign the NRA code governing his plant, which employs 10 men. When haled into Federal Court for alleged failure to pay minimum wages he denied the constitutionality of the recovery law and dubbed himself a "rugged individualist."

He was jailed two days ago and yesterday was in full direction of his business place in his new office with bars in the windows.

Prisoner Confesses Killing Policeman

FORT WAYNE, Ind., June 29.—(AP.)—Virgil Hoffman, 22, was arrested here today and confessed, police said, that he shot and killed Edward Keasy, a merchant policeman, in a gun fight early this morning at the Ligonier (Ind.) jail.

Troops Demanded In Farm Strike

BRIDGETON, N. J., June 29.—(AP.)—Disorder broke out today at the Seabrook Farms, scene of a strike, and resulted in a demand upon Gov. Moore for State Police or the National Guard.

CLOSED SHOP STEEL ISSUE ELIMINATED

Miss Perkins' Aide Gives View as New Board Organizes

who asked that his name not be used, said the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers had made a definite promise to the government in a recent public statement that it would not ask for the closed shop even if its union was named as the majority choice for bargaining. He said:

"If the workers do not ask for the closed shop, it can certainly be taken for granted that the steel employers will not ask for it and the government will not ask for it."

Even in a hypothetical case, should labor ask for a "closed shop" he said, nothing in the executive order would bind the employers to accept such a plan.

COMPANY UNIONS

It was added that the majority representation plan would not even bar company unions, long insisted upon by the steelmasters, since any group or individual would have the right to present a petition of grievances.

Should non-company union workers bein the majority, however, the company groups would not rule.

Miss Perkins received a telegram from M. F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. It read:

"In behalf of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, their friends and the public in general, we desire to express to you our gratitude, appreciation and sincere thanks for the splendid service rendered and assistance given in securing the board of industrial relations..

Permanent Peace Seen By Steel Union Head

Action of President Roosevelt in establishing a national labor relations board for the steel industry should end the "necessity or occasion for a suspension of operations in the industry, Michael F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, said today. Tighe declared:

"With the issuing of this executive order, and with the proper functioning of the new board, there should never be any necessity or occasion for a suspension of operations due to any misunderstandings on the part of either employers or employes.

"We feel deeply gratified by the action that President Roosevelt has taken."

GIRL INJURED BY FIRECRACKER

The first victim reported injured by fireworks in the preholiday celebrations, Miss Ellen Mitchell, 20, of 3219 Brereton avenue, was recovering at her home today while police sought an unidentified person who threw a firecracker that exploded near her.

Miss Mitchell was walking in Bigelow boulevard, near Herron avenue, last night when the firecracker was thrown. It scorched her dress and the detonation affected ner hearing in her left ear.

Suffering from shock, the girl was taken by the radio car from the Penn Avenue Police Station to St. Francis' Hospital, where she was treated and then sent home.

U. S. AIMS BLOW AT SILVER GAMBLE

Embargo Will Prevent Speculators From Rigging Price

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Acting suddenly when told silver speculators are starting to ship huge quantities of the white metal abroad, President Roosevelt today had clamped down the lid against further exports of silver from the United States.

The embargo placed on silver is the same as that in effect on gold. It was prompted to prevent speculators from hoping to boost silver prices in the foreign marts above the 50 cents an ounce the Treasury is allowed to pay for domestic stocks under the new silver purchasing act. This legislation authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to buy silver until the government's stock equals 25 per cent of the nation's monetary base against 75 per cent in gold.

SHIPMENTS BALKED

The Treasury was told three shipments of speculative silver, totaling several million ounces, was reported in New York. All three were consigned to London.

Treasury officials said the purpose of the embargo is to keep silver within the United States and to prevent speculators from profiting by the government's silver stabilization program.

BUYING DECLINES

Notwithstanding a gain in silver coin circulation, Federal Reserve Board figures today indicated a slow but steady decline in operations of the silver program throughout June, with a drop of $41,000,000 between June 6 and June 27.

It had been the belief of certain of the silver bloc in Congress that the purchase of silver by the Treasury and the issuance of silver certificates against the metal would bring about an expansion of currency or a type of inflation.

There has been a considerable gain in the amount of silver coin circulation. However, the amount of silver certificates outstanding June 26 was $493,197,000 compared with $494,337,000 June 1.

Officials pointed out that silver certificates will be forced into circulation in large amounts during the coming month as the Treasury carries out its new program. However, except for the normal increase in circulation that is due in July, silver certificates going into circulation will force other types of money, chiefly Federal Reserve notes, back into the Treasury and Reserve banks.

STRIKE PARADE AT HOSPITAL

Forty nutrition department workers, men and women, paraded around West Penn Hospital while police looked on this afternoon, to emphasize their demand for restoration of wage cuts.

The strikers, who walked out today, contended all of 90 workers in the kitchen were out except eight. Hospital authorities said only half of the total number quit.

M. H. Eichenlaub, superintendent, offered to pay off the paraders, but they refused. They say they are paid $26.25 a month with board and room. They demand restoration of the peak wage of $45 a month.

the fact that his life was insured for $5,000.

OTHER EXECUTIONS are at hand. Today Kansas City hanged Paul K. Kaufmann, thirty-five-year-old, frequently-married war veteran and song writer. He killed a seventeen-year-old farm girl under unpleasant conditions.

The Alabama Supreme Court rejects the appeal of two Negroes, Patterson and Norris, in the Scottsboro case, and they probably will hang in August, although one of the two women in the case recanted her testimony, and swore that the story that sends the young Negroes to their death was made up by her and the other woman.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is said to have told his subordinates, high and low, old style and new "brain trust" style, not to talk politics while he is away on his trip to the Virgin Islands and Hawaii.

The President's order is wise. If all the different brains recently and suddenly injected into politics began arguing all together some of them might contradict each other.

THE DILLINGER mystery grows more mysterious. Tod Riley, a Dillinger friend caught by the police, declares solemnly and "crosses his heart and hopes to die," that Dillinger is dead. Another says he recently talked with Dillinger at a baseball game, and Dillinger is not dead at all.

ON GERMAN residences you read the sign "this entrance for ladies and gentlemen only," which means "lower classes, tradesmen, etc., use another entrance."

Nazi storm troops have been tearing down such signs, asking:

"Were workers who died in the war for the Fatherland not gentlemen?"

The sign "tradesmens' entrance" appear also in this glorious republic, and you will see it for a long time probably. It is no insult and you would not bring ice through the front entrance.

ALUMINUM CO. WELCOMES QUIZ

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—The Aluminum Company of America said it welcomed any investigation of its past practices or any charges of unfair competition as is expected to be conducted under the code for the aluminum industry signed by Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator.

At the same time the so-called independent group of aluminum fabricators, those who must buy aluminum ingots from the Aluminum Company of America, a Mellon concern, challenged Johnson to explain to the "housewives of America" his approval of a code "entrenching this monopoly."

A statement by Roy A. Hunt, president of the Aluminum Company, said:

"We are glad Gen. Johnson invited investigation in his comments in signing the code, since it gives us opportunity to publicly defend ourselves against unfair attacks such as have repeatedly been made against us."

TWO BROTHERS ON SEA HOP

HARBOR GRACE, Newfoundland, June 29.—(AP.)—Benjamin and Joseph Adamowicz, aviation's adventurous brothers, swung into the eastern sky shortly after dawn on their projected trans-Atlantic flight to Warsaw, Poland, their ancestral home.

The wind was light and from the West, and the weather clear as they hopped from Harbor Grace airport at 4:58 a. m. daylight time.

Ahead, along the North Atlantic seaway, lay favorable weather. A report from New York, which arrived as they warmed the motor of their plane, predicted favorable conditions all the way across.

It was in the nature of a comeback—this flight to Warsaw—and the brothers were confident of reaching their goal.

BANK PROBERS INDICT 13 IN DETROIT

Charges Grew Out of Collapse of Giant Financial Houses

DETROIT, June 29.—(AP.)—The federal grand jury investigating the collapse of Detroit's two major banking institutions last year today returned 13 indictments.

Those indicted were Robert O. Lord, John Ballantyne, John H. Hart, Donald N. Sweeny and James L. Walsh, all of Detroit; Alex Robertson, of Ionia; Joseph H. Brewer, of Grand Rapids; Charles S. Campbell, of Kalamazoo; Earl H. Shepherd, Kalamazoo; Herbert L. Crittenden, Detroit; John Bodde, Detroit; Alvin N. Crimmins, Grand Rapids, and Stephen A. Graham, Port Huron.

The indictments charge mainly the making of false reports or conspiring to make false statements of condition.

Probably the most prominent of the men indicted are Ballantyne, the dean of Detroit bankers, who was president of the Detroit Bankers' Company and chairman of the board of the First National-Detroit for a time; Lord, who was president and an organizer of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., and Brewer, who was president of the Grand Rapids National Bank, a Guardian group unit.

Sweeney and Chittenden are former presidents of the First Nation Bank-Detroit. Walsh formerly was executive vice president of the Guardian Group, which controlled 32 Michigan banks. Hart was executive vice president of the First National. Bodde also was an executive of that bank.

BANDANNA GANG MEMBER FREE

Prison doors are to open soon for Raymond Dugan, member of the once notorious "Blue Bandanna" gang.

He was ordered freed on parole by the Prison Board at Harrisburg today, according to an Associated Press dispatch. His release awaits action by the trustees of Western Penitentiary.

The 30-year-old former gangster has served nine years of an 18-to-36-year sentence for robbing and second degree murder, growing out of the slaying of William Flynn, Homewood bartender, during a holdup in 1925.

Albert Carelli, reputed leader of the gang, serving a 27-to-54-year sentence for robbery, has a petition pending before the pardon board for release on parole. Once sentenced to die in the electric chair, he was pardoned by Gov. Pinchot, but later sentenced on the robbery charge.

LION SIGHTED, STILL FREE

ERIE, Pa., June 29.—(AP.)—To borrow a quaint phrase of the old Romans, Erie's lion hunt is very much in status quo.

That is to say, Leo still is bobbing up around the countryside, and just as far as ever in front of his state-police pursuers.

It's a case of just one report and one hunt after another, with the pursuers always returning lionless.

J. T. Carr, of Albion, a Bessemer Railroad conductor, is the latest to join the "I-Saw-the-Lion" Club. He told state police he sighted the elusive Mr. Leo between Albion and Conneaut, O., some 30 miles from the scene of preceding searches.

Charter members in the club are an Erie couple who broke into print with their seeing the lion on their front lawn several days ago. Since then, various others have reported running across it. The lion is believed to be one which escaped recently from a circus near Erie.

Dillinger Gangster Gets 25-Year Term

GREENCASTLE, Ind., June 29.—(INS.)—Harry Copeland, 38, a member of the John Dillinger gang, was sentenced to serve 25 years in the Indiana State Prison by Judge Wilbur S. Donner in Putnam Circuit Court here today after Copeland pleaded guilty to a bank robbery here.

Copeland admitted he was the first of the six bandits to enter the Central National Bank & Trust Company here on October 23, 1933 when John Dillinger led the raid on the bank which netted $74,782.09 in loot.

Rum for Students O. K., Catholic Educator Says

CHICAGO, June 29.—(AP.)—Trying to prevent Catholic high school students from drinking, smoking or getting home from dances at 1 or 3 o'clock in the morning was characterized as "perfectly silly," by the Rev. Leo C. Gainor, a Dominican priest in charge of education at the Dominican High School in suburban Oak Park. He told the National Catholic Education Association:

"We don't care whether or not our Catholic students drink, smoke or stay late at dances. It's perfectly silly to try and stop them from doing any of these things. It's perfectly normal for them to do them."

Father Gainor hastened to add that "while we know boys and girls will smoke and drink, we must teach them the age old Catholic doctrine of moderation in all things."

Bishop Francis W. Hoard, of Covington, Ky., was re-elected president-general of the association. Others re-elected were: Vice presidents, Most Rev. John B. Peterson, Manchester, N. H.; Very Rev. James A. Burns, Notre Dame, Ind., and Rt. Rev. Msgr. William P. McNally, Philadelphia; secretary, Rev. George Johnson, associate education professor at Catholic University, Washington, and treasurer, Rt. Rev. Msgr. John J. Bonner, Philadelphia.

61 Pct. Back Roosevelt, According to Poll

NEW YORK, June 28.—Semifinal returns in the Literary Digest's poll on the question, "Do you approve on the whole the acts and policies of Roosevelt's first year?" shows 61 per cent of the replies favorable to the President's administration.

Vermont was the only state returning an adverse majority. In that state there were 2,970 unfavorable replies against 2,557 indorsing the President's first year.

To date the publication has received 1,508,861 replies, with 920,357 favorable and 588,504 unfavorable.

The replies to the questions, by states, shows:

	Yes.	No.
Ohio	63,961	42,794
Pennsylvania	81,240	50,523
West Virginia	9,813	5,785

	Yes.	No.
Lawyers	16,869	14,785
Clergy	12,318	10,089

BORN 160 YEARS AGO, TURK CLAIMED

Survived Taxi Injury In U. S., Spaghetti In Italy

International News Service.

ISTANBUL, June 29. — Zaro Agha, the aged Turk who claimed that he was born in 1774, two years before the start of the American Revolution, died today in the Childrens' Hospital here.

Zaro's last days were spent not in the fear of death but in the fear that people would not believe he had achieved the record of longevity which he claimed—160 years.

Zaro Agha visited the United States in 1930. He was hailed by prohibitionists as a remarkable example of what might be achieved by life-long abstinence from intoxicating liquors which in his case had been adhered to by pious conformance with the rules of the Koran.

EXAMINED IN U. S.

Many American doctors examined him, and while all admitted that he was very old, few were convinced that his age exceeded a century and one-half. As was said to be attested by the birth records of his native Kurdish village, Motkin.

One physician said that he thought Zaro's great age was a possibility and could be accounted for by the fact that he had missed all the diseases of childhood.

Others reported that his pituitary gland evidently functioned abnormally and that this possibly accounted for his many years.

LONE STOMACH ACHE

He once said his only illness was a violent stomach ache in Italy, caused by eating spaghetti.

Zaro claimed to have soldiered again Napoleon in Syria in 1797.

He said he had divorced his eleventh wife at the age of 154 and remarried. Although living in a polygamous country, he claimed that he had always followed the American fashion of having only one wife at a time.

While in New York he even survived being run over by a New York taxi. He was up and around in two weeks.

GIRL'S SLAYER DIES BY NOOSE

KANSAS CITY, June 29.—(AP.)—Paul H. Kauffman, 35, World War veteran and former minor league baseball player, was hanged in the County Jail here today for the murder of 17-year-old Avis Woolery, of Webb City, Mo., whom he lured to Kansas City and attacked in Swope Park four years ago. His home was in Columbia, Pa.

Kauffman protested his innocence, announcing from the scaffold that he expected someone to come forward and save him.

Prior to the first of his two trials he confessed he met the young girl when she arrived from Webb City in response to his advertisement for a nurse-maid, choked her to death in the park after the attack and buried the body in a shallow grave. The body was discovered two months later after Kauffman had been arrested for an offense against another girl.

Calmly awaiting the execution, Kauffman smoked, wrote letters, tried to finish a song he had been writing and recalled his brief baseball career with the Reading club of the International League.

Movie Ambitions Cited in Divorce

Movie ambitions of his wife took her to Hollywood on one of the three occasions on which she left him, it was charged by Fred W. Wimmer, of the Royal Yorke Apartments, in his divorce action against Ann Wimmer.

Mrs. Wimmer brought suit against her husband in April, 1932, testifying he maintained an apartment at $150 monthly out of his $600 income, and entertained lavishly there and in night clubs. The couple separated five years ago.

Wife Defends Premier Against Girl's Charges

'Kiss of Passion' Denied by Brownlee

International News Service.

EDMONTON, Alta., June 29.—Testimony of an Edmonton society woman, distinguished hostess at many official functions as wife of the leader of Alberta's government, today supported her husband's story that he was innocent of the seduction of Vivian MacMillan, 22.

She was Mrs. S. J. E. Brownlee and she told of her great love for Vivian MacMillan who she had looked upon, she testified, as a daughter.

Mrs. Brownlee declared that Miss MacMillan's charge that the Premier had forced the girl to go to his bed at nights while a guest in the Brownlee home was impossible because she was a very light sleeper.

Premier Brownlee, before his wife took the witness stand in Supreme Court, was subjected to a scathing cross-examination.

Miss MacMillan, comely and tall, is co-plaintiff in an action for unstated damages against the Premier on charges of seduction. She is co-defendant with John Caldwell, a medical student, for $10,000 damages brought by the Premier.

Examining Premier Brownlee, Defense Attorney A. L. Smith asked:

"Did you ever kiss Vivian when you were alone?"

"On occasions when I would be leaving my family and Vivian would be there I would kiss her goodby and she would kiss me. I have no recollection of ever having kissed her alone."

"Did you ever give her what could be called a kiss of passion?"

"No."

Asked if at any time he had become intimate with Miss MacMillan, the Premier replied:

"I did not."

Lila Lee Denies Cupid Is Around

CHICAGO, June 29.—(Universal.)—Lila Lee, veteran movie actress and almost an oddity in Hollywood, having been married only once and single for the last five years, has nothing in particular against matrimony, but said when she arrived here yesterday that positively no romance is on the horizon.

This is really news, because, since her divorce from the only husband she ever had, James Kirkwood, Lila has been reported engaged to John Farrow, scenario writer, and George Hill, director.

Easy to Get Initials Jumbled Says 'Bugs' Baer

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Just got a complaint from Washington that we are getting the initials of the recovery codes all scrambled up.

We have given credit to the NRA when it should have PWA, and to the CCC when it was the XLW.

All we can say is that we are too old to learn the alphabet all over again.

And that we hope the initials make some sense.

Mr. Hoover had the thing much more simplified. He ran his entire administration on those jolly call letters SOS.

Plot to Swindle Father Of Dillinger Revealed

International News Service.

MOORESVILLE, Ind., June 29.—John W. Dillinger, respected Quaker father of America's public enemy Number 1, revealed here today that an attempt had been made to swindle him out of his 60-acre farm to pay an alleged $1,300 medical bill for his son to insure further medical treatment for the notorious Hoosier fugitive.

The attempt according to the elder Dillinger was made on June 17 and 18, about a week after the outlaw's father received a letter from his son informing him he was alive and well. The elder Dillinger said:

"A stranger, fairly well dressed, about 60 years old, came here on foot from town and told me he had been sent by Johnnie. The stranger said: 'Johnnie is in a bad way. He's got to have continued medical attention but owes the doctor a bill of $1,300 now. The doctor won't treat him further unless he is paid immediately'."

The senior Dillinger was picking raspberries in a patch on his farm here as he related the incident. He went on:

"I told the fellow I didn't know him. He said if I doubted his word he would take me to John. The fellow pretended to be afraid of Federal men and kept looking around all the time. I told him I couldn't raise the money unless I sold or mortgage my farm. The man then left."

DOOMED MAN SAVES WOMAN FROM CHAIR

band, Salvatore, for his $5,000 insurance money.

Whether Saetta's death house statement was just a gallant gesture to save a woman's life or whether it was the solemn truth, spoken by a man about to die, Gov. Lehman is to decide today. If he finds it false, the three die tonight.

Meanwhile, activity in the prison deathhouse gave several indications that officials do not expect the executions to be ordered for tonight.

While the warden and the condemned Saetta were conferring last night, the frayed nerves of the woman cracked. She fainted, and was revived. Never before, prison keepers said, had an electrocution been so long delayed. Neither Mrs. Antonio nor Feraci knew what was causing the postponement—first of half an hour, then an hour, then two hours.

New hope was born in the 28-year-old woman today, the hope of executive clemency, the hope that she would not be the first woman to die in the electric chair here since the execution of Ruth Brown Snyder with Henry Judd Gray in 1928 for the murder of Albert Snyder.

But for himself, Saetta left none as he told his story of the slaying of Salvatore Antonio.

It was a story of $75 he loaned to Antonio, $75 that was not repaid. They fought with fists over the money, made up, shook hands. But Feraci told Saetta that Antonio had not forgotten.

Then the story was of drinking half a bottle of whisky, of putting a gun on his hip, of going for a drive with Feraci and Antonio, of stopping near Castleton, and killing Antonio.

It was a different story from the state's—a story that Mrs. Antonio hired the two men to slay her husband so that she might collect his $5,000 insurance.

ROOF CLIMBER RESCUED, FINED

Real life stories may be stranger than fiction, but they're also more expensive, John Berry, 24, decided today after he was sentenced to pay $10 or spend two days in jail for emulating detective story characters who climbed over a roof.

Berry had been reading a detective magazine in his room at 300 South Negley avenue yesterday. The characters crawled over roofs. Berry decided, since it was hot in his room, that the idea was a good one.

Going up was easy, he told Magistrate Anthony Lucas in East End Police Court today. But once he got there, he couldn't get down, and he finally was rescued by firemen. He blamed cheap liquor for his predicament and Magistrate Lucas found him guilty on a drunkenness charge.

Father Hunted In Poisoning of Five Children

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., June 29.—Charged with poisoning five of his nine children, one of whom is dead, Howard Sipolt, 33, relief worker, of near St. George, Tucker County, was being sought today by State Trooper D. A. Skidmore, of Elkins, and Sheriff Sylvanus Harper, of Parsons.

Investigation showed, officers said, that Sipolt had come to Parsons about two weeks ago and bought a box of tablets containing deadly poison.

According to officials of Davis Memorial Hospital, at Elkins, who examined the dead child's body, a trace of this same poison was found in the child's stomach.

The dead child is Gladys Sipolt, 12. Four younger children in the family also became ill, but all of them are believed today to be recovering.

Gladys had been ill several days, officers said. She died yesterday.

Not suspecting poison, and unable to diagnose the girl's illness, the attending physician at first thought she had been made ill by contaminated milk.

AUNT, 10, SAVES BOY IN FALL

Anthony Grech, 5, was in Allegheny General Hospital today suffering from head injuries that might have proved immediately fatal had he not been caught by his 10-year-old aunt, as he fell from a second-story window.

The child had been left in the care of his aunt, Elizabeth, 10, while his mother, Mrs. Mary Grech went to see a doctor. Elizabeth went to another part of the Grech home at 1105 Spring Garden avenue to do some sweeping and when she returned she found the door to the kitchen locked.

"Tony" had slipped the bolt. Running downstairs, Elizabeth saw the child leaning out of the kitchen window. She called to him to stay there, but he had lost his balance and fell. Elizabeth caught him and broke the fall.

BISHOP FLAYS ROOSEVELTS

UTICA, N. Y., June 29. — "The Living Church," a periodical of the Episcopal Church, published in Milwaukee, prints a letter in its current issue by the Right Rev. Charles Fiske, bishop of central New York, in which he criticises marital rifts in the family of President Roosevelt.

The letter to the editor of the publication, printed in the correspondence department, says in part:

"Since no one else has said it publicly, and it seems to many of us that it needs to be said, let me give brief expression to our sense of shame and humiliation that in the family of our Chief Executive there should be recorded two Reno divorces, with one 'remarriage' and another in the offing, in a year.

" . . . It seems to us to be a family disgrace, a disgrace to the nation and a disgrace to the church of which the family are members and in which they are occasional worshippers."

V. F. W. Commander Hurt in Auto Crash

SAN DIEGO, Cal., June 29.—(AP.)—James E. Van Zandt, of Altoona, Pa., national commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, received minor injuries when an automobile in which he and his party were traveling sidewiped another machine at Torrey Pines yesterday, police reported.

Van Zandt was reported to have received a fractured nose.

NOTED DIAMOND TO STAY WITH ASTOR GEMS

'Jack' Tells Disposition Of 'Empress Eugenie' On Wedding Eve

NEWPORT, R. I., June 29.—(AP.)—The Empress Eugenie diamond "will remain with the Astor jewels."

By a simple statement, John Jacob Astor III cleared away the cloud of uncertainty which has hovered over that diamond since Eileen Gillespie returned it after breaking her engagement to him.

With Ellen Tuck French, who was to have been Eileen's bridesmaid, but will become his bride, Astor will rehearse his wedding late today.

Tomorrow at 4 p. m. a string of incidents that kept whole towns talking will have their climax on the actual wedding.

WEDDING WITH DRAMA

Seldom outside book covers—and probably never within range of Newport's cliff walks and 10-mile drive—has there been more drama in a wedding.

A four-story mansion, a young millionaire, a 32-carat diamond and a handsom apology—a story that in its wide ramifications includes an Italian boxer and the Titanic disaster.

But it was a self-possessed "Jack" Astor who faced a press conference yesterday at "Chetwode," his new estate, conducted the visitors through his house and showed them the wedding gifts.

SHOWS NERVOUSNESS

Twice he showed slight nervousness and took short excursions around the paneled dining room, where the visitors sat around a big table. He was asked:

"How many persons have been invited to your wedding reception?"

"About 200."

"What wedding music will be played?"

"Traditional wedding marches—Lohengrin going in, and Mendelssohn leaving the church."

He also disclosed that he "plans to learn some business, and later establish a business of my own," that he attended St. George's School, class of 1932, and that he gave his bride-to-be, as wedding gifts, "an automobile and small pieces of jewelry."

Enzo (The Frenzo) Will Shun Astor Nuptials

NEW YORK, June 29.—(INS.)—With the declaration that high society life is the least of his interests, Enzo Fiermonte, pugilist husband of Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor Dick Fiermonte, announced today he would not attend the wedding tomorrow of his step-son, John Jacob Astor III.

He said:

"I don't care that for it."

The "that" was accomplished by a snap of the Fiermonte fingers.

Fiermonte's wife is the mother of young Astor. Mrs. Fiermonte will attend the wedding if possible, although she has been ill at her Westhampton, L. I., estate, but her handsome boxer-husband made it clear that if she goes, he will not be by her side.

Harold F. M'Cormick To Take Opera Reins

CHICAGO, June 29. — (AP.) — Harold F. McCormick, formerly, with his late wife, Edith Rockefeller McCormick, one of the leading guarantors of the Chicago Grand Opera Companies, is returning to the helm of civic opera.

It became known today he had consented to become president of the Chicago Opera Company—the once proud post of Samuel Insull, and more recently of George Woodruff, banker, who has resigned.

LEECH FARM QUIZ REPORT ASSAILED

Explaining her failure to sign the report of an investigating committee on Leech Farm, city tuberculosis hospital, Mrs. Helen Ehrenfeld today charged statements of farm employes were discarded in favor of those of officials during the probe, results of which were made public yesterday.

The report which Mrs. Ehrenfeld refused to sign, commended as unbiased by Dr. Roy P. Moyer, city health director, gave the hospital a clean bill on 10 complaints with the comment that "the institution compares favorably with any other hospital in the city."

Upholding the hospital proper, but condemning surrounding conditions, Mrs. Ehrenfeld made known her stand in an exclusive interview with the Sun-Telegraph. She said:

"I couldn't see a thing wrong with the medical help at the farm. The hospital was clean and the food excellent. But should City Council hear what the committee heard, I think they would demand some changes."

OUT-OF-TOWNERS HIRED

Chief among Mrs. Ehrenfeld's complaints is the employ of nurses, maids and other help from other cities and states, and of unnaturalized citizens. She declared:

"One nurse is from New York, another from Canada. And some employes are not naturalized. There are 16 nurses in all and the majority of them are not from this city. This is a direct violation of a city ordinance. The only hospital exempt is that at Mayview, and that only because of the special training required for mental care."

In agreement with Dr. Moyer, Mrs. Ehrenfeld decried residence by friends and relatives of employes at city expense and revealed that the resignation of Miss Jane Quary, head nurse, has been suggested by the health director over the issue.

IN-LAW ON VISIT

She said:

"Miss Quary herself has had relatives there from 10 to 14 days, and she gave permission to one employe to have her brother from New Mexico there during his vacation.

"Also, the farm boss' father-in-law was living with him. I asked Dr. Shilen about it (Dr. Joseph Shilen, superintendent) and he explained that when the farmer's baby came his wife needed help around the house—but I learned that the baby is now 18 months old and the father-in-law was still there when we came. Dr. Shilen also has a nephew living with him."

Miss Quary's resignation was asked, according to the committeewoman, "because she gave permissions for visiting relatives over Dr. Shilen's head." The suggestion was made, she said, in the presence of the committee.

DRINKING SPELLS

A third point which roused Mrs. Ehrenfeld's ire was employ of maids in the superintendent's home. She pointed out:

"Dr. Shilen has two steady maids, and a third girl goes on duty at 11 p. m. to take care of his children in case they wake up and cry during the night."

Bringing up charges of intoxication, she continued:

"We learned an employe had gone on drinking spells at different times, so I asked Miss Burling (Edith Burling, night superindent) who replaced him in those instances. She said she made his rounds herself."

EMPLOYES COMPLAIN

Majority of the complaints which led to the investigation came from employes, Mrs. Ehrenfeld said, adding:

"There were a number from patients, too. Not about care, however. We didn't get any complaints from patients during our visit, but I know Dr. Moyer has some. These doctors (the two other members of the committee) said you couldn't browbeat patients, but I claim you can browbeat charity patients—I know of it having been done at other institutions."

About 22 employes were questioned during the committee's two-day examination, she said. Comprising the committee were Mrs. Ehrenfeld, Dr. Brown Fulton and Dr. Ralph Harrison.

'FRIENDLY SPAT'

Declining to discuss other charges, including a "friendly" spat between an employe and a girl, and a wrestling match, also found "friendly" by the committee, Mrs. Ehrenfeld declared:

"They're up to Council. Council can have the names of all those questioned from me, and I challenge Dr. Fulton and Dr. Harrison to turn over their notes on the questioning to Council."

In making his announcement of the hospital's clean bill yesterday, Dr. Moyer said a definite policy for administration of Leech Farm and the Municipal Hospital was being formulated.

Herschberger, Grid Hero, Held Insane

CHICAGO, June 29.—(AP.)—Clarence B. Herschberger, 57, football hero at the University of Chicago in the '90's, today was adjudged insane and committed to a hospital for treatment.

Judge Winn G. Knoch, sitting in the Cook County Psychopathic Court, found that Herschberger suffered from dementia precox as a result of a nervous breakdown, but would recover with proper treatment.

Water Main Breaks, Blocks Pride Street

A broken water main at Pride street and Boulevard of the Allies last night blocked traffic on Pride street and forced suspension of water service to the internes' home of Mercy Hospital nearby. The hospital's facilities were not affected. The break was repaired in 15 minutes.

CHANGES URGED FOR SPEEDING UP COURTS

WERNERSVILLE, Pa., June 29.—Changes in the law to simplify Criminal Court procedure and an attack upon the minor judiciary were suggested in open meeting here at the fortieth annual session of the Pennsylvania State Bar Association. The convention closed today after electing Forrest Moorhead, of Beaver, president. The feature of the convention was the annual banquet last night at which Judge Frank M. Trexler, of the Superior Court, was the principal speaker.

A committee on criminal law suggested legislation to provide for trial by a judge without a jury with the consent of the defendant in many cases not involving higher felonies. It was also advocated that the judge question prospective jurors and further that the court and counsel be permitted to comment adversely upon the failure of a defendant to offer himself as a witness.

No definite action was taken on the suggestion that the office of Coroner be abolished and the coroner's duties be given over to the district attorney. The association generally agreed with the committee that the system of aldermen and justices of the peace is not adapted to present day conditions and it is subject to many grave abuses. The committee reported that the fountain of justice should not be polluted at its source.

The committee on civil law has expressed its disapproval to the suggestion that courts and judicial districts be consolidated and many rural judgeships thus be abolished. The committee, of which George E. Alter, of Pittsburgh, is chairman, reported:

"A reduction in the number of judges would result, but those assigned to the less populous counties would have much territory to cover, and would be kept skipping from pillar to post. To offset this increased activity higher salaries would have to be paid and while there would be less judges, there would be little or no saving."

FISHERMAN DIES IN BOAT UPSET

A fishing trip on the Allegheny River, north of Foxburg, today had ended in tragedy for John Van, 55, of 6731 Rowan street.

A skiff in which Van and his companions, William Rittler, 28, of 237 Steuben street, and Fred Holtman, 44, of 207 Shetland, were rowing across the river capsized and Van, wearing laced rubber boots and heavy trousers, sank.

His companions swam to safety. The body has been recovered. Van leaves his widow and several children.

Youths Smash Pane, Flee With Jewels

Three youths, who hurled a brick through a window in the jewelry store of Isaac Goldzer, of 1424 Beaver avenue, and scooped up jewels valued at $100, were being sought today by North Side police.

U.S. DENOUNCES REICH ON DEBT MORATORIUM

WASHINGTON, June 29—(AP.)—The United States protested today against Germany's moratorium on $1,500,000,000 in obligations held by Americans, blaming the reich's financial plight on Nazi politices.

Secretary of State Hull handed the German charge d'affairs a note last night which said:

"The German government is no doubt aware that its policies have created opposition in many parts of the world which has expressed itself in various trade conflicts and the probable reduction of Germany's capacity to transfer."

It was the first American move in a diplomatic campaign to modify drastic provisions in the moratorium whereby Germany suspended interest payments on external debts.

Hull did not mention anti-Jewish measures which have brought boycotts on German goods, but observers agreed his note was broad enough to include such policies.

Berlin Studies U. S. Note, Warns Against Boycott

BERLIN, June 29.—(AP.)—A warning that a boycott on German goods would only force this country toward complete economic independence came today while officials studied a United States note protesting the debt moratorium and blaming Nazi policies for it.

The government, a high official indicated, will take its own good time to study the note before deciding on a reply. No indication has yet been given the Nazi press as to how to interpret Secretary of State Hull's declaration.

Rudolph Hess, minister without portfolio, told a meeting of German chambers of commerce abroad:

"It has already been evidenced that a boycott by foreign countries carries a double-edged sword, and Jews, for prompting such boycotts, are bringing threats of economic injury to the individual countries whose hospitality they enjoy."

Criticizing what he called efforts to interfere with the domestic situation of the Third Reich, Hess said the German people could "restrict their use of foreign products until substitute products are available."

Experts started studying the Hull note last night.

Europe Will Pay If U. S. Stands Pat, Says Borah

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Europe's governmental debts to the United States will be paid eventually, if America refuses to cancel them, Senator William E. Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, predicted today.

In an interview on his sixty-ninth birthday, celebrated after 27 years in the Senate, Borah in response to questions, made these observations:

America's debts will be paid because the great nations of Europe cannot let history record their repudiation.

The next great phrase in America's economic development will be a sane redistribution of wealth.

Prohibition may return unless the states master the problem of controlling the liquor traffic.

Political racketeers are getting into politics because the better element of our people refuse to run for public office.

On the question of foreign debts, Borah said:

"Eventual settlement of the debt situation depends largely upon the attitude of our government. If we stand firmly for payment, payments, in my judgment, will be made.

"These great countries are not going to move down the years with repudiation written across their records. When it becomes clear that there is to be no cancellation, in my opinion, there will be payments. They are not going to make a decree of moral bankruptcy from the world's court of public opinion."

On the redistribution of wealth, he said:

"What the next phase in America's economic development may be, one may only guess. It should be and, everyone who loves his country hopes it will be, is a more equitable distribution of wealth, a just distribution of those things which make for the comforts and pleasures of life. It has been estimated that four percent of our people own eighty percent of our wealth.

"Free government, personal liberty, economic freedom are impossible under such circumstances. Our institutions, our whole scheme of civilization depends upon a more equitable distribution of wealth—not through violence or a system of repudiation, but through laws and policies which will compel a better sharing of those who make the wealth of the country with those who possess it."

On the return of prohibition, he said:

"If the present trend with reference to the liquor traffic continues long, the revolt may go so far as to restore prohibition. For myself, I should like to see an effort made to deal with the problem through the states, the national government acting with vigilance and persistency under the Twenty-first Amendment to protect the dry states."

HITLER DEFIED IN 'WAR' OF TROOPS

BERLIN, June 29.—(AP.)—In defiance of Chancellor Hitler's policy of moderation, the supreme command of the militant Nazi Storm Troops issued a second statement today voting political death to the Steel Helmet Veterans' Association.

Ill feeling between the Storm Troops and the Stahlheim, or Steel Helmets, broke into the open recently when a Storm Trooper was stabbed in Pomerania. Hitler firmly rejected a Storm Troop demand for dissolution of the veterans' organization.

The latest Storm Troop blast charged high Steel Helmet officials were responsible for the violence and concluded ominiously, "Neither those taking part in or those responsible for this political deed can shake off its political consequences."

It apparently was inspired by the radical section of the Nazi party, whose strength is indicated by its success on the Jewish and church issues.

The statement indicated there would be no peace until the conservatives are eliminated. The Steel Helmet group is considered the most powerful instrument in the hands of the conservatives.

A decisive struggle between the two camps appears inevitable.

The storm trooper statement definitely washed out, in the view of observers, efforts of Vice Chancellor von Papen and Gen. Werner von Blomberg, minister of defense, last night to convince the world that all is well within the Third Reich.

TERROR REIGN CONTINUES IN AUSTRIA

VIENNA, June 29.—(AP.)—Bombs continued to pop throughout Austria today as terrorists carred on without a sign of abatement destruction of bridges, power lines and railways.

Railroad tracks were torn up by a dynamite blast between Leikendorf and Hirtenberg, south of Vienna. Another railway line was blasted between Neuberg and Muerzzuschlag, south of the popular mountain resort of Semmering.

Near Seeboden, in Carinthia, an explosion ripped out a highway bridge. In Vellach, also in Carinthia, the home of a pro-government political leader was bombed and one man was injured seriously.

Terrorists dropped charges into the water reservoirs in Tyrol, and in the same province three masts supporting high tension electric lines were blown up.

At Graz, residents this morning were awakened by a dynamite blast which blew up the stone bridge on Elizabeth street.

Rocks were hurled great distances and hundreds of windows of nearby buildings were shattered.

Numerous other bombings were reported.

ROTARY HEARS PEACE PLEA

DETROIT, June 29.—(AP.)—Bishop James E. Freeman, of Washington, D. C., urged Rotary International today to do everything within its power to promote world peace and remove the causes of war.

He proposed particularly, in an address to the organization's international convention, that no quarter be given in an attack on munition makers why "ply theri trade and increase their profits through a well-conceived propaganda of fear and suspicion." He said:

"They are as gailty of malign conspiracy against all that has to do with humun interests as was Judas Iscariot, who basely sold his Lord for 30 paltry pieces of silver."

Plot to Kill Coolidge On Cuban Visit Bared

HAVANA, June 29.—(AP.)—United States secret service agents were accused by a Cuban attorney today of having two men slain to foil the plotted assassination of President Coolidge in 1928.

Heliodoro Gil, counsel in a murder trial, described the alleged plot and its outcome in developing an alibi for six men charged with killing the two principals.

Gil said secret service men in Havana a month before Mr. Coolidge arrived learned of a plot to shoot the American President from an apartment opposite the presidential palace.

With the aid of police of former President Machado, of Cuba, Gil continued, they arrested Claudio Bouzon, a Spaniard, and Nosko Yalob, Russian, who had rented the apartment. Both were known radicals.

A few days later Bouzon's right arm was found inside a shark caught by fishermen, indicating he had been killed and tossed into the sea. Yalob apparently met a similar fate. The United States operatives were responsible, he said.

FRANCE FACES DEFLATION ISSUE

PARIS, June 29.—(AP.)—Devaluation of the franc was bluntly presented the government as a paramount issue today despite almost 100 per cent gold coverage of the currency.

Paul Reynaud, former minister of finance, raised the problem in a speech yesterday to the Chamber of Deputies in which he said: "Either prices or the franc must come down."

Replying for the government, Louis Germain-Martin, minister of finance, said "we intend to stand by the franc." To devalue would mean "systematic bankruptcy," he said.

PORTUGAL ASKS NAZI APOLOGY

International News Service.

BERLIN, June 29.—The Portuguese legation formally protested to the foreign office today concerning an attack upon Gen. Council Ribiero Demelo by uniformed Nazi storm troopers near Nauen.

The stormers' version of the attack is that Gen. Demelo drove his automobile into a Nazi parade. The Portuguese legation, however, insists that Demelo was attacked solely because of his swarthy appearance.

AUTO INJURIES FATAL TO BOY

Four-year-old Steve Wargo, of 226 Perry street, McKeesport, was dead today from injuries suffered when he was struck by a truck at Dale and Ann streets, McKeesport, Monday.

Mrs. Clifton O. Hill, of 5144 Cypress street, and A. G. Lehman, of 345 South Atlantic avenue, were injured last night when an automobile driven by Mrs. Hill's husband and another owned by Lehman collided at Friendship avenue and Harriet street, police reported.

Beatrice Monahan, 5, of 518 Taylor avenue, North Side, suffered cuts and bruises when she was struck by an automobile in West North avenue last night.

William Matthews, 24, of 527 Gold street, and John Robertson, 2[illegible], of 513 Heisel street, both of Homestead, were injured when the truck in which they were riding collided with another at Fifth and Grady avenues last night, according to police.

Struck by a truck at South Dallas avenue and Lynn way late yesterday, Richard Moorehead, 7, of 6825 McPherson avenue, was taken to Pittsburgh Hospital.

De Valera Triumphs In Local Elections

DUBLIN, June 29.—(AP.)—Unofficial tabulation in the Irish Free State local elections today give the Fianna Fail, President De Valera's party, a plurality of 100 seats in county councils.

Thus far it appears that members of the Fianna Fail have won 4[illegible]1 seats; members of the Fine Gael, headed by Gen. Eoin O'Duffy, have gained 381; Labor candidates, 146, and others, 298.

Stamp to Combine Special Delivery, Air

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—Postmaster General Farley yesterday announced a combination air mail and special delivery stamp would be issued.

Details of design and date of issue have not been decided, but Farley said the new stamp likely would be in the 16-cent denomination, including the six cents for the new air mail rate after July 1, and 10 cents for the special delivery.

Hungarians Plan Verhovay Meeting

National officers and directors of the Verhovay Aid Association, with a large Hungarian membership in Western Pennsylvania, will meet at the headquarters, Standard Life Building, July 9. President Joseph Darago, of Akron, O.; Secretary John Bencze and Treasurer M. J. Baraga are outlining plans for the meeting.

Army Lets Order For 81 Bombers

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—The War Department today awarded a contract for the purchase of 81 bombing planes to the Glenn L. Martin Company, Baltimore, for $3,195,450.

A contract for 280 airplane engines was given the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, Paterson, N. J., for $1,705,733.

TEXT OF ROOSEVELT SPEECH PLEDGING WIDER NEW DEAL

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's address of last night:

It has been several months since I have talked with you concerning the problems of government. Since January, those of us in whom you have rested responsibility have been engaged in the fulfillment of plans and policies which had been widely discussed in previous months. It seemed to us our duty not only to make the right path clear, but also to tread that path.

As we review the achievements of this session of the Seventy-third Congress, it is made increasingly clear that its task was essentially that of completing and fortifying the work it had begun in March, 1933. That was no easy task, but the Congress was equal to it. It has been well said that while there were a few exceptions this Congress displayed a greater freedom from mere partisanship than any other peace-time Congress since the administration of President Washington himself. The session was distinguished by the extent and variety of legislation enacted and by the intelligence and goodwill of debate upon these measures.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT PICTURED BEFORE T,HE MICROPHONE FOR HIS TALK LAST NIGHT

MAJOR ENACTMENTS

I mention only a few of the major enactments. It provided for the readjustment of the debt burden through the corporate and municipal bankruptcy acts and the farm relief act. It lent a hand to industry by encouraging loans to solvent industries unable to secure adequate help from banking institutions. It strengthened the integrity of finance through the regulation of securities exchanges. It provided a rational method of increasing our volume of foreign trade through reciprocal trading agreements.

It strengthened our naval forces to conform with the intentions and permission of existing treaty rights. It made further advances toward peace in industry through the labor adjustment act. It supplemented our agricultural policy through measures widely demanded by farmers themselves and intended to avert price destroying supluses. It strengthened the hand of the federal government in its attempts to suppress gangster crime.

It took definite steps toward a national housing program through an act which I signed today designed to encourage private capital in the rebuilding of the homes of the nation. It created a permanent federal body for the just regulation of all forms of communication, including the telephone, the telegraph and radio.

MONETARY SYSTEM

Finally, and I believe most important, it recognized, simplified and made more fair and just our monetary system, setting up standards and policies adequate to meet the necessities of modern, economic life, doing justice to both gold and silver as the metal bases behind the currency of the United States.

In the consistent development of our previous efforts toward the saving and safeguarding of our national life, I have continued to recognize three related steps:

The first was relief, because the primary concern of any government dominated by the humane ideals of democracy is the simple principle that in a land of vast resources no one should be permitted to starve. Relief was and continues to be our first consideration. It calls for large expenditures and will continue in modified form to do so for a long time to come. We may as well recognize that fact.

It comes from the paralysis that arose as the aftermath of that unfortunate decade characterized by a mad chase for unearned riches and an unwillingness of leaders in almost every walk of life to look beyond their own schemes and speculations.

In our administration of relief we follow two principles: First, that direct giving shall, wherever possible, be supplemented by provision for useful and remunerative work and, second, that where families in their existing surroundings will in all human probability never find an opportunity for full self - maintenance, happiness and enjoyment, we will try to give them a new chance in new surroundings.

RECOVERY STEP

The second step was recovery, and it is sufficient for me to ask each and every one of you to compare the situation in agriculture aand in industry today with what it was 15 months ago.

At the same time we have recognized the necessity of reform and reconstruction—reform because much of our trouble today and in the past few years has been due to a lack of understanding of the elementary principles of justice and fairness by those in whom leadership in business and finance was placed — reconstruction because new conditions in our economic life as well as old, but neglected conditions had to be corrected.

Substantial gains, well known to all of you, have justified our course. I could cite statistics to you as unanswerable measures of our national progress—statistics to show the gain in the average weekly pay envelope of workers in the great majority of industries — statistics to show hundreds of thousands re-employed in private industries and other hundreds of thousands given new employment through the expansion of direct and indirect government assistance of many kinds, although, of course, there are those exceptions in professional pursuits whose economic improvement, of necessity, will be delayed.

I also could cite statistics to show the great rise in the value of farm products—statistics to prove the demand for consumers' goods, ranging all the way from food and clothing to automobiles, and of late to prove the rise in the demand for durable goods—statistics to cover the great increase in bank deposits and to show the scores of thousands of homes and of farms which have been saved from foreclosure.

"ARE YOU BETTER OFF?"

But the simplest way for each of you to judge recovery lies in the plain facts of your own individual situation. Are you better off than you were last year? Are your debts less burdensome? Is your bank account more secure? Are your working conditions better? Is your faith in your own individual future more firmly grounded?

Also, let me put to you another simple question: Have you as an individual paid too high a price for these gains? Plausible self-seekers and theoretical die-hards will tell you of the loss of individual liberty. Answer this question also out of the facts of your own life. Have you lost any of your rights or liberty or constitutional freedom of action and choice?

Turn to the Bill of Rights of the Constitution, which I have solemnly sworn to maintain and under which your freedom rests secure. Read each provision of that Bill of Rights and ask yourself whether you personally have suffered the impairment of a single jot of these great assurances. I have no question in my mind as to what your answer will be. The record is written in the experiences of your own personal lives.

'DOUBTING THOMASES'

In other words, it is not the overwhelming majority of the farmers or manufacturers or workers who deny the substantial gains of the past year. The most vociferous of the doubting Thomases may be divided roughly into two groups:

First, those who seek special political privilege and, second, those who seek special financial privilege.

About a year ago I used as an illustration the 90 per cent of the cotton manufacturers of the United States who wanted to do the right thing by their employes and by the public but were prevented from doing so by the 10 per cent who undercut them by unfair practices and un-American standards.

It is well for us to remember that humanity is a long way from being perfect and that a selfish minority in every walk of life—farming, business, finance and even government service itself—will always continue to think of themselves first and their fellow-being second.

In the working out of a great national program which seeks the primary good of the greater number, it is true that the toes of some people are being stepped on and are going to be stepped on. But these toes belong to the comparative few who seek to retain or to gain position or riches or both by some short cut which is harmful to the greater good.

PUBLIC SERVICE REWARDS

In the execution of the powers conferred on it by Congress, the administration needs and will tirelessly seek the best ability that the country affords. Public service offers better rewards in the opportunity for service than ever before in our history—not great salaries, but enough to live on.

In the building of this service there are coming to us men and women with ability and courage from every part of the union. The days of the seeking of mere party advantage through the misuse of public power are drawing to a close. We are increasingly demanding and getting devotion to the public service on the part of every member of the administration, high and low.

The program of the past year is definitely in operation and that operation month by month is being made to fit into the web of old and new conditions. This process of evolution is well illustrated by the constant changes in detailed organization and method going on in the National Recovery Administration. With every passing month we are making strides in the orderly handling of the relationship between employes and employers.

FAIR RELATIONSHIPS

Conditions differ, of course, in almost every part of the country. Temporary methods of adttry. Temporary methods of adjustment are being replaced by more permanent machinery and, I am glad to say, by a growing recognition on the part of employers and employes of the desirability of maintaining fair relationships all around.

So also, while almost everybody has recognized the tremendous strides in the elimination of child labor, in the payment of not less than fair minimum wages and in the shortening of hours, we are still feeling our way in solving problems which relate to self-government in industry, especially where such self-government tends to eliminate the fair operation of competition.

In this same process of evolution we are keeping before us the objectives of protecting on the one hand industry against chiselers within its own ranks, and on the other hand, the consumer through the maintenance of reasonable competition for the prevention of the unfair sky-rocketing of retail prices.

SOCIAL INSURANCE

But in addition to this our immediate task, we must still look to the larger future. I have pointed out to the Congress that we are seeking to find the way once more to well-known, long established but to some degree forgotten ideals and values. We seek the security of the men, women and children of the nation.

That security involves added means of providing better homes for the people of the nation. That is the first principle of our future program.

The second is to plan the use of land and water resources of this country to the end that the means of livelihood of our citizens may be more adequate to meet their daily needs.

And, finally, the third principle is to use the agencies of government to assist in the establishment of means to provide sound and adequate protection against the vicissitudes of modern life—in other words, social insurance.

Later in the year I hope to talk with you more fully about these plans.

A few timid people, who fear progress, will try to give you new and strange names for what we are doing. Sometimes they will call it "Fascism," sometimes "Communism," sometimes "Regimentation," sometimes "Socialism." But, in so doing, they are trying to make very complex and theorretical something that is really very simple and very practical.

PRACTICAL POLITICS

I believe in practical explanations and in practical policies. I believe that what we are doing today is a necessary fulfillment of what Americans have always been doing—a fulfillment of old and tested Americal ideals.

Let me give you a simple illustration:

While I am away from Washington this summer, a long-needed renovation of and addition to our White House Office Building is to be started. The architects have planned a few new rooms built into the present all to small one-story structure. We are going to include in this addition and in this renovation modern electric wiring and modern plumbing and modern means of keeping the offices cool in the hot Washington summers. But the structural lines of the old executive office building will remain.

The artistic lines of the White House Building were the creation of master builders when our republic was young. The simplicity and the strength of the structure remain in the face of every modern test. But within this magnificent pattern, the necessities of modern government business require constant reorganization and rebuilding.

HAVE NO SUCH FEARS

If I were to listen to the arguments of some prophets of calamity who are talking these days, I should hesitate to make these alterations. I should fear that while I am away for a few weeks the architects might build some strange new Gothic tower or a factory building or perhaps a replica of the Kremlin or of the Potsdam Palace. But I have no such fears.

The architects and builders are men of common sense and of artistic American lastes. They know that the principles of harmony and of necessity itself require that the building of the new structure shall blend with the essential lines of the old. It is this combination of the old and the new that marks orderly, peaceful progress—not only in building buildings but in building government itself.

Our new structure is a part of and a fulfillment of the old.

HISTORIC TRADITIONS

All that we do seeks to fulfill the historic traditions of the American people. Other nations may sacrifice democracy for the transitory stimulation of old and discredited autocracies. We are restoring confidence and well-being under the rule of the people themselves. We remain, as John Marshall said a century ago, "emphatically and truly, a government of the people." Our government "in form and in substance . . . emanates from them. Its powers are granted by them and are to be exercised directly on them, and for their benefits."

Before I close, I want to tell you of the interest and pleasure with which I look forward to the trip on which I hope to start in a few days. It is a good thing for everyone who can possibly do so to get away at least once a year for a change of scene. I do not want to get into the position of not being able to see the forest because of the thickness of the trees.

I hope to visit our fellow-Americans in Porto Rico, in the Virgin Islands, in the Canal Zone and in Hawaii. And, incidentally, it will give me an opportunity to exchange a friendly word of greeting to the presidents of our sister republics, Haiti and Colombia and Panama.

OVERLAND TOUR

After four weeks on board ship, I plan to land at a port in our Pacific Northwest, and then will come the best part of the whole trip, for I am hoping to inspect a number of our new great national projects on the Columbia, Missouri and Mississippi rivers, to see some of our national parks and, incidentally, to learn much of actual conditions during the trip across the continent back to Washington.

While I was in France during the war our boys used to call the United States "God's country." Let us make it and keep it "God's country."

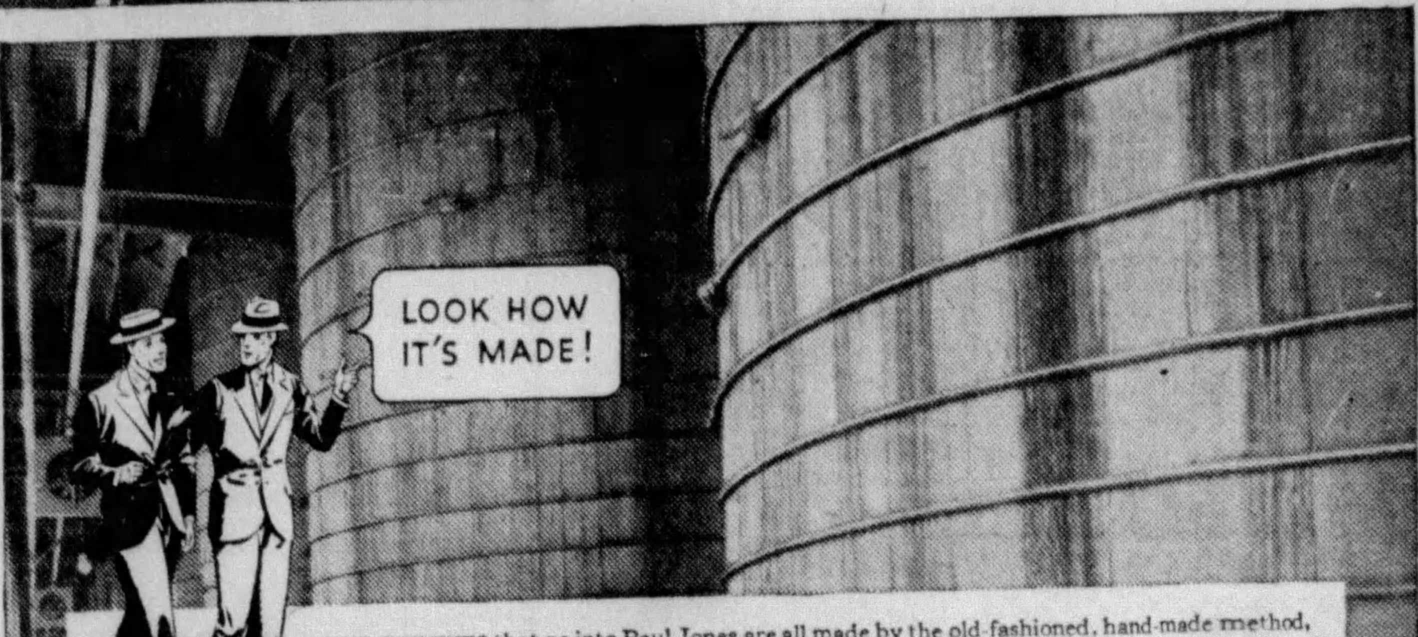
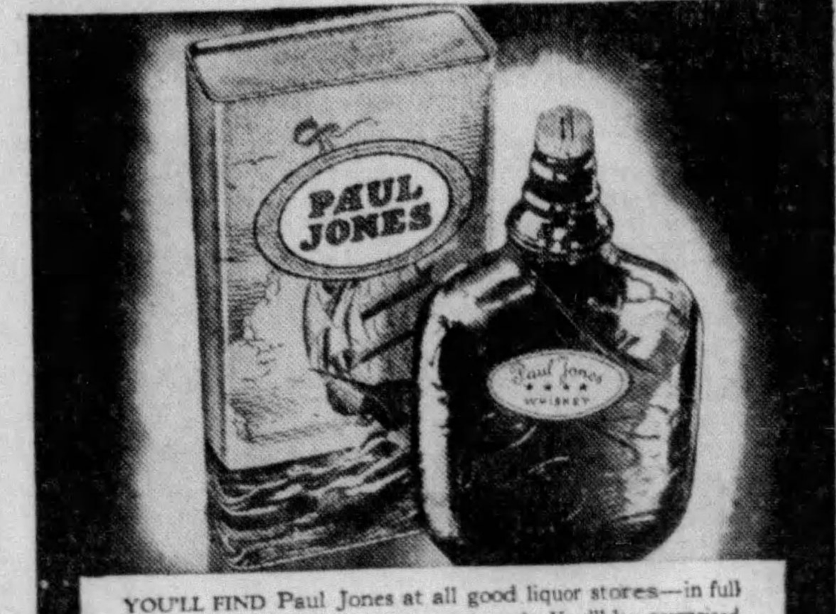
"WHY DON'T YOU GET PAUL JONES—IT'S MUCH BETTER!"

MARYLAND, where the best Rye has always come from—that's where Paul Jones is made. The grain that goes into it is the finest money can buy—plump, perfect rye. The water is the pure Maryland limestone water which generations of experience have proved makes the best whiskey.



THE WHISKIES that go into Paul Jones are all made by the old-fashioned, hand-made method, the only way truly great whiskey can be made. The yeast used is from a culture Frankfort has guarded for 50 years. And into every step in making the whiskey goes Frankfort's four generations of experience.

ALL THE WHISKIES that go into Paul Jones are fully aged in charred oak barrels. No tricks! No wonder Paul Jones is smooth as silk! And if used with discretion, there's no headache in it.



YOU'LL FIND Paul Jones at all good liquor stores—in full pints and quarts. Get a bottle and try it. You'll be surprised how reasonably priced it is. Ask for Paul Jones at hotels and restaurants. You can be certain of its purity. For it comes sealed in the patented Frankfort Pack that must be destroyed before the bottle within it can be removed.

PODERJAY ALIBI IN BRIDE CASE ASSAILED

By DOROTHY ROE
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Capt. Ivan Poderjay, leading man in the mystery drama of the disappearance of Agnes Tufverson, told his side of the story yesterday in a 14-page statement characterized by Capt. John Ayers, of the Missing Persons Bureau, as "a lot of cock-eyed lies."

The long statement, written in German script and mailed from Vienna, expressed the firm belief of the international Romeo that his missing bride is alive and will come to his aid as soon as she learns of his plight.

Poderjay, held in Vienna on "suspicion of murder," with his other wife, Mme. Susanne Ferrand, asserted he married Miss Tufverson in New York at her own request, and that to her it was a "wedding of convenience," planned to "maintain her respectability."

He further stated that when he and Miss Tufverson planned to sail for Europe last December, she suggested they go by way of Montreal, so that she might convert a large sum of gold into pounds sterling.

He admitted they quarreled on the morning of December 20, the last day she was seen alive, but said that she left New York for Montreal alone at 9 a. m. that day.

Capt. Ayers disputed this, claiming Miss Tufverson was seen in her apartment with Poderjay at 11 o'clock on the night of December 20.

Other portions of the statement, not made public by New York police, were being checked today for further clues in the disappearance of the brilliant woman lawyer, whose body has not been found to corroborate the local police theory that she was murdered.

COURTSHIP OF PODERJAY REVEALED

Missing Bride Wooed With Flowers And Flattery

After the tingling sensation of a moonlight scene on the sea, in which a woman felt the first pulsation of romance, portrayed in the opening chapter of this vivid series, the author, in the accompanying installment, describes Agnes Tufverson's battle with her own emotions to keep aloof from sentimental entanglements, which apparently were fore-ordained.

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER II

She told herself:

"Moonlight—the ocean—romance! I suppose every girl has her knight—even a middle-aged one. I'll keep off the boat-deck after this."

And she added:

"I wish that cheap little person had been someone else—almost any man I know."

But the men she knew didn't make love to her. They took her to dinner and the theater and treated her as they treated each other—like a pal.

If ever one of them kissed her it was in a brotherly way, quickly and on the cheek. No thrill in that.

Such friendships had satisfied her before last night. Or if they didn't, she was not aware of it. She had been rather proud of her ability to keep out of sentimental entanglements.

LINGERING FAREWELL

Poderjay accepted her avoidance of him casually but he told her goodby on the pier—a lingering handclasp and his eyes holding hers. She felt a bit dizzy when he turned away.

Afterward she set about forgetting him.

Then came a night when in the luxury of her apartment around the corner from Grammercy Square, she received a florist's box filled to its cover with deep red roses. There was no card but she knew the sender.

Angry and outraged, she tossed the box, flowers and all, down the incinerator. And then faced herself, aghast.

Flowers came every day after that—always red roses.

PODERJAY CALLS

Then Poderjay called. He was neither the faintly mysterious figure of the cocktail hour on the liner, nor the lover of the boat-deck, but merely a friend, as casual as the other men she knew.

Listening to him tell of his travels over the globe, Agnes found herself liking him. She wondered how her estimate of him could have been so awry. He said:

"I never have known anyone like you. American women! Wonderful Perhaps you will tell me about yourself?"

She replied:

"But there's nothing really interesting. I was born in Michigan—in Grand Rapids. After my mother died, there were four sisters to bring up. Now Sally is in Montreal and Olive in Detroit. They are lovely girls.

"We were poor, you see, and it seemed up to me. Jobs—night school—and then I went to Washington as government stenographer. I met Mr. Herrick there. (Myron T. Herrick, who was ambassador to France.) And I managed to get in a high school course and then there was my law training at Columbia and the New York Law School. That's about all."

"Excepting, that now you are famous and rich!"

"Oh, not rich!"

FRIENDS FEAR TROUBLE

He called often in those days of late summer, at the apartment so filled with his flowers. Once Agnes took him to Hastings to call on Felix and Florence La Pou, friends of years' standing.

When they had gone the La Pous looked at each other. They said "Well!" almost simultaneously.

Other friends said:

"Agnes is forty. It's the silly age."

Still others shook their heads:

"She knows every trick in the game. And yet, she's headed for trouble."

(In the third chapter of Agnes Tufverson's amazing romance which will appear in the Sun-Telegraph tomorrow, Miss Van Duzer tells fascinatingly how "Ivan, the terrible lover," brought the American woman under his sway and into his arms.)

RELIEF PROBER FAVORS CASH TO NEEDY

The report of Douglas P. Falconer on his investigation of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board, made public today, recommends cash rather than commodity relief.

The investigation into the affairs of the relief board was ordered at the last special session of the Legislature to determine if the board's affairs were administered economically and whether or not relief orders were distributed to those only in need.

Belief was expressed in the report that those on relief are used to managing their own affairs prudently and are capable of managing cash wisely.

BIDDLE STAND INDORSED

The report says in part:

"The longer they are without cash the greater is the humility of sustaining on orders. Under proper safeguards determined by the State Emergency Relief Board, we believe the proper sort of relief administration can be better achieved by cash rather than commodity relief. And we heartily indorse the statements on this subject made by Mr. Biddle in his recent annual report."

Eric H. Biddle is executive director of the State Emergency Relief Board and an advocate of cash relief.

Falconer's report says that the Allegheny County Board affairs "are conducted with honesty and integrity." Falconer did, however, cite the need for more visitors to prevent overloading of cases on a single investigation "with its consequent administrative inefficiency." He also asked better quarters for the staff of the county office.

Regarding the necessity for an enlarged staff, the committee noted that since May 16 there has been an improvement due to appointment of junior visitors and that additional visitors are to be appointed to bring the case load down to 100 per visitor.

PHILANTHROPY URGED

In summarizing the inadequacies of relief, the Falconer survey committee concluded:

"Those who have power of leadership, either financial, political or social, ought to be even more keenly aware than they are now of the suffering of the people and for their own protection, if for no higher motive, should see to it that more adequate relief is made available pending a reorganization, reconstruction or revival of industry which will permit people to earn their own way."

Regarding shelter, the Falconer committee holds that a "great unmet need in relief administration is found in the absence of an effective policy for rent or for carrying charges in lieu of rent." Up to April 1, 1934, the report says, the county board has spent $165,232 privately contributed which was used in 10,294 cases of eviction when eviction was imminent or when illness in the family made payment imperative.

Under the head of "pressure groups" or organization of unemployed which make demands on the relief authorities, Falconer's report indicates that the rank and file of such membership is not radical and that the personnel of the membership of such organizations has been swelled by inadequacies in relief administration. The report urges promptness in dealing with these groups.

FUTURE UNPROMISING

A dark picture was drawn in the report on the chance of the unemployed again finding employment. The report says:

"So far as we could determine it is the unanimous opinion of the personnel managers of the larger industries in Pittsburgh and Allegheny County that considerable numbers of their former employes will not be re-employed.

"During the period of the depression many plants have improved their method of operation so that a smaller labor supply will suffice. Futhermore the 1928-29 level of production in a number of industries is not in sight."

The report recommends a permanent public welfare program for the county which would include not only the administration of public relief as now handled by the county board, but other public welfare functions now scattered through various boroughs and departments, such as mothers' assistance, old-age relief and relief to the blind and care of the indigent.

Relief Payments Await Federal Funds

HARRISBURG, June 29.—Payments of $11,392,720 for the needy thousands of Pennsylvania during July today awaited receipt of federal funds. The State Emergency Relief Board faces an empty treasury and is relying on the federal government to provide the money.

Board members appeared confident that Washington would meet the emergency as it yesterday allocated the funds. Otherwise a special session of the General Assembly to find new sources of relief funds appeared the only alternative.

The allocations made by the state board provide $1,192,183 for Allegheny County. Eric H. Biddle, state relief director, placed the number of families on direct or work relief at 339,000 or 115,000 less than a year ago.

RELIEF HURT BY VETO

Mayor McNair's veto of the $500,000 emergency relief bond issue has created a serious situation in Pittsburgh's relief program, George P. Mills, relief director, revealed today.

Unless the veto is overridden or a new source of funds found, Mills said the following relief work would have to be eliminated:

Electric lights, maternity care, clothing for school children, stoves, eyeglasses and other special medical appliances.

When faced with the Mayor's veto, Mills went to Robert Garland, president of Council, to seek a special meeting to consider further action. Mills also conferred with Southard Hay, public welfare director. Council, however, has adjourned for a month.

DORMONT MAN LOSES CITY JOB

Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston has agreed to accept the instruction of City Council and replace R. J. Templeton, 3256 Waltham avenue, Dormont, recently named chief clerk of the Bureau of Parks, with a resident of Pittsburgh.

He has named Penn Bassett, of 5440 Northumberland street, Squirrel Hill, as chief clerk to take office Monday. Bassett is a Democrat.

Templeton will be retained, according to Johnston, as park supervisor at Schenley Park. Johnston believes he can be qualified as an expert and so avoid the prohibition against non-resident job-holders. James Parry, present park supervisor, will retire on a pension.

Another result of the new arrangement will be a restriction of the duties of Coleman Coyne, brother of Senator James J. Coyne, who, with the title of nursery foreman, has been doing much of the park supervisor's work. Coyne will work at the greenhouse.

Spanish Fleet Sails In Secession Threat

GIBRALTAR, June 29.—(AP.)—The Spanish fleet sailed today after wireless instructions from Madrid to proceed immediately to Valencia where it was wanted in case an emergency developed.

Valencia is the closest large seaport to the State of Catalonia, which threatened recently to secede from the Spanish republic.

Fete Slovak Day At Kennywood Park

Western Pennsylvania Slovak Day will be observed at Kennywood Park July 11. The celebration will be held in conjunction with the jubilee of Pribinova, the anniversary of the first mass said by Prince Pribinova, the first Slovak priest, and revered national hero.

Benefit to Aid Unemployed League

Local No. 34, Unemployed Citizens' League, will hold a benefit show and dance at the North Side Elks Hall, Wylie avenue and Somers street, tomorrow night. Mace Williams will be in charge of the floor show.

OLD POLL TAX LAW VOIDED

The act of 1897 prohibiting anyone from paying poll taxes for another except on written order was held a dead letter today by Judge W. Heber Dithrich.

The court quashed an indictment against Mike Rudman, Braddock politician who was charged with paying poll taxes for 18 voters without a written order.

Judge Dithrich ruled that the constitutional amendment adopted at the general election November 7, 1933, eliminating poll taxes outlawed the 37-year-old act. It was in connection with the same election that Rudman was alleged to have paid the poll taxes.

The same principle was involved the court stated, in the case of Tom Dolan, one of the "Three Toms" in the Monaca Club case. A liquor indictment against Dolan had been quashed because of the constitutional amendment removing the ban on sale of liquor.

Crittenton Home Holds Tag Day

A tag day with a society atmosphere will be held tomorrow when the Florence Crittenton Home will seek to raise its annual budget of $7,500. Girls from the Junior League, and the Thurston, Winchester and Ellis schools and the Girl Scouts will sell the tags.

The tag day is in charge of Mrs. Ronald Quay Cleavenger, president of the board.

Model Building Course for Beginners; Lesson 15—Single Stick Tractor Model

By LAWRENCE SHAW
National Director

Let's get our first contest model under way. Having completed an all-Balsa glider and your first flying model, you should have very little trouble in constructing a real championship endurance craft.

The single stick endurance model, which we are to start on today with the purchasing of the materials, has a 36-inch wing span, so that when completed you may enter it in the model plane derby to be held next week.

The 36-inch wing span comes within the contest measurements and the model will weigh over three ounces, so that weight requirements will also be adhered to for the derby.

Your wing commander will be glad to send you the complete book of rules and an entry blank for your local wing derby. They are free. Write for them now!

Materials for Endurance Model

This single stick endurance model differs from our all-Balsa low-wing flier in several respects. First, and most important, our wings are not built from Balsa sheet, but from a framework we will build up from Balsa strips, and then cover with Japanese tissue. Thus we will have what is called a built-up wing and tail unit, for our rudder and elevators will be constructed the same way.

This model differs too in that the motor stick is constructed in two pieces, having a tail boom added on. Further variation, in addition to size, is that the wings are above the motor stick instead of below.

There is a wire fitting placed under the wings called a "can" for holding the rubber close to the stick. The landing gear has double struts, and other details which will be explained in further lessons are included.

Go to your nearest model plane supply depot or department store selling Balsa wood and other model materials, and purchase the following:

One strip of Balsa for tail boom one-quarter by three-eighths inch, 12 inches long.

Two strips of Balsa for wing spars three-sixteenths by three-eighths inch, 36 inches long.

Two strips of Balsa for tail unit spars three-sixteenths by one-quarter inch, 36 inches long.

Two strips of Balsa for wing ribs one-quarter inch square, 36 inches long.

One Balsa strip for tail unit ribs three-sixteenths inch square, 36 inches long.

One sheet of Balsa for wheels one-quarter by one and one-half inches, three and one-half inches long.

Two strips of bamboo one-sixteenth by one-quarter of an inch, 12 inches in length.

One one-ounce bottle or tube of cement.

Three feet of .042 music wire for landing gear.

One sheet of Japanese tissue white or colored).

One large thrust bearing.

Twenty-four feet of 1/8-inch flat rubber.

This is all standard model builders' material and you should have no trouble in obtaining any of it. In purchasing your propeller block, ask for medium Balsa, as this will be of definite help in carving your propeller. Hard Balsa is difficult to cut into.

Soft Balsa is too weak. Also when purchasing materials you should tag each piece so that when you get home the sizes will not confuse you.

Much of the work on this model will be identical to the construction details of your low-wing flier, except that all members of this new craft will be proportionately larger.

Watch for the next lesson in Sunday's column.

Questions And Answers

Here are some questions which have come in recently from members. Remember, when sending in your questions, to give your membership number as well as your name. And answers will appear in this column feature only! No questions are answered by direct mail.

Joseph Skrak, Jr., 2349 Los Angeles avenue—It is impossible to send you plans of planes that have already been printed. You will find plans for the tractor model in today's and Sunday's papers.

Russell Sipe, Point Marion, O.—Will you please send us your age so that we can mail you your wings.

Melvin Lechlak, Toledo, O.—Time does not permit me to send you the air insignias that you miss during the week. Many other members have made the same request. I can not do a "good turn" for one and not the other. The insignias will be published in book form, I believe, at the end of the series.

Margaret and Rebecca Cooney, 1610 Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks—According to the Birdmen rules you will have to pay 10 cents for all new membership cards.

Andrew Gallagher, New Kensington—The single stick and double stick models may be either pusher or tractor types.

Garce Wells, Buhl way—I am glad that you liked the air pageant and we will try to have an even better one with a parachute jump at the next one. I'll see you at the plane derby. You'll find it just as much fun.

Waslo Thomas, 1246 Stedman street—I can not send you back copies of the air dictionary. They will be published in book form at the end of the series.

HAPPY LANDINGS!

LIVE 'COMICS' TO PARADE

Tillie the Toiler and gallant little Mac, swashbuckling Popeye, Barney Google and Spark Plug, Boob McNutt and all the other laugh-producing characters in the comic pages of the Sun-Telegraph will come to life at Kennywood Park, Friday, July 13, when the juvenile parade of the comics will march and caper under the trees as the feature of the Sun-Telegraph's annual outing for boys and girls of Pittsburgh and vicinity. Scores of expensive prizes will be given for the best comic impersonation. Kiddies who think that they can make up as one of any of the Sun-Telegraph comics should send in their entry blanks at once.

In the meantime, preparations are being made to give away several hundreds of the strips of free tickets for the rides and attractions at the park through the courtesy of Brady McSwigan, president of Kennywood. Within a few days coupons will appear in the Sun-Telegraph, which can be exchanged for these free strips of tickets. Watch the Sun-Telegraph for the first coupons.

Cat Chasing Rat Turns on Stove, Man Gassed

The escaping fumes flooded the store, seeped through cracks in the ceiling and penetrated the sleeping chamber of Benjamin Luster, 48, occupant of a second floor apartment.

Luster's life was saved by a passerby who, detecting the odor of gas, called police. They found Luster unconscious in his bed.

Horse Kills Woman, Man Victim of Auto

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 29.—(AP.)—Two persons are dead from curiously contrasting highway accidents.

Miss Pearl Longstreth, 31, died from injuries received as she was trampled by a horse which she had been harnessing to a farm wagon in a road near her Cherrytree home 10 days ago.

Vincent Savaskas, 63, succumbed after being struck by an automobile driven by Robert Martin, of Latrobe.

COAL COMPANY REPLIES IN SUIT

The Pittsburgh Coal Company and the Montour Railroad Company, joint defendants in an equity suit filed last October by the government in Federal Court, charging unfair competition, through counsel filed an answer entering a general denial of the allegations.

The government alleged that the railroad company for many years purchased its coal for locomotive fuel purposes exclusively from the coal company at prices considerably higher than those for which coal of similar quality could have been obtained from competing companies. The government seeks to have the railroad restrained from transporting, in interstate commerce, coal mined by the coal company, except such as it needs for its own use.

The defendant concerns denied allegations of the government that the two companies were controlled by interlocking directorships and averred that both are bona fide corporation and independent of each other, and further denied that the coal company, through ownership of railroad company stock, dominated the operations of the latter company.

The filing of a joint tax return by the two concerns was admitted in the answer.

NORGE

on the GAS AND ELECTRIC SHOPS Budget Plan

The hotter it gets, the more important becomes the mechanism in your refrigerator. You can buy Norge with the assurance that, no matter how hot the weather may get, there is always a reserve of cold-making power to chill foods thoroughly and to freeze ice quickly.

Unique, the Norge Rollator cold-making mechanism has but three slowly moving parts—is almost everlasting—powered to make more cold than you'll ever need—and, by actual factory test, it improves with use. The Rollator mechanism is one of the chief reasons for Norge economy. It enables Norge users to save up to $11 a month on household expense.★

REALTY GROUP ASSAILS TAX INJUSTICE

Tax injustices which penalize home ownership were hit again today in the second and closing session of the Real Estate Owners' Association, Inc., in Olympia Park, Versailles Township.

On the day's program was George L. Ewing, recent candidate for the Legislature and onetime leader of a movement among independent merchants, who suggested legislative remedies for existing inequities. A second speaker was Mrs. Alberta Cannon Rowland, of Port Vue.

The two-day session was to close tonight. Among speakers expected were Charles J. Margiotti, Congressman J. Buell Snyder, Mayor William N. McNair, C. Fred Mentzer and Albert B. Adams.

Belief that a minimum equity in a home should be exempt from taxation in the same manner that low-bracket incomes are free from income taxes was expressed as one of the group's planks. Others seek reduction in real estate taxes, urge a state tax for support of the public schools, and propose that properties sold for taxes should not be disposed of below the assessed valuation.

Howard T. Curtiss, executive director of the association; John Robertson, president of the Versailles Borough Tax Club; John Krepps, head of the board of directors of the association, and Goethe Faust, Greensburg attorney, were speakers on the first afternoon program.

Dr. Marion F. McKay, of the University of Pittsburgh, and David N. Denman, Latrobe, spoke on the school problem and taxation systems in the state on last night's program.

LINDYS TO GET NEW AIRPLANE

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, who have been without an airplane of their own since they gave their last one to a museum, will acquire a new ship next month.

A two-place monocoupe cabin monoplane, it will be the smallest Col. Lindbergh has owned. It is being built by his former aviation associates in St. Louis.

The new plane, scheduled for delivery early in July, will have a rated top speed of 165 miles an hour.

For some time past Col. Lindbergh has been using a monocoupe placed at his disposal by the manufacturers until his own ship is ready. His last plane, in which he and Mrs. Lindbergh made an aerial survey of North and South Atlantic routes, is now an exhibit at the Museum of Natural History.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS :: By PAUL MALLON

Elliott's Job With Air Crowd Starts Vain Gossip

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Most people here suspected an inner commotion in the Roosevelt family circle when Elliott signed up with the aircraft crowd.

This is virtually the same crowd with which his father, the President, had so much trouble during the air mail dispute. At least, the holders of the largest air mail contracts hold the control stick in the National Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, of which Elliott now is vice president.

Ordinarily, this situation would appear on its face to be somewhat embarrassing to the White House, but it is not. Members of the executive family have worked out a little arrangement among themselves which they believe will prevent any misunderstandings. It is to the effect that Elliott may come to the White House whenever he chooses and stay as long as he likes and he may talk with his father about any subject in the world—except aviation. That subject is taboo.

The same understanding applies to son James and the insurance business.

Those nearest the President predict he will lean over backwards to avoid any act which might be interpreted as a favor to those with whom his sons have business connections.

PURIFICATION

There are inner indications that the aircraft lads are a chastened crowd (politically, at any rate) since the air mail flurry. They are doing many things to establish peaceful relations with the administration.

Certain aviation companies have also employed O. Max Gardner, former Democratic Governor of North Carolina, now a Washington attorney, friendly to the administration. He is to be the Washington representative of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce. Some people will call him their lobbyist.

The main secret about Mr. Gardner's employment is supposed to be the contract he has with the chamber. This has not been made public, and will not be, but if you see the right people you can learn that it contains some very interesting stipulations as to what the aircraft boys can and cannot do in the way of political agitation as long as Mr. Gardner is their counsel.

These stipulations were written into the contract because the administration is still nettled about what it considered the unfair tactics of the big aviation companies in stirring up anti-administration sentiment during the air mail fracas.

You will recall that Col. Lindbergh wrote a few snappy letters to the President. He will write no more.

PRECEDENT

The Washington contact system of the aviation companies is not much different now than under the Hoover administration. At that time, certain companies employed William Donovan, ex-assistant attorney general, as Washington counsel.

Mr. Hoover's son once was employed by an aviation company as technical adviser. There was little public commotion over those relationships.

BACKGROUND

Elliott is the independent member of the Roosevelt household. He takes the position that he cannot help it that his father is President of the United States. He believes he is entitled to make his own way in the world regardless. He looks upon his air job as a good chance to get started right in a coming business.

The President was not advised beforehand of Elliott's intention to sign with the aeronautical chamber. He has neither approved nor disapproved the idea.

The President's view is that the grown members of his family are entitled to make a living in any way they choose, as long as they do not interfere with matters of state.

That applies to the writing activities of Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Dall, as well as to the two sons.

AIR COMMISSION

The matter is of more than personal interest now, in view of the inner agitation over appointments to the new air commission under the air mail bill.

The larger aviation companies, naturally, want to get what they consider to be the right kind of men appointed to that commission. The Army and Navy Air Corps and the Postoffice groups have some different ideas about that.

The personnel of the new commission will mean a lot to all concerned.

COX

President Won't Talk Aviation With Son

Ohio, giving him a long overdue recognition in Ohio political affairs.

It was Cox who selected Mr. Roosevelt as his vice presidential running mate in 1920, a step which gave F. D. R. a start in politics.

National political authorities say that Cox, Senator Bulkley and Mr. Roosevelt agreed on putting Representative West into the Ohio senatorial race so they would have an active campaigner for New Deal policies in that key state.

Zukor Jewel Theft Suspect Questioned

CHICAGO, June 29.—(AP.)—Morris Davis was questioned last night in connection with the theft of $87,000 in jewelry from the hotel room of Mrs. Adolph Zukor, wife of the film magnate.

Davis was captured, police said, after he had entered the hotel quarters of Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Weber, of St. Louis. He fled, they said, when Mrs. Weber awoke, but was overtaken in the street. When detectives found he had an 18-year record, they decided to quiz him concerning the Zukor burglary. Mrs. Zukor was robbed while visiting here several weeks ago.

"CHIPSO SAVES RUBBING THE LIFE OUT OF CLOTHES AND IT PROTECTS COLORS" says mother of these three tiny tots

This photograph of Mrs. J. E. England with John Edward, Jr., Mary Ann and Sara-Lane was taken in the yard of their home in Washington, D. C.

Busy as she is with three little babies, Mrs. England manages to do all her own housekeeping and the washing as well.

"Even the sheets!" she declares. "I put them to soak in CHIPSO and, honestly, I don't have to rub them. They come out white as snow!"

"I've used Chipso," she explained, "ever since I started housekeeping, but I didn't know just how much I appreciated it until I had three children and so much more work. Chipso suds loosen even ground-in dirt. Yet Chipso isn't the least bit harsh on my hands or hard on colors. Nothing ever fades or runs."

Chipso is not adulterated with the harsh substances contained in inferior soaps which gradually weaken fabrics and dull their color. Chipso is SOAPIER. It loosens the dirt quickly because it makes magnificent suds. These RICHER SUDS are harmless to colors and even the finer fabrics.

Don't endanger clothes you have spent good money for by washing them in cheap flakes or strong granulated soaps and powders. Get Chipso from your grocer.

At its low price, Chipso is the biggest value in rich, safe soap on the market today!

OFFICIAL—PITTSBURGH

NO. 181.

AN ORDINANCE—An ordinance relating to safeguarding public health, prescribing certain rules, regulations and requirements in any building now existing or which may be erected, or altered, to make, or dispense any beverage or prepare any food for consumption on the premises or elsewhere, or in any building where the public may assemble, such as places of amusement, dance halls, theaters, etc., and providing penalties for violation thereof.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That for the purpose of enforcing requirements of the laws and regulations relating to plumbing and drainage or any nuisance that would affect the public health, the Plumbing Inspector shall be permitted to enter any house or building, ground or premises, in the City of Pittsburgh at all times and where nuisances that would affect public health exist, he shall notify or cause to be notified the owner, agent or occupant of the ground or premises in which such violations or nuisances shall be found to occur, remove or abate the same in the manner prescribed by the Act of General Assembly, approved June 7, 1901, and May 14, 1909, before installing any plumbing or drainage in any building which now exists or may hereafter be erected or altered, which purpose is to make or prepare or dispense any beverage or prepare any foods either for consumption on the premises or elsewhere, it will be necessary for plumbers to comply with SECTIONS 4 and 5 of the State Plumbing Law.

SECTION 2. Every drain opening on soda fountain, lunch counter or beer work board must be furnished with a trap which shall be placed as close as possible to the fixture it serves, for which a fee of 50c for each fixture must be paid. Within the meaning of this ordinance the term "fixture" is defined to mean bottle cooler, refrigerator, rinsing sinks, glass washers, etc. All such drains must not connect directly with any part of the plumbing system but must discharge over a properly trapped and vented water supplied sink or receptor.

SIZE OF TRAP AND WASTE PIPE

Each outlet must be furnished with not less than a 1½" trap. One to two fixtures having 1½" traps under each will be permitted on a 1½" waste pipe; three to eight traps permitted on 2" waste pipe; nine to twenty on 2½" waste pipe.

Changes in directions must be made with "Y" or half "Y" branches, or one-eighth bend fittings where possible. Extra heavy cast iron, copper, brass or galvanized recessed iron pipe size fittings must be used.

Safe waste pipes must be extra heavy cast iron, lead, copper, brass or galvanized iron pipe size, or any other materials and fittings approved by the Board or Bureau of Health.

SECTION 3.

SEPARATE TOILET ROOMS FOR EMPLOYES

Separate toilet rooms shall be provided for each sex in every establishment where both men and women are employed. These shall be clearly designated and no other person shall be permitted to use or frequent a toilet room assigned to the opposite sex.

The number of water closets to be provided for each sex shall in every case be based upon the maximum number of persons of that sex employed at any one time on the given floor or floors or in the given building for which such closets are provided, and there shall also be provided one wash stand for each sex.

Water closets shall be provided for each sex according to the following table:

NO. OF PERSONS.	NO. OF CLOSETS
1 to 15	1
16 to 30	2
31 to 50	3

For each additional twenty-five employes at least one additional water closet shall be provided.

SECTION 4.

PATRONS' TOILET ACCOMMODATIONS

In all such places where both sexes may be assembled, separate toilet rooms for male and female must be provided and maintained in a sanitary condition. Toilet rooms for males shall be clearly marked "Men" and for females they shall be clearly marked "Women." In places of amusement such as theaters, dance halls, etc., toilet fixtures must be provided for the different sexes as follows:

Male toilet rooms must consist of one water closet, one wash stand and one urinal, where not more than fifty patrons may be assembled. For every fraction thereof one additional toilet must be provided, so there will never be more than fifty patrons per closet.

Female toilets must consist of one water closet, one wash stand and one sanitary container, where there would not be more than forty assembled. For every fraction thereof one additional toilet must be provided, so there will never be more than forty persons per toilet.

Where public wash stands are provided with easy access to closet compartments, it will not be necessary to install wash stands in the closet compartment.

Water closet compartments must not have any direct communication with any dining room or kitchen, nor shall any water closet be placed in any dining room or kitchen. Neither shall same have direct communication with a public dining room, restaurant or kitchen or be placed in any room or compartment which has not direct communication to external air, either by window or air shaft of at least four square feet, or some other approved means of ventilation that will change the air in these closet compartments not less than six times per hour. When any window ventilating any water closet compartment opens directly into a vent shaft, no window of any other room except water closet compartment or bath room shall open into such vent shaft.

SECTION 5. Floors of water closet compartments must have non-absorbent floor and base not less than 16" in height from the floor.

SECTION 6. Water closets in buildings shall be supplied with water from special tanks which shall hold not less than six gallons, when full to the level of the overflow pipe, for each water closet supply, excepting automatic or syphon tanks which hold not less than five gallons for each water closet supply, except when flushometers or wallometers or similar devices are installed. All water closets and other fixtures must be supplied with sufficient water supply for flushing to keep them in a clean, proper sanitary condition.

Where trough urinals are used they must be constructed of materials impervious to moisture which will not corrode under the action of the urine. The floors and walls of all urinal compartments must be lined with similar non-absorbent and non-corrosive material. Where trough urinals are provided for fifty people they shall not be less than 48 inches long with perforated piping to thoroughly flush the urinal from all sides. No floor trough or gutter shall be permitted in front of bar or counters.

SECTION 7. No air intake for any beverage pump, soda fountain, charging apparatus or any other appliance for the placing of air in contact with any beverage or food for human consumption shall open into a cellar, blind area, under a counter, or in a damp or insanitary place, but shall be taken at least 10 feet above the ground level from an unenclosed outdoor space open from the ground to the sky, and same shall be provided with a brass or copper wired screen of draft type. The point of intake shall be removed as far as possible from any yard, closet, sewer or fixture vent, stable, garage or any other objectionable construction.

SECTION 8. All air lines with [illegible]nated gas tanks in use shall be con[illegible]ted of either copper tubing or block [illegible] pipe of ⅜" diameter, five ounces [illegible]ight. All fresh air inlets on air li[illegible] [illegible]ll be placed outside of building wh[illegible] [illegible]ossible, and where these lines occur [illegible] front of buildings they must be carried at least 10 feet above the street level. Where it is not possible to acquire air from outside, it will be permissible to acquire air from inside of building, providing an air filter of an approved make shall be used in the air line before the same reaches the air container. No rubber hose is to be used on air lines over 30 inches in length, and all this plumbing shall be installed by a licensed plumber under the supervision of a registered master plumber.

SECTION 9. Plans and specifications on each installation are to be filed with the Plumbing Inspector. When the Plumbing Inspector has approved said plans and specifications filed with him, he shall inspect each and every installation, providing the same is in accordance with this ordinance.

SECTION 10. Any person or persons who shall fail, neglect, or refuse to comply with, or who shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance, shall upon conviction thereof in a summary proceeding before any police magistrate or alderman in the City of Pittsburgh, be sentenced to pay a fine of not more than fifty ($50.00) dollars, and in default of payment thereof to be imprisoned in the county jail for a period of not more than thirty days.

SECTION 11. That any ordinance or part of ordinance, conflicting with the provisions of this ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this ordinance.

Ordained and enacted into a law in Council, this 11th day of June, A. D. 1934.

Pittsburgh, June 26, 1934.

I do hereby certify that the foregoing ordinance, which has been disapproved by the Mayor and returned with his objections to the Council, was passed by a two-thirds vote of said Council this 25th day of June, 1934.

ROBT. CLARK,
Clerk of Council.

Recorded in O. B., Vol. 46, page 66.

CHURCH RITES WILL OPEN CENTENNIAL

Interdenominational outdoor religious services open Elizabeth's centennial home-coming observance Sunday night. Parades, pageants, athletic programs and special fireworks display will continue the program through Wednesday night.

The Rev. Dr. Gaius G. Slosser, of Western Theological Seminary, will deliver the principal address at the opening services.

A steamboat parade will be Monday's daylight high spot. The day's program begins at 9 a. m. with mushball eliminations and quoit matches. Preceding the afternoon's river parade, the steamboats will be open for public inspection.

The night's observance will be marked by a historical pageant, which will be continued the two remaining days.

Athletic and water sports mark Tuesday's program. A 10-mile marathon race and a golf tournament occupy the morning. An afternoon track meet will be followed by the water sports with water polo a highlight of the events which include swimming, motorboat and canoe races.

The celebration will be climaxed Wednesday with a historical parade in the morning. Freak contests, including greased pole climbing, greased pigs, water battles and a baseball game will be held in the afternoon.

WOMAN JAILED IN ROW FREED

With her nine small children waiting to greet her, Mrs. Mary Crowley, of 3028 McClurg street, South Side, was free from the County Jail today after serving three days for disorderly conduct in a neighborhood quarrel over a dog.

Mrs. Crowley was sent to jail Wednesday by Justice of the Peace James H. McMonagle, of Castle Shannon, when she failed to pay a $11.20 fine. The disorderly conduct charge was preferred against her by Mrs. Catherine Schemm, her downstairs neighbor.

Her husband, Dennis Crowley, works only three days a week for the Relief Works Division, earning $12 to support his nine children.

When Mrs. Crowley complained about Mrs. Schemm's dog, a quarrel arose leading to the court trouble. Mrs. Crowley was released yesterday.

FILLING STATION MEN TO ELECT

Hugh Friel, United States Department of Labor conciliator, today expected to set a date for an election of collective bargaining representatives by filling station employes of the American Oil Company. He conferred yesterday with officers of the company and the union in the company's offices in the Grant Building.

Attending the meeting were Paul Klingler and E. J. Benjo, of the oil company, and David Williams, American Federation of Labor organizer, and Robert Zollinger, president of Local No. 19204, Gasoline Station Workers.

2 Civil War Vets Home After 'Final Reunion'

TWO OF ONLY THREE LEFT OF THE 103RD PENNA. VOLS.

Two old soldiers, veterans of the Civil War, are back home today—even the days of their regimental reunions over.

A third survivor, William P. Griffith, 92, lives in Brooklyn, too far away to come to Pittsburgh.

Their meeting yesterday in Memorial Hall with wives, sons and daughters, members of the regimental association and of the regiment's auxiliary, was the fifty-ninth anniversary of the association and the sixty-ninth and final reunion of the regiment, anniversary of the day they were mustered out of the service, June 28, 1865.

Perhaps for the last time the old men carried out their faded silken colors, so tattered and torn by time and bullets that they can't be unfurled without damage.

Eventually, Harold G. Hamilton, association president and himself the son of a veteran, explains, the flag probably will be placed in Memorial Hall, a permanent memorial.

In spite of his many years, Renton's memory remains clear. Gazing at the colors, he said:

"To prevent their capture these colors were wrapped around a large stone and thrown into the Rappahannock River, when a part of the regiment was surrounded by Lee's army after Hooker's defeat at Chancellorsville.

"Three years later we got them back again, but they were never captured in battle."

Asked about national defense, he said:

"Yes, I'm in favor of a strong Army and Navy. Not such a big Army, millions of men, maybe, so that we could go over and clean up England and France, but big enough, and with a Navy big enough, so that we could guard our borders and kick anybody out who tried to come in."

HERE'S HELP FOR YOU!

IF YOU must be on the job every day, here's a medicine you ought to know about. Little chocolate coated tablets which bring welcome relief from "women's troubles." Purse size, 50 cents.

"I am 27 and a textile winder in the mill. I had cramps so bad that I had to cry many times. I used to stay in bed two days a month. Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets helped me wonderfully. For the first time in my life I do not suffer. I can work all the time now and feel strong. I used to be rundown and nervous and couldn't eat. Now I eat more than I ever did". — Mrs. Bennie Coates, 1963 Terrace Street, Muskegon, Mich.

"I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Medicine to everyone. I was rundown and tired and had pains in my stomach and was irregular. Your Tablets proved wonders to me." — Mrs. Fred Backmann, 1023 So. 2nd Street, La Crosse, Wisconsin.

Try this medicine yourself. You will be pleased with the results.

COLONEL HOWE « Countess Albani Baseball Drama « ON RADIO

President's Secretary Speaks

Col. Louis McHenry Howe, secretary to President Roosevelt, comes to the air to review the past session of Congress and to discuss the probable effects of its legislation, on WCAE tonight at 8.

The President's secretary will share time with Countess Olga Albani, soprano; a quartet and Rosario Bourdon's Orchestra.

The third edition of the "Spotlight Revue," featuring a rollicking new "Stooperetta" with Colonel Stoopnagle and Budd, is scheduled on WJAS tonight from 10 to 10:45.

Frank Crumit, Everett Marshall, "The Eight Gentlemen" and Victor Young's Orchestra also are heard on the program.

With Doris Doe, Metropolitan Opera contralto, as guest soloist, a half-hour concert of operatic selections and popular ballads is presented by the NBC Symphony Orchestra over KDKA at 10:30.

PIANO TEAM

Fray and Braggiotti, popular piano team, again appear as guests of Johnny Green, "In the Modern Manner" on WJAS at 9:30.

Pick and Pat, comedians, and an orchestra under the direction of Joseph Banime present a half-hour program on WCAE at 9:30.

Jimmy Kempner makes a romantic confession, "You Were Right and I Was Wrong" as a feature of the "Music on the Air" program on WJAS at 7:30.

Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone, with Jimmy Grier's Orchestra, offer a half-hour of comedy and music on WCAE at 10:30.

PHIL HARRIS

"Strike Thu-ree! Batter's Out!"

One of baseball's greatest and most colorful pitchers, too much of a bonvivant for his own good, had won an important game, though far from recovered from a three-day spree.

The episode, dramatized and acted by well known NBC players, forms the "Sport Stories Off the Record," drama, with Thornton Fisher, veteran sports editor and cartoonist as narrator, on KDKA at 7:45.

Jimmy Long Gives Sports Review

With baseball season almost at the mid-way, the comments of James J. Long, sports authority, in his regular Friday resume tonight at 6 holds paramount interest for followers of the diamond game.

At 7 o'clock, WCAE presents Miriam Young, soprano, with the String Trio. Earlier, at 5:20, C. H. Roth advises motorists of traveling conditions on the state highways.

Countess

Local Highlights on WJAS Tonight

Four acts on the local bill on WJAS tonight, starting with Fran Eichler's dinner dance music at 6:15.

Paul Gannon's songs are billed as usual at 6:45 with a special quarter-hour of baritone favorites by Lewis Munnell at 9:15.

DISEASE CAUSE OF POOL DEATH

An autopsy has indicated that the death of John Di Maggio, 8, whose body was found at the bottom of the Highland Park swimming pool Wednesday, was due to enlarged thymus and mesenteric glands.

Rumors that the child had been drinking wine before entering the water were not substantiated by the post-mortem, Coroner W. J. McGregor said.

The glandular condition of young Di Maggio is common among children, and is said to have been aggravated by a heavy meal he ate before going to the park. W. C. Batchelor, superintendent of the Recreation Bureau, declared a forehead bruise on the body indicated the boy may have been dead when he struck the water in his fatal dive.

Recovery of the body by a pool guard within a minute after the boy disappeared under the water was reason to presume the boy had not drowned, according to Batchelor.

Kate Smith Returning To Air

By AIRCASTER

"It's no use," sighed Kate Smith yesterday, "and they can't say of me that I haven't tried, but I just can't get that moon up over that mountain, and so I won't attempt it any more. After this my theme will be distinctive but nameless. No more moons; no more mountains."

It was Kate's way of letting us know that she's coming back on the air, via WJAS.

Not only is she coming back, but she's to have the choice sustaining spot of the evening thrice a week—8 o'clock Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays, with a 16-piece orchestra, directed by Freddy Miller, her accompanist, and with special arrangements of vocals by Tony Dale. The series will begin July 16.

CASHING IN

Only the other day an effusive broadcasting official rubbed the palms of his hands together in smug satisfaction, and told me:

"This autumn will find radio healthier than ever, and featuring movie stars by the score.

"Broadcasting will be chasing in on the expensive biuldups that the movie concerns have developed. We'll even be using parts of their stories in which the film folk will act."

The chap is no better prophet than he is a showman, it seems.

As a matter of fact, the outlook seems to portend a dearth of movie folk on next autumn's air. Not that the film folk object to making a few thousand honest dollars by lending their prestige and whatever talent they may possess to the mike.

Not at all.

That's velvet for the film artists.

It's the movie companies that have begun to howl.

Ostensibly they are banning one star after another from the kilocycles "because exhibitors all over the country are complaining that if millions of potential box-office customers can sit at home and hear not only the movie artists, but parts of movie plays, they have no incentive to visit the movie temples."

And to that add the complainants, too frequent broadcasts by Hollywood performers surfeit the public appetite and nothing but indigestion is left.

REAL REASON

The real reason for the frowning upon radio by the movie moguls, however, is that they are about to stage their own broadcast, designed to lure customers to the theater—a series backed and financed by five major companies, and they don't want their own kind of competition on the air.

They resent also the fact that they have to groom stars for success, and pay the bills, while radio merely cashes in on the finished product, and besides that, the moguls believe that if an artist is working for the films he has no place in the employ of a buttonhole manufacturer.

On the other hand, radio officials point to the fact that the movies quickly gobble up artists groomed by radio—people like Lanny Ross, Bing Crosby, Jack Benny, etc.

Be that as it may, it seems that Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn have agreed to keep major stars off the air as much as possible.

Globe Trotter

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

The veterans are clamoring for their bonus checks. I can't very much blame them. The money has been spent over and over again by the vet in his imagination and now he wants some actual experience.

Clamoring is going to do no good. Furthermore, these are very hot days to get excited about anything, even bonus checks.

The checks will be mailed in due time. They are being sent out now at the rate of 5,000 a day, but there are so many of them to be sent out.

Sometime ago Lieut. Griffith mentioned that by July 1 it was hoped that all living veterans would be paid off by the state, but the gigantic clerical task both at Harrisburg and Washington prevented the happy accomplishment of this aim.

The passing years have dimmed the memories of many veterans as to some seemingly unimportant fact, a misstatement of which on the application must be checked against official records in Washington.

Be steady! Hold on! Remember, your bonus checks are coming and so is Christmas.

While thousands are clamoring for their checks there are at present three soldiers whose checks are waiting for them, and Guy Griffith is clamoring for them to come to his office in the Nixon Building and pick up the money.

DIONNE BABIES MONTH OLD, GAINING

CORBEIL, Ontario, June 29.—(AP.)—The celebrated "handicap kids" of Corbeil reached the half-way mark yesterday in their incubator ride to life's scratch line. A month old, the Dionne quintuplets gurgled delightedly and went right on getting bigger and stronger while an entire continent helped and hoped.

Four more weeks and they will have attained the life-expectancy of normal children at birth, estimates the short, stocky country practictioner, Dr. A. R. Dafoe, who attended the infants at their premature birth in the early morning of May 28. He described their condition today as "satisfactory."

Two nations have made it possible for the quintuplets to have every care and many aids of medical science. Canada and the United States turned astonished eyes on Corbeil a month ago and hastened to help Dr. Dafoe keep the infants alive.

Incubators arrived from Chicago and Toronto an oxygen-carbon dioxide mixture was supplied by a Toronto firm. The Toronto Hospital for Sick Children arranged to keep the babies supplied with human milk and the Red Cross sent a nurse to the four-room Dionne home. An oil-burning refrigerator was sent from New York to keep the milk cool and the Canadian government waived the $100 customs duty.

The quintuplets have responded by gaining rapidly. They broke all known records by living more than 50 hours. Medical authorities said more than 30 cases of quintuplets have been reported, but not one where the babies lived much more than two days. There has been no properly authenticated case of sextuplets.

Wrapped in their swaddling clothes, the babies weighed 13 pounds 6 ounces shortly after birth, but it was seven days later before they were first accurately weighed. Collectively they tipped the scales at 10 pounds 1¼ ounces. Yesterday they weighed 13 pounds 3 ounces.

	June 4.	June 28.
Yvonne	38¼	49¾
Annette	36	46½
Cecile	33	41½
Emilie	29	38½
Marie	26	35¼

While the medical world watched in growing wonderment the quintuplets have advanced steadily towards normalcy. The 50-year-old Dr. Dafoe, who has brought more than 1,500 North country babies into the world, baptized them at birth in the Roman Catholic faith—he is a Protestant himself—and daily becomes more optimistic that his tiny charges will survive.

Promoted, Dead

GEORGE KOPAS, 6

KILLED BEARING HAPPY TIDINGS

There was mourning today in the home of George Kopas, 6-year-old kindergarten pupil of the Brookline School, who was struck and killed by an automobile driven by W. R. Tice, of 1040 Woodbourne avenue.

It was his last day of school, and George was hurrying to his home at 309 Brookline boulevard yesterday, with the news that he had been promoted to the first grade.

About to cross the street in front of the school, the child was struck by the car as he stepped from between two parked automobiles.

He died in the office of Dr. O. L. Marks, at 531 Brookline boulevard, where he had been rushed after the accident.

MARSHALL OUT ON ADVICE OF DOCTORS

The retirement of Ben R. Marshall as superintendent of police yesterday was due to advice of his wife and three physicians attending him. Politics or any other outside pressure played no part in the retirement, according to Mrs. Marshall.

The superintendent, according to Dr. Harry M. Goehring, is a "very sick man," and it will be many weeks before he is able to be about again. Marshall is resting at the home of a relative in Dayton, about 24 miles east of Kittanning. He is suffering from a serious stomach disorder and "nerves."

LEAVE GRANTED

Marshall sent his resignation to Public Safety Director A. Marshall Bell Wednesday night. Yesterday Director Bell announced that he had refused to accept the resignation and appeared before Council and requested that Supt. Marshall be granted a six months' leave of absence with full pay. The request was granted and Marshall will retire next January as a superintendent with a pension of $125 a month.

Assistant Supt. of Police Jacob Dorsey, who has been acting superintendent in Marshall's absence the past month, was named successor to Marshall, according to an announcement made by Director Bell.

The loss of Marshall was regretted today by Bell in a statement. The director said Marshall's physicians had informed him the superintendent's ailments could be traced to the fall he suffered from a horse in an Armistice Day parade.

At the same time Bell lauded Dorsey and indicated that good work would clinch for him the superintendent's job permanently.

VISITORS FORBIDDEN

Supt. Marshall is denied all visitors. His nerves as so shattered, according to his wife, that the least excitement upsets him and forces him to remain in bed for days. Yesterday he was unable to leave his bed. He has lost considerable weight and for the past three weeks has been on a soft food diet.

Mrs. Marshall said:

"The hardest job I have is keeping him in bed. He doesn't realize how sick he is and wants to get out."

According to Mrs. Marshall, just as soon as her husband is strong enough to travel they will visit their daughter in Schenectady, N. Y.

Dorsey announced that he would would not make any radical changes in the personnel of the department for the time being.

LOOT MAIL CAR OF PACKAGES

INDIANAPOLIS, June 29.—(AP.)—The rifling of 10 sacks of parcel post mail and some express packages destined for Indiana cities, was under investigation here today by postal authorities.

The loot, taken from a storage car on Big Four train No. 34, probably had a value of several hundred dollars, according to A. C. Garrigus, postal inspector.

HOLDUP VICTIM ACCUSES TWO

Two alleged holdup men were arraigned in Central Police Court today as the result of the alertness and good memory of Mike White, owner of a restaurant at 2026 Fifth avenue.

White was held up last Saturday in his restaurant. In court today, he identified John Sleporitz, 23, of 4611 Liberty avenue, and the latter's brother, Adam, 21, as the robbers. He said they gained entrance to the cellar of his restaurant, and when he went there to lock up, they held him up. He grappled with the men, but they fled.

Yesterday White saw the Sleporitz brothers in West Carson street and demanded their arrest. Magistrate J. W. McGowan held John for court on charges of aggravated assault and battery, entering and attempted robbery. Adam was held over.

Mayor, Council Leave, City Hubbub Subsides

With Council adjourned until July 23 and Mayor McNair leaving on a brief vacation, an unnatural peace settled over City Hall today.

Council is subject to recall in case of emergency and there is a feeling about the City-County Building that when the Mayor returns next week anything is likely to happen.

He has been threatening to swear in a new member of the Traction Conference Board and remove Chairman Charles A. Finley, using the police power, if necessary. Council yesterday refused to remove Finley for Kermit McFarland, newspaper man, named by the Mayor for the job. The appointee, himself, had requested negative action.

Some of the department heads have not been behaving the way the Mayor wants them to in regard to certain matters of city business, and the weight of his displeasure may fall upon them suddenly.

The Mayor leaves today for a short stay with his family at Money Island, N. J. The McNairs have a cottage by the seashore.

Mayor McNair will speak Tuesday noon at the National Arts Club, New York, in regard to the Pittsburgh graded tax plan.

Car Crashes Pole, Two Women Hurt

Mrs. Hannah K. Heim and her daughter, Mrs. Ruth Bissett, both of Allison Park, R. D. No. 1, were injured slightly today when their car, driven by Mrs. Heim, knocked over a telegraph pole on Evergreen road. Mrs. Heim told police that she became faint while driving.

STREET NOISES DROWN M'NAIR TOLL SPIEL

Mayor McNair's anti-tube toll troupe today was recovering from the strain of its latest campaign appearance.

At a meeting on the steps of Fifth Avenue High School last night members of the entourage strove valiantly to be heard above the noise of passing street cars, auto traffic, fire crackers and neighborhood children on rasping roller skates.

Though the high temperature was given as the reason for the outdoor assembly, the small audience sweltering on the sidewalk was of the opinion that the cool auditorium of the school would have been more comfortable.

Charles H. Ingersoll, former head of the watch company, candidate for Governor of New Jersey, and ardent single taxer, spoke briefly, saying the levy on tube traffic would be a form of triple taxation and should not be tolerated.

Other Democrats who spoke were Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston and Theodore Moritz, McNair's secretary.

The crowd, seated on the curbstone and convenient porch steps, seemed little aroused over the fact that South Hills residents face assessments on their visits to the downtown section.

The most enthusiastic listener was a slightly inebriated gentleman who applauded vigorously when Moritz swung into lusty praise of President Roosevelt.

Indiana Countian Hurt in Collision

Grace Steele, 29, of Valley View Farm, Indiana County, suffered leg injuries when the cars of Leo Rosenbauer, 720 Haslett street, and Benjamin Fulton, 6514½ Apple street, collided in Bennett street, near Murtland avenue. She was taken to Pittsburgh Hospital.

Ickes Cuts Short McGovern's Oratory in Bargain for PWA Loan

Administrator Says: 'Save Us Speech, We'll Pay You'

Attorneys for the Public Works Administration and Allegheny County were pouring over a contract today, which, when signed by the Allegheny County Authority, will make approximately $25,000,000 available for expenditure here for public improvements.

The money was promised, Commissioner C. C. McGovern said, by Administrator Harold L. Ickes when Gov. Gifford Pinchot, Joseph C. Trees, chairman of the Authority; J. P. Fife, county solicitor; John M. Rice, consulting engineer, and McGovern visited Ickes Wednesday in Washington.

ICKES INTERVIEW

McGovern said:

"Gov. Pinchot should get the credit. He took us there and put it up to Mr. Ickes for a definite answer, 'yes' or 'no.' Ickes said:

"'Who is the spokesman?'

"Pinchot said 'McGovern is.'

"I started to speak, and had gone about four or five minutes when Administrator Ickes said:

"'Mr. McGovern, save us from the oratory and we'll give you the money.'

"It was a lot of money to stop talking, so I did."

McGovern explained that Ickes later took him by the arm and asserted:

"And you'll have to take it or leave it."

This the Commissioner construed as meaning Ickes was too busy to be disturbed by local difficulties, and didn't want to hear them.

SPEED CONTRACT

The contract is to be signed as soon as it is ready, which may be within a few days, McGovern added. The Authority, of which Trees, William McK. Reed and Press C. Dowler are members, will organize and accept the money, and begin planning for the work within a short time.

McGovern announced the loan, of which 30 per cent will be a free grant, at the opening of a protest meeting against tolls to be placed at the south end of the Liberty Tubes. Representatives from Mt. Lebanon, Dormont, Brookline, Castle Shannon and Beechview appeared to protest.

Representatives of McKeesport, Clairton, Carnegie, Homestead and other sections appeared in favor of the tolls insofar as they would make possible the improvements.

A sub-committee of the protesting groups will meet the Commissioners next Thursday at noon and attempt to iron out differences.

12,000 TO GET JOBS

Among the proponents were Robert Ostermeyer, Mayor of Clairton; P. H. McGuire, of Homestead; Watson McKee, of McKeesport; James H. Duff and A. W. McMillen, Carnegie; Harry Shapera, representing land owners in the South Hills; P. C. Weller, representing land owners holding in excess of $300,000 of Mt. Lebanon property, and Walter Rosenbaum.

The proponents pointed out that land was already overtaxed, and that while tolls were not most desirable, the improvements are necessary, 12,000 men will get jobs, and everyone in the county will benefit by the influx of the money.

Walter Rosenbaum, downtown merchant, said:

"The government is in the position of the banker and is dictating the terms.

"I feel that they have decided how the allocaion is to be made and the way of self-liquidation is by tolls. I understand that is the way the government wants it.

Commissioner Says: 'It's a Lot of Money, So I Quit'

"With $30,000,000 sent into the county, there will be no one who will not benefit by it."

Attorney Adams took the stand that tolls are a step backward, that the placing of tolls on the Liberty Tubes is an unjust discrimination against the users of the highway; that the administration and expenditure of the proposed tolls is to be vested in a creation of the County Commissioners—the Authority—which is perpetual and unlimited as to capital and which has no responsibility to the Commissioners or the people.

ABUSES FEARED

Pointing out the possibilities of abuse and corruption without check, Adams asserted such powers could easily be employed for public abuses. He further objected because the Liberty Tubes were bought and financed from public funds and are now to be employed as a "financial angel."

Commissioners C. M. Barr and William D. Mansfield answered Adams, pointing out that the other projects not allied with the South Hills projects were self-liquidating themselves, and George Richardson, bridge engineer, was called to explain that the estimated revenue from the other projects would pay for these within a year of South Hills group.

To the argument that the South Hills taxpayers had paid for the Liberty Tubes in taxes, Barr explained that that district paid only 8.8 per cent of the taxes of the county.

Woman, 2 Children Hurt in Auto Wreck

A woman and two children were injured last night when an auto driven by B. F. Fahnestock, 54, of 739 Wallace avenue, Wilkinsburg, backed from a driveway at 2400 West Liberty avenue into the auto of J. Thomson, 36, 919 Manton way, police reported. Both cars overturned.

Mrs. Thomson, her son, Donold, 3, and Harry Bright, 5, of 918 Manton way, passengers in Thomson's car, were treated at South Side Hospital for bruises.

HEINZ, BABCOCK IN OAKMONT REGATTA

Prominent Families Represented in Gold Cup Races

Pittsburgh's most prominent families will be represented in the William Randolph Hearst Gold Cup outboard motorboat regatta to be held at Oakmont two weeks from tomorrow and Sunday, under auspices of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and the Oakmont Boat Club.

Two of the entries so far received are from Rust Heinz and O. H. Babcock, Jr. The former is the son of Howard Heinz and the latter a nephew of E. V. Babcock, former Mayor of Pittsburgh. Both are enthusiastic motorboat followers and attended the international races at Miami, Fla., last winter.

Heinz is a student at Philips-Andover Academy in Massachusetts and will compete in the intercollegiate races in the East tomorrow. He plans to enter the entire Philips-Andover racing team in the local event, which already has attracted the best drivers from East, Middle West and South, and has engendered so much interest among sports followers that more than 100,000 spectators are expected to line the banks of the Allegheny during the two days' water carnival.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., June 29.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

And they lay to rest Jimmy Wedell, died as a soldier in the discharge of his duty, for he was teaching somebody else how to fly. When you realize aviation as the greatest advancement in our times, and America as spending the most money, yet our whole government, whole Army, whole Navy, had to wait to see how fast they could fly, till Jimmy Wedell (through his own personality and personal honesty got financial backing from a generous and public spirited Mr. Williams), would make the plane who knows but what aviation might not be permanently set back 100 miles an hour, through the loss of this fellow, with the knowledge that was buried with him. Such men should be grabbed up at once and put into our government service. He had one thing that was in keeping with all great aviators and that was his modesty. Yours,

WILL.

As approved by PWA, the projects include the Liberty Tunnels toll plaza, about which a controversy has been raging among residents of the South Hills, many of whom protest the plan to charge tolls through tubes.

The projects not approved, Ickes said, were vetoed because engineering and financial experts did not qualify them as economically feasible at this time.

The county has 30 years in which to repay the loan.

In addition to the projects carried under the supervision of the County Authority, the Federal government will finance these improvements:

New hospital for County Home at Woodville, $2,100,000; Allegheny General Hospital loan, $2,000,000, and Juvenile Court and Detention Home, $350,000.

GRANT REDUCED

Engineers who have been studying the proposed projects have estimated that in addition to giving employment to at least 12,000 men, the following materials will be needed:

Two hundred and eighty thousand yards concrete; 9,000,000 pounds of steel reinforcing; 50,000 tons fabricated steel; 250,000 feet of concrete piles; 200,000 feet of stone facing; 200,000 lineal feet of curbing; 1,000,000 square feet of sidewalks; 500,000 square yards of paving; 1,000,000 pounds of cast steel; 2,500,000 barrels of cement; 280,000 tons of sand, and 560 tons of gravel.

All of this material, under the National Recovery Administration rules, would necessarily have to be purchased in Allegheny County, which would mean extra jobs for men in steel plants, cement mills, quarries and fabricating plants of all kinds.

WOODVILLE IMPROVEMENTS

In the expenditure of the $2,100,000 on the County Home at Woodville, the following projects are listed:

Additions and alterations to the building comprising male mental hospital, new dormitory for mental hospital nurses, new dormitory for tuberculosis hospital nurses; new hospital unit, infectuous diseases; new farm colony unit and barns, new laundry, alteration of present laundry into a dormitory, addition to surgical ward, new building for cold storage and extension of gas, electricity, water and sewer systems.

A total of $715,843 of the total sum will be spent for labor; $1,087,888 for materials and the balance for engineers, architects, legal services, interest and contractors' profit.

It is estimated that at least 450 men will be employed directly on the project while another 300 or 400 will benefit in the fabricating and materials end.

Of the $2,000,000 to be expended to complete the $8,000,000 Allegheny General Hospital, it is estimated that almost half of this will go into labor. The balance, it is estimated, will provide materials, engineering costs, etc. Nearly 400 men will be employed directly on the project, according to estimates.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

A Coraopolis girl and a trio of young Sewickleyites will give a week-end visitor from Erie, a young bride-to-be, a taste of Pittsburgh hospitality (or, should one say, of Coraopolis and Sewickley hospitality?)

The to-be-feted guest is Remle Hess, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Elmer Hess, of Erie, who arrived last night to be the week-end house guest of her Vassar roommate, Helen Robinson, daughter of the O. D. Robinsons, of Coraopolis.

Remle will marry Ensign Phillip W. Cann, United States Navy, the son of Mrs. H. S. Cann, of Auburn, Me., Tuesday, July 31, in St. Paul's Cathedral, Erie, with Bishop John C. Ward officiating.

This afternoon Helen is giving a bridge-luncheon for her classmate both at Vassar and the Baldwin School in Bryn Mawr at her home. Helen did some work at the University School late this winter, by the way, to make up for the time lost out of Vassar—she was in Miami Beach this winter with her family.

Will Be Honored At Edgeworth Club

This evening Nancy and Louise Lippincott will give a dinner in the Edgeworth Club honoring Remle Hess, and tomorrow night Jane Noaker, of Sewickley, will entertain at dinner in her home.

At the wedding Helen Robinson will be one of the bridesmaids, and Richard Davidson, of Coraopolis, and Jack Hermann, of Pittsburgh, will be among the ushers.

Edna Hess will be her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids will also include Jeanne Griffin, Lydia McBrier, Helen Bonney, Margharita Curtze and Betty Winkler, all of Erie.

John Stewart, of Warren, will be best man, and George Clemens, Russell Roth, David Dunn and John Chaffee, all of Erie, will be the remaining ushers.

After the wedding July 31, there'll be a wedding dinner at the Hess home in Erie and a reception.

Third Saudek Concert To Be Given Tonight

Tonight's the night of the third of the concerts on the Hotel Schenley lawn, played by Victor Saudek's Little Symphony Orchestra.

And everyone, particularly members of the College Club, will hope all day that the "jinx" will take a night off. On the opening night and Tuesday night deluges of rain have driven the audience and players indoors.

Chairman of the College Club night this evening is Mrs. Joseph Hunt Bowman. Aides will be Louise Bowman Metzger, Louise Borland, Eugenie Harshbarger, Gwendolin Niemann, Marion McNary, Mrs. Kirkland Wiley Todd, Mrs. Robert Ellis, Mrs. Wilson A. Scott, Mrs. Harold S. Borden, Mrs. Alvin S. Riley and Mrs. John Peterson.

Mary Agate Brown To Wed on July 28

Miss Mary Agate Brown, daughter of Mrs. Charles W. Brown, of Sewickley, and George L. Collord will be married July 28 in the Brown home with the Rev. Dr. Owen Davies Odell, pastor of the Sewickley Presbyterian Church, as officiant.

The William B. Schillers will give a dinner tomorrow night in the Allegheny Country Club at which the honor guests will be their son and new daughter-in-law, the junior W. B. Schillers. Before their marriage April 27 Mrs. Schiller, Jr., was Kathleen Miller, of Little Falls, N. Y.

At that important social event tomorrow, the wedding of Elizabeth Lawther Odell, daughter of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Owen Davies Odell, of Sewickley, and Philip Chabot Smith, of London, to take place at 5:30 o'clock in the Sewickley Presbyterian Church, of which the bride's father is pastor, John Chabot Smith, of London, will be his brother's best man.

Christopher Gerould, of Princeton, N. J.; James Valeau Quinn, of New Rochelle, and Robert E. Lawther, of Dubuque, Ia.; Curtis Campaigne, Jr., and James Campaigne, both of Montclair, N. J.; Edward O'Neill III, Andrew K. Black III and G. Marshall Hamilton, all of Sewickley, will be ushers.

Miss McLaughlin Will Marry on July 17

St. Paul's Cathedral will be the scene for the marriage of Miss Mary Louise McLaughlin, who has named Tuesday, July 17, as the date for her marriage to Raymond Charles Schnuth, of Chicago. Miss McLaughlin is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Leo McLaughlin, of Broughton street, and her fiance is the son of Mrs. Rose Schnuth, of Elizabeth boulevard, Wilkinsburg.

The bride-elect's cousin, the Rev. Leo A. McCrory, is to solemnize the marriage that morning.

Summer Homes Of Socialites Increase

The 1934 Summer Social Register, which has just made its appearance, contains a total of 13,089 families having summer addresses, an increase of 186 over last year. There has been a marked decrease in the number of families spending the summer abroad, a decline that has been noticeable since 1930 when the number was 1,350. Last year the figure was 824, which has dropped to 716 for this year.

Seashore resorts continue to be popular and show an increase this year, there being 5,676 listed at the shore now as opposed to 5,565 in 1933. Of this number 1,680 find Long Island the ideal place while the New England Coast, including Bar Harbor, Newport and Narragansett, offers a haven of rest to 2,557. The Jersey Coast and Long Island Sound have waned a trifle in popularity this year, there being 462 in Jersey and 977 on the Sound at the present time as compared to 497 and 1,002 respectively last year.

Inland addresses hold the lead with 6,697 families spending the summer in a variety of places, including the Adirondacks, the Western Coast States, rural New England, Canada and Western ranches, and various other spots which fail of any definite classification.

The trend toward recovery has apparently had its effect on the number of persons married which shows a definite increase from 863 in 1933 to 969 in 1934. Deaths among men have increased from 308 to 325 while those of women have dropped off very slightly from 268 to 261 this year.

The names of yachts inserted in alphabetical order in the back of the book opposite the names of their owners show a decrease from 1,251 to 1,166.

The Summer Social Register, as its name implies, gives the summer or foreign addresses of the families in the following cities when they are not to be found at the winter address appearing in the previous issues of the year: New York, Washington, Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Dayton, San Francisco, Baltimore and Buffalo.

You get that "home again" feeling when you're at The Taft. This great modern hotel spares no effort to make you comfortable. Located in Times Square—New York's center of all business and social activities. 2,000 rooms, with bath, from $2.50.

Swisshelm Tablet Is Unveiled

MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Jane Grey Swisshelm, "Pittsburgh's first newspaper woman, who secured the passage of a state law April 11, 1848 enabling married women to hold and sell property, a woman of great courage and love for humanity, a friend of the oppressed and devoted war nurse," was so memorialized when the Woman's Historical Society unveiled a bronze tablet on the Sixth avenue side of Gimbel's store, the site of her girlhood home, yesterday.

Mrs. E. D. Harshbarger, president of the society, was mistress of ceremonies and Mrs. William B. McConnell unveiled the tablet, which was accepted for the city by Mayor William N. McNair. A luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce preceded the unveiling. Here there was a program of music and speeches. The Rev. Jacob Simpson Payton offered the invocation. Maj. Robert M. Ewing, of the Western Pennsylvania Historical Society, sketched the life of Mrs. Swisshelm, Mrs. Philip Kussart told further of the life of this remarkable woman, a descendant of Lady Jane Grey, who could read and was attending school at three years of age. Other speakers were Jacques Blum and Robert Garland. The latter, also representing the Historical Society, told of other memorials in Pittsburgh.

Music was provided by Mrs. Elma B. Sulzner, a member of the hostess organization, and William Leach, who were accompanied by Edward Koontz.

The oil painting which Mrs. Swisshelm did of herself and which is now the property of the Western Pennsylvania Historical Society was used as part of the luncheon decorations.

Evening Section Is Formed at Dormont

Evening departments are blooming like summer flowers in the club world, the latest to be added being that of Dormont New Century Club. Approximately 25 junior members, following the recommendation made by the board of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, have "graduated" from the junior auxiliary and have formed an evening section in the senior club.

Mrs. C. H. Smith, a charter member of the juniors, is the newly elected chairman, and Mrs. N. H. Jones, a past president of the juniors, is the vice chairman. Mrs. John Marsden will serve as secretary-treasurer.

On Saturday Mrs. R. L. Irwin, new junior president, will be hostess at a tea which the senior board will sponsor in the clubhouse. Seventy-five invitations have been sent out to new and prospective juniors.

Pittsburghers Hot Springs Visitors

HOT SPRINGS, Va., June 29.—Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Mudge, their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Leonard S. Mudge, Mr. and Mrs. Lynn A. Smith, W. A. Albert and N. A. Eckert, Mr. and Mrs. L. Warrington Chubb and George McC. Porter, of Pittsburgh, have arrived at the Homestead, Hot Springs.

The chief item on the sports calendar this coming week will be the Independence Day tournament, which will start, however, on Monday, July 2 and carry through to the finals on Wednesday, July 4. This event, which takes place on the en-tout-cas courts of the Homestead, always attracts considerable interest on the part of the summer colony, and the usual large entry and lively competition is anticipated.

The Belgian Ambassador and Mme. Paul May are to arrive today to spend a month at the Homestead.

TIPS ON THE WEEK-END WARDROBE

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Woven string in red, black and oyster makes the coat, left above. A black linen skirt and blouse and a felt hat completes the costume.

Multi-colored tulips sprawl all over this white chiffon evening gown. The cascaded skirt has dancing slits at either side. Leaf green taffeta cords outline the neck.

THE SEASON of week-ending is at hand, and Friday night finds popular maidens all over the country tossing a few appropriate duds into a suit case and beating it for the 5:15. The English week-end, so-called, the over-Sunday visit that begins on Friday instead of Saturday noon, has come into great American popularity, come the NRA day of grace to even the busiest business girls.

It is a good notion to wear something for traveling that will be useful for whatever doings are on for daytime Sunday. The print and plain crepe dressmaker tailleur is fine for people who go to church; it is equally good for the purpose of visiting neighboring manors, and eating supper afterwards at some road restaurant.

IF YOU are intending to put the whole holiday into sports, a spectator sports suit or frock and coat will be your best traveling bet.

It will look attractive on the way to the club lockers, and afterwards, at lunch or tea, and a couple of seersucker wash dresses can be tucked into the bag for actual playing. (Seersucker refuses to crush past seemliness, no matter how tightly it is packed.)

A SOFT dinner gown of some fabric that does not muss, such as lace or chiffon, is an important week-end item. It should straddle the difference between formality and informality, so that whatever turns up for Saturday night—a big dance or just fun around the house—will not find it lacking in the proper spirit. It is a pretty serious thing to equip oneself with a gown of organza, for instance; hostesses get pettish over guests who borrow maids or electric irons to refurbish perishable models in the hectic half-hour between arrival and dinner.

Jewish Women To Entertain Prisoners

The inmates of the Western Penitentiary will be entertained with an afternoon program by the Recreation Bureau of Pittsburgh Section, National Council of Jewish Women, on Saturday at 5 o'clock. The program will include popular ballads and opera selections by Miss Gemma Casaretto, Vincent Kroen and George Toole. Miss Eleanor Garfinkel, dancer; Mrs. A. Blanc, reader, and William Beatty, magician, will complete the program.

This is the first program to be given by the bureau this season. During council's year just closed, the bureau presented programs on an average of one a month to shut-ins, underprivileged and unemployed groups. Mrs. Israel Oseroff is chairman of the bureau.

'Cellar Theater' Plays Are Presented

A "Little Theater" event took place at the "Cellar Theater," at the home of Mrs. Stewart McFarland, Brookside Farms, South Hills, yesterday, and will be repeated today . . . the presentation of three one-act plays by popular Pittsburgh playwrights, the proceeds to be used for the benefit of the Experimental Theater.

The three plays are "Bird of the Evening" by Mrs. Frances West; "Study in Blue," by Kilburn Blaisdell; and "Is There Anywhere To Go?" by Kilburn Blaisdell and Mrs. Stewart McFarland.

The cast includes Mrs. Frances West, Oliver Evans, Mrs. Stewart McFarland, Mrs. George Taylor, Kilburn Blaisdell, Miss Vera Bamford, Miss Janie Hathaway, Theodore Osborne and Miss Kathleen McFarland. Miss Hulda Lefridge and William Pyle are in charge of stage properties.

Bryson Club, Guild, Arrange Benefit

The Bryson Club and Women's Guild of St. Bernard's parish, Mt. Lebanon, will give a benefit boat ride Monday, July 16. Mrs. Robert Freyvogel and Earl Weitzel are co-chairmen of the affair.

Crittenton Home First Tag Day Tomorrow

Instead of flowers, such as are ordinarily used on tag days, the Florence Crittenton Home on its very first tag day tomorrow will have tiny Kewpie dolls for you and you and you to pin on your helpful selves. The dolls will be carried in gay baskets by the captains and their team workers, who will be seen on the city's street corners tomorrow to remind you that the Crittenton Home opens its doors to girls who have transgressed the accepted moral code. Ask any of the captains and she will tell you that $1 will maintain one girl in the home for one day and that 8½ cents will give her one meal.

Captains include Mrs. F. F. Rohrer, Mrs. G. Weber Barnes, Mrs. W. P. Barker, Mrs. E. N. Calhoun, Mrs. A. W. Sankey, Mrs. Richard Eastell, Mrs. David Demaree, Mrs. H. H. Talbot, Mrs. George Ketchum, Mrs. J. L. Coleman, Mrs. Thomas Watters, Mrs. M. Ross Gibson, Mrs. F. A. Kind and Mrs. G. A. McCulley.

Mrs. Fred Brinker is chairman of captains under Mrs. Ronald Quay Cleavenger, general chairman and president of the board.

Flash! The latest from Parisian hairdressers . . . is that women no longer DYE their hair! They TINT it as it is washed . . . with the new kind of soap that has just appeared on the market. (Just arrived in our town, we mean.)

To be explicit, Mr. Lawyer, we must say that this is a neutral soap that cleanses and tints perfectly all at the same time. Also—a good reconditioner for the hair before a new permanent.

In other words, today's magic wand to hair beauty is not via the dye-pot . . . but in a natural path that is harmless to any normal head. $2.50.

Of course . . . it's scarcely polite to sit silently in a corner munching up all your hostess' cocktail crackers as if your last meal had taken place long since! BUT . . . if you've tasted the ones we did the other night . . . you'd have been guilty of the same!

Because they're the best bites we ever had! Two kinds—"piquant" or "celery"—put up in tiny sandwich fashion and tasting a bit cheesy, although they tell us that there is no cheese present! Made in England by the famous P. and F. Company . . . and quite reasonable "for a' that and a' that!" 59c (In tin boxes . . . about 4 or 5 dozen per . . . and they keep.)

Lovely soft tie-silk scarfs that need but a hand-rolling to finish their edges and make them ready to wear! Quite the nicest thing of their kind we've seen . . . at 79c. They're packaged in cellophane . . . and come complete with the silk to finish them. All colors . . printed!

Minnie . . . Mickey . . . and the Big Bad Wolf once more put in an appearance. On deck chairs this time . . . small editions of your own, and costing $1.00. Canvas seats and backs . . . adjustable . . . baby sisters of a real deck chair, and built for small sitters!

* * *

Look us right in the eye and tell us truthfully if you haven't wished, hoped, and prayed for a shop where you could get a girdle, a slip, or some panties really FITTED? Without being bankrupt, we mean! Without waiting forever and six days besides! Yes? . . .

VIEWING THE NEW

Then this news is for you. We have found THE PLACE! Where—you can buy a girdle and know that they will shorten the bones where, when and if you need it (this is usually 25c). Where they'll put in a zipper-closing if you want it, and not try to sell you something else? (Small charge for this.) Where they always sew the shoulder straps of slips and such as well as make small darts to fit them in at the top? (This being free of charge and a godsend! Ever have a slip literally fall apart just after you bought it?)

These are just a few of the services this shop gives its customers. Most of them, as you should know, are not to be found on any other curbstones (that we know about anyway) . . . and at least, not at such prices! Garments begin at $1.00.

—DOROTHY RANDALL.

Fire Destroys Home Improved by Bonus

NEW BRIGHTON, Pa., June 29. (AP.)—Herbert Bell, of New England Hill, a World War veteran, used the money he received from the state's soldier bonus for painting and improving his cottage home.

Today, the cottage and furnishings are a mass of ruins. Fire destroyed the home with loss estimated by Bell at $3,500. His wife and their 4-year-old daughter were forced to flee in nightclothes as the fire broke out Wednesday night.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

The Private Papers of a Reporter

SAN FRANCISCO: This delightful city and I are no strangers . . . It was among my favorite stops for Mr. Pantages in the teens—1919 being my last visit at his showshop, as a song and dance juvenile . . . Long before I dreamed of trying to juggle wordage for the gazettes . . . And now 15 years later, I am back and on the rattler from Los Angeles the other night—I rocked and tossed because of the memories of those years . . . They flashed across my mind, some of them jolly thoughts, but so many of them unhappy incidents . . . At any rate, it is nice to be among these delightful people, again—and although I urged my local editors to avoid any fuss, which they planned—Mayor Rossi, in person, came to the Southern Pacific depot with oodles of others, including newspapermen . . . But the surprise that left me stranded for words—was the Fire Department's glee club led by the Chief, who struck up a special lyric to "Orchid to You" as I ankled off "The Coaster" . . . The firemen, however, had a reason to greet me, which is why I appreciated it . . . From all points in the nation came sugary telegrams from firemen—because of that recent column about them . . . And so Fire Chief Brennan and his boys said it with song . . . And on the way to the St. Francis in his machine—they let me sound the siren . . . Wheeee! . . . What a kick!

The Gettle snatchers, now doing time at San Quentin, were brought back to face another trial by Mr. Whiskers—Uncle Sam . . . They were indifferent and uppity to the Los Angeles newspapermen, and balked at posing for the hocus-focusers . . . They even attempted to destroy the cameras . . . In spite of their shoddy manners—when the scribes learned that the kidnappers were without tobacco, they contributed a tidy sum to provide them with enough smokes to last a month . . . Most newspapermen are like that . . . Personally, I'd do the same for the average criminal, I think . . . Except for those who theft a loved one.

I am weary of professional grifters, who knew me when . . . One guy, who wouldn't give me a tumble when I would have appreciated it a long time ago—has been bothering me with self-pitying letters—and how he needs money, etc. . . . And if he doesn't get it right away, his letters said, he'd kill himself . . . That was in 1932 and again 1933—everytime I hit Hollywood . . . Now he is here—and I gave him a hurry-up how-are-you on the street when I saw the touch approaching . . . A hurried one, mind you, because the big faker looked like ready money in his bib and tucker with his hair slicked down, etc. . . . So what? . . . So came another letter today—that unless he gets money he will kill himself, again . . . And that if he doesn't hear from me he'll go to my paper here and tell them he was failed . . . So my paper just told me they talked him out of suicide—right now—and urged him to wait until the new bridge opens between here and Oakland—so that the new bridge will land on page one.

When anything written here clicks with a reader, I mean when a suggestion gets over—naturally I'm happier . . . Take the one in the "If I were the Mussolini of New York" column, frinstance . . . The item ran something like this: "I'd see to it that orphans and the aged in various institutions were treated to the best movie or play in town every week, not once every year when the circus comes to town" . . . It was merely an item—but editors leaped on it . . . And sent me a clipping, which says in part: "The idea of having all the city's parentless kiddies and the old folks attend the movies free of charge was made by Winchell, the Broadway commentator, and met with a speedy response . . . So my thanks to them and to the theater managers—for being human beings . . . The suggestion is now in effect!

Add thumbnail descriptions:

Wm. Tilden: An old windmill in a storm . . . Ruth Etting: Honey in high C . . . N. T. G.: Director in a nudist camp . . . Max Baer: The mailed fist—perfumed! . . . Carnera: Best elevator man in town — Down up, down, up . . . Eleanor Powell: The Morse code with laughing eyes—and those limbs, Ahhh! . . . Katharine Hepburn: Sis Hopkins meets Hattie Carnegie, the dressmaker . . . Wheeler and Woolsey: Two of a kind—when one is too many . . . Mae West: An Albino canteloupe patch . . . Irving Berlin: A toothpick that needs a shave . . . Jean Harlow: Luna Park on a Saturday night . . . Mussolini: A face playing hookey from a Roman coin . . . W. W.: A white-haired police whistle.

Engaged After Turn-Down

According to Gus Kahn, the lyricist, Samuel Goldwyn was looking for a young singer for "Whoopie" two years ago. Kahn and Walter Donaldson, his song-writing teammate, suggested Harriette Lake from the cast of "Of Thee I Sing."

"Never heard of her," Goldwyn is reported to have answered. "We need a name."

A short time ago the producer commissioned Kahn and Donaldson to write the tunes for his new Eddie Cantor picture.

It was Harriette Lake, now in the movies as Ann Sothern.

Movie Trick Wins Call Of Law

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, June 29.—Hello. Almost as regular as clock-work (and that's fairly even) a new racket is exposed in the movie village. This time the Fox studio is in the so-called "middle" of a gyp routine that had detectives of two cities in considerable of an uproar.

The property man on "Baby Takes a Bow," Shirley Temple's latest riot for Fox, got tangled up with the law when it became necessary to reproduce several tickets as used on the New York Central Railroad for a choo-choo sequence in the yarn. "Prop" man Charley Baker borrowed some tickets from New York City to Buffalo to be copied. When the studio duplicates were used, however, they were marked Niagara Falls and bore the name of "New York General" instead of "Central."

An extra on the set got hold of a pair of these prop tickets and, all in fun, shipped them to a New York friend. Unhappily, the friend tried to get a refund on them at Grand Central Station in New York!

The first the studio knew of the mess was when two local badge-toters came to investigate. The Los Angeles law went away satisfied when it was learned that the New York Central authorized the reproductions—but the New York culprit is still in jail!

Lucy Ward, former script clerk to Erich von Stroheim, has accomplished the so-called "impossible" by her first original story with the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Lucy's story is called "Cargo De Luxe"—and already there are nibbles from the movie producers. Bravo, Lucy.

Wanderings Around Hollywood: Try to IMAGINE the embarrassment of a major studio when three acrobats were hired for $50 per day each, performed AMAZING tricks all morning, then went to lunch—and when the director returned to the set he found three studio electricians on the trapezes going through even a more daring routine! . . . One of the wealthiest comedians in the business ACTUALLY buys his suits in the small boys' dept. of stores and refuses to pay more than $20 an outfit! . . . Alice White will chatter in "Gift of Gab" for Universal. Sidney (columnist) Skolsky will play a bit (he's too tiny for a ibg role) and Associate Producer Rian James will also don the grease paint for a day . . . Cy Bartlett had the John Balabans to the fisticuffs Friday night . . . If you read the intention to wed notices the other day you probably missed Miriam Bilenkin, known as Marion "Peanuts" Byron on the screen. Lew Breelow is the lucky feller . . . Kathryne Hankin, the chorus gal, is due to step from the kicking ranks and land as a REAL actress . . . That CRACK about all the wives of comedians trying to show off with bigger diamonds brought a wire from Mrs. Jack Pearl: "Hold everything until I get there!"

Universal has signed little Juanita Quigley, who boasts of two summers and three winters, (making her 2½ years old), as Shirley Temple's latest rival—if she's to have one . . . Jean Muir climbed another notch toward stardom.

Peeking over Hollywood's back fence . . . Ruth Dwyer, once a leading woman in the flickers, has now opened an agency office . . . Elissa Landi's been autographing her latest novel at one of the downtown department stores . . . Paul Page has a nice role in "Have a Heart," which Dave Butler is directing for M-G-M . . . Universal is thinking of starring Onslow Stevens in "The Magnificent Obsession" . . . Isabel Dawn dished out a cocktail party last Sunday, at her Arcadia estate

Thrill Film Best in Warner

By KARL KRUG

Jimmy Gleason and Edna May Oliver, the same pair who solved the "Penguin Pool Murder" so neatly, do it again in "Murder on the Blackboard," a slick little mystery piece which is supposed to be playing second fiddle to "He Was Her Man" in the Warner's new double bill.

As Hildegard "Snoopy" Withers and Inspector Piper, Miss Oliver and Mr. Gleason leaven "Murder on the Blackboard" with much the same brand of comedy which made "Penguin Pool Murder" such an effective picture. The dialogue is bright and the casting fine, and the suspense is maintained until the last few minutes.

As its title implies, "Murder on the Blackboard" is localed in a schoolhouse, and it is a musical scale clue chalked on the blackboard by a slain teacher that enables Snoopy to track down a killer who knows the value of a practically fool-proof alibi. Told with a surprisingly human twist throughout, the gruesome element is repeatedly smothered by the laugh-making values of the two leading players.

THRILLS, CHILLS, COMEDY

While there is plenty of hokum afloat in this one, Snoopy uses more or less logical methods to narrow the suspects from four to one, and by a clever bit of psychology traps the murderer. There are plenty of thrills and chills in that final sequence, yet the atmosphere of comedy always predominates.

The production, while anything but pretentious or elaborate, is well put together, and the picture is one of those small triumphs which sometimes slip into town practically unheralded.

Some fairly good acting by Jimmy Cagney, who is getting fat, and Joan Blondell, his old running mate, goes pretty much to waste in "He Was Her Man," a weak story of a safe-cracker who decided to go straight and then found that he couldn't put his past behind him.

MR. CAGNEY STILL CAGNEY

The chief asset of "He Was Her Man" is the fact that the producers withstood any temptation to burden it with a happy ending. Instead of living happily ever after, Cagney is "taken for a ride," and Miss Blondell becomes the bride of a simple fisherman in the village where "her man" has been hiding out. The Cagney performance is cut fairly well to the Cagney type, but Miss Blondell is called upon for more of a dramatic display than she is generally accustomed to giving.

The story, while mostly a drab affair, is sometimes lightened by the lines given to Cagney, and there are competent performances by Victor Jory as a Portuguese fisherman, and Frank Craven, old legitimate star, who fills the role of an undercover man for the gang of racketeers seeking revenge on Cagney.

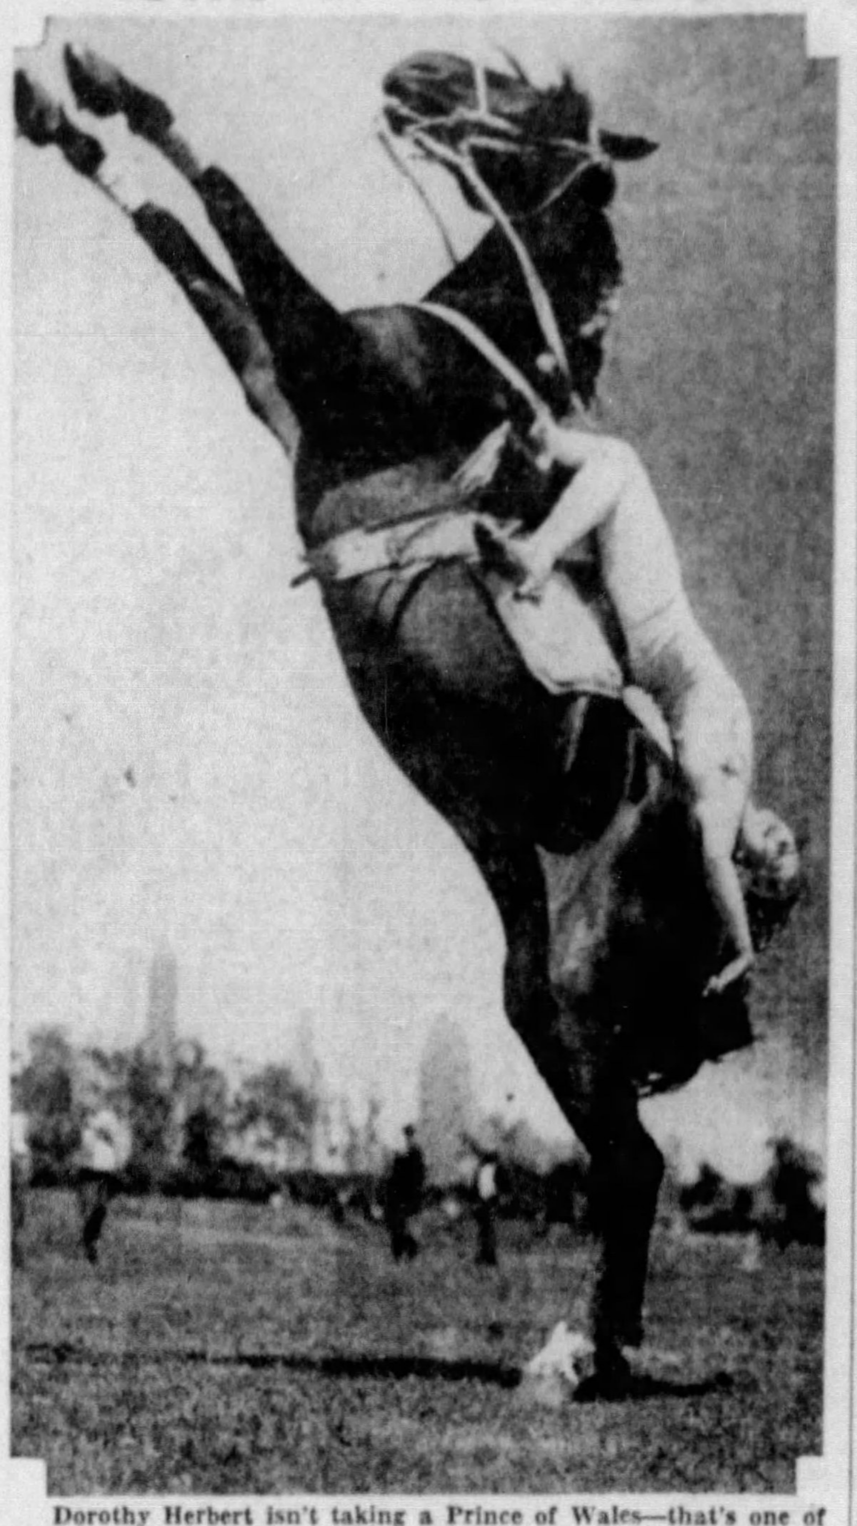
Stars of the Arena



Dorothy Herbert isn't taking a Prince of Wales—that's one of the riding tricks she does in the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus, here next week, July 5, 6 and 7.

Contralto to Sing In Concert

The third "Pop" concert by the Little Symphony Orchestra, Victor Saudek, conducting on the Hotel Schenley lawn tonight, will feature Caroline Hunt Mahaffey, contralto, as soloist, in honor of the College Club of Pittsburgh. Mrs. Mahaffey will sing the aria, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," from Saint-Saens opera, "Samson and Delilah," and Weatherly's "Danny Boy." The orchestra numbers include:

Overture, "Russian and Ludmilla" . . Glinka
Melodies from "Music in the Air" . . . . Kern
Waltz, "Tales From the Vienna Woods" . . . . Strauss
Fantasy from "Tannhauser" . . . . Wagner
Petite Suite . . . . Debussy
The Grand Canyon Suite . . . . Ferde Grofe
Military Polonaise . . . . Chopin

Story by Mrs. Rothstein On Fulton Screen

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Graced by one of the best-acted portrayals of character that Spencer Tracy has ever given on the screen, "Now I'll Tell," came to the Fulton yesterday. "Now I'll Tell" is a film version of the book by Mrs. Arnold Rothstein, and the action of the picture supposedly parallels incidents in the life of Rothstein, whose death from shooting remains one of the unsolved mysteries in the New York police department to this day.

The picture is understood to adhere pretty closely to the text of the book. There is no character named Rothstein in it, and the gambler whose career is given in much detail is treated to quite a thick gloss of innate nobility. He is pictured as a square shooter mostly—meaning sometimes, but not always.

DRAMA COMES LATE

Dramatic sequences do not come until the picture is well along, the preliminaries going into such things as the marriage of Tracy and Helen Twelvetrees, her desire for respectability, his promises, broken as soon as made, to give up gambling, the introduction of the third angle of a triangle in the person of Alice Faye, and the growth of Tracy to "big shot" proportions in the underworld.

Trouble begins when he learns that a rival gambler, whom he always has out-smarted, plans to trim him. A boxer he is backing is to "lie down" in the fifth round. So he bribes the other to "take a flop" in the second. When the winner is "taken for a ride" by his enemies, he realizes for the first time the meaning of the proverb about playing with fire.

When his "girl" is killed and himself injured in an automobile wreck, his wife, patience exhausted, leaves for Paris and divorce. With her departure goes luck, too, and our hero comes into stretch not only broke but owing a $200,000 gambling debt. Meeting his creditor, his old enemy, by appointment, he is shot and fatally wounded, in the ensuing quarrel.

IS GAME TO THE END

It is a "game-to-the-end" finish of one who is made to seem a good guy at heart, whose final acts include provision for his ex-wife and a stipulation that a certain down-and-outer be not permitted to starve.

While, to be "historical," the film must necessarily have a tragic ending, it is mostly in the average routine dramatic key, with a generous sprinkling of comedy, highlighted by the carefree, nonchalant type built up by Tracy, so that his relinquishment of life with a grand flourish appears the most natural finale.

Miss Twelvetrees, Robert Gleckler, Miss Faye and G. P. Huntley, Jr., give excellent support. Shirley Temple appears briefly, and Miss Faye, in the character of a singer, gives her vocal talents a little exercise.

Romance of a Song

"Ooooooh—
"He floats through the air with the greatest of ease,
"The daring young man on the flying trapeze . . ."

BACK IN 1916, a young man stood on a corner outside of Brandon-Durrell's department store in South Bend, Ind., and listened to the singing of a group of curbstone Evangelists. They had a throaty, raucous, grating quality to their singing, and the young man listened to them for some time.

When they left, he left with them. He followed them for several hours, always listening to that peculiar something in their voices. When he reached home that night, he was convinced that he had stumbled upon a piece of vocal tomfoolery that might some day bring results.

It did bring results; definitely and completely. That young man was Walter O'Keefe, today a musicomedy and radio star, and one of the most brilliant lyric writers in America. For years before he hit the show business, Walter imitated those curbstone singers. And even when he was an established night club favorite down in Barney Gallant's, he'd often do that funny, throaty imitation for those of us who requested it.

I don't mean to imply that Walter's imitation was his greatest asset. Not at all. It was simply an amusing item in the O'Keefe bag of tricks . . .

Early in 1930, Bing Crosby arrived at Walter's home with an armful of records that he had bought in various spots. Bing and Walter started playing those records. And both of them were mightily amused by an ancient number called "The Man on the Flying Trapeze."

The more he heard the song, the better O'Keefe liked it. And it suddenly struck him that, if he revised the number and wedded it to the technique of those singing Evangelists back in South Bend, he might have an excellent piece of material.

And that's exactly what happened. Walter took the first verse and chorus and from there on modernized the lyric. The original "Man on the Flying Trapeze" had long since languished in the common domain, meaning that there was no copyright and that the number was public property.

As I remember it, Walter O'Keefe tried out the song at Barney's cafe during the second show on a Sunday night. Heywood Broun, Ed Mori, Bill Ingold and a number of others were present, including myself. And we all went daffy about the number.

Walter O'Keefe became a star in the "Third Little Show" and introduced the song in that attraction. It immediately became one of the high spots of the show.

After that, O'Keefe went on the air. His first rendition of his version of "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" resulted in enough mail to warrant several repeats. Then he did it two or three times with Rudy Vallee, who sensed the great value of the song. And Rudy finally took the number himself—always giving O'Keefe proper credit in the wise Vallee manner—and popularized it still further.

Whereupon the song was swept into nation-wide popularity. The Robbins Music Corp. published the O'Keefe version, and it began to sell in fine shape. Walter promptly assigned the royalties to his wife, thinking it would supply her with a little pin money. The pin has since developed into a pitchfork.

Meanwhile, other publishers were busy. Learning that "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" was in the public domain, no less than 13 music houses issued the thing. They couldn't take the real O'Keefe version, of course, but nobody could stop them from publishing the old original number.

Accordingly—and we really couldn't do without our dash of irony—Walter O'Keefe gets plenty of raps in the mail these days. They come from people who fail to buy the authentic copy as published by Robbins, and who want to know why their copy of the song doesn't contain the words that O'Keefe and Vallee sing! . . .

The whole thing is a very strange case. "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" was written originally as a straight number some 50 or 60 years ago. I don't know the name of the author, and I don't think anyone else does, either. But whoever he was, he poured out his heart in a song that we now howl at in great glee.

As far as O'Keefe is concerned, success breeds criticism. I laughed like the devil the other day when I picked up one of the better magazines and saw the following spew emitted by an alleged critic:

"They are doing some pretty nasty things to that other classic, 'The Man on the Flying Trapeze,' nowadays. Walter O'Keefe ruins it by overplaying, pointing, mugging, and distorting both the melody and the words . . . The original song is funny enough not to need gagging up by Broadway comedians."

Such hooey! But all in all, what's the difference? It all adds to the romance of a song.

The romance of a song. I like that phrase. Think of all the ingredients. An original author whose very name can't be traced . . . A boy on a South Bend corner . . . A boy who makes good in the big city . . . A record that Bing Crosby happened to buy . . . A try-out in a village cabaret . . . and on and on and on.

Remember those things the next time; the next time you sing:

"Ooooooooh—
"He floats through the air with the greatest of ease,

FLASH—The Christy Wilberts have told it to a St. Louis judge!

The lovely Ruth Miller, former dance producer of the Stanley and Enright theaters here, more recently in charge of the line routines in the Ambassador, St. Louis, has been granted a divorce from Christy in the Missouri metropolis.

Wilbert, until a few years ago, was a member of the Warner's Pittsburgh publicity department, and is now employed in the same capacity by the Skouras Brothers in St. Louis. The couple recently spent a short vacation in Pittsburgh, motoring here from St. Louis, and news of their split likely will come as a surprise to their many local friends.

FILM 'DOUBLES' DUE HERE

Those practically unsung heroes of Hollywood, the "doubles," are well represented in the "Four Queens of the Air" act, due in Kennywood Park July 22. For instance:

La Verne Whitthof did Sally Eilers' daredevil stuff in "State Fair." It was La Verne you saw in the trapeze work in that picture, and she includes part of the same routine in the act coming here.

Lawrence Vess, son of the manager of the "Four Queens," was El Brendel's double in "Other Men's Women," and also worked as a double in "I Loved You Wednesday."

Meinert De Orle, a clown with the Eugene Troupe in Kennywood recently, played one of the monkeys in the first Tarzan picture.

ENDORSED PHOTOPLAYS

Standing prominently on those endorsed films recommended by the Motion Picture Bureau of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae is Marion Davies' "Operator 13," a Cosmopolitan production which recently closed a very successful week in the Penn, and which will soon start its second runs in the Pittsburgh district. The report says:

"'Operator 13' is a grand example of just what can be done in the way of making entertainment interesting and at the same time clean. Here is a picture indorsed for both juvenile and adult audiences . . . Marion Davies, whom the late Robert W. Chambers had in mind as his heroine for the screen version of his story, contributes a delightful performance in this new characterization . . . The producers have reason to be proud of 'Operator 13,' and we hope it will enjoy the boxoffice success which it greatly deserves."

Leap Into Trapeze Net Rough on Neck

By LLOYD PANTAGES

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, June 29.—From New York and the CHARLES M'ARTHUR-BEN HECHT opera "Crime Without Passion," comes the following nifty: It would seem that a stunt girl, MISS MICKIE KING, FAMOUS for her work on the flying trapeze in circuses, found it necessary to LEAP from a trapeze into a net for a certain scene. After many takes of the shot MISS KING was interviewed and gave forth the ensuing comment:

"It doesn't hurt much but makes the skin calloused on the back of my neck so I can't wear evening gowns after a while."

How sad.

Even though HELEN MACK lost nine pounds during the first three weeks of filming "You Belong To Me," at Paramount, she would like it to be known that she has ABSOLUTELY no illusions about an actress giving all to her art (such as the nine pounds) but rather, when she is before the camera, such a fine case of PLAIN AND FANCY jitters sets in, FOOD ceases to be nutritious to her being.

HELEN TRENHOLM, now emoting in the Brethern Warners' "The Case of the Howling Dog," is the FIRST stage actress on record who was signed for the cinema but with a SINGLE day of Broadway experience to her credit. MISS T. eventually hit the Great White Way from Montreal in "Strange Orchestra," which lasted, for the benefit of the innocent pewhile, but ONE performance. Fortunately for the lady, a Warner talent scout CAUGHT her emoting and signed her then and there.

JUNIOR DURKIN, of the cinema for practically all his years, is attempting to become TRENT DURKIN, seeing as how his manager, who is a numerology fiend, feels that a MONICKER CHANGE will bring BIGGER AND BETTER luck his way. An epicurean secret of old Kentucky . . . beaten biscuits tasted much more delicious when spread with butter which was properly beaten or whipt.

now KRAFT offers you this epicurean delicacy . . . a NEW butter with INSTANT FLAVOR

● A few skilled chefs, a few great epicures knew this secret of butter flavor: fine butter properly whipt tastes much, much better, and its delicious flavor is enjoyed instantly.

Kraft created Chiffon whipt Butter to bring this epicurean secret of flavor to you. In the great Kraft creameries the finest selected, pasteurized cream is churned. Then the butter is properly whipt, a new operation scientifically developed by Kraft dairy experts. This is the secret of its superb instant flavor, its easy-to-spread, easy-to-cream texture. Proper whipping distributes the flavor elements through every bit of the butter. The instant Chiffon Butter touches the taste buds on your tongue you enjoy all its delicious, freshly-churned flavor.

Share this epicurean secret of finer butter flavor. Ask your grocer for a pound . . . two pounds . . . of Chiffon Butter, created by Kraft for your enjoyment.

Chiffon WHIPT PURE Butter

Spreads Easier

Chiffon Butter spreads more easily, more smoothly, than ordinary butter—yet it keeps its form in warm weather. Easy to make sandwiches with this delicious butter.

Creams More Quickly

Chiffon Butter creams in much less time and much more easily than ordinary butter. Saves time and work in making sauces and cakes. And the Chiffon Butter flavor makes all good foods taste better.

Chiffon Butter

Economical

Chiffon Butter is economical, as you will appreciate when you see the big Chiffon package—nearly a third larger than the usual half pound of butter—because this butter is whipt!

mounds. Pour hot water over bread crumbs. Add molasses, suet, flour, soda, spices, currants, salt and egg well beaten. Turn into greased mold, cover with greased paper and steam steadily for two and a half hours. Serve with hot milk or sweet sauce.

LYDIA M. MARKLE,
Boggs avenue.

PRUNE WHOLE WHEAT BREAD

Three-fourths cup cake flour.
One and one-half cups whole wheat flour.
Three-fourths cup dark brown sugar.
One cup sour milk.
One teaspoon baking powder.
One-half teaspoon soda.
One cup pitted and chopped prunes.
One-half cup chopped nut meats.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One egg.

Beat egg, add brown sugar and mix well. Add milk. Soak prunes over night in small amount of water. Drain well. Add prunes and nut meats to sifted dry ingredients. Then add to first mixture. Mix well. Let raise 20 minutes. Bake 45 minutes at 325 degrees F.

MRS. CHARLES C. GRESSANG,
214 Montrose Terrace, Emsworth.

CREOLE SAUCE FOR LIMA BEANS

Two cups tomato pulp.
Two onions minced.
Two green peppers minced.
One tablespoon salt.
One-fourth teaspoon pepper.
One-half cup molasses.
One teaspoon mustard.

Cook tomatoes, onions and pepper together for 15 minutes. Add other ingredients and stir until thoroughly mixed. Pour on lima beans which have been soaked and parboiled. Bake for one hour.

MRS. FANNIE CROY,
3111 Landis street, Carlton Station.

BLACKBERRY JAM CAKE

One-half cup shortening.
One cup brown sugar.
Three eggs.
One and three-fourths cups flour.
One teaspoon soda.
One-half teaspoon cloves.
One teaspoon nutmeg.
One cup blackberry jam.
Three tablespoons sour milk.
One-half cup raisins, chopped.

Cream the shortening, add brown sugar gradually and beat until light and fluffy. Add beaten egg yolks. Sift flour, soda and spices together and add this mixture alternately with the jam and sour milk which have been stirred together. Add the raisins, floured. Fold in the beaten egg whites. Bake in two layers in a moderately hot oven.

For filling and frosting, mix together one and one-half cups powdered sugar, three tablespoons cream and six tablespoons butter. Allow mixture to stand over hot water for 15 minutes. Add one teaspoon vanilla just before spreading on cake.

MRS. P. I. McCLELLAND,
Wendell.

PEACH DUMPLINGS

One and one-half cups flour.
Three teaspoons baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Five tablespoons shortening.
One-half cup milk.
Six peaches.
Six tablespoons sugar.

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Rub shortening in lightly. Add just enough milk to make dough soft. Roll out to one-eighth inch thick on slightly floured board. Divide into six parts. Lay on each piece a peach which has been pared, sprinkle with sugar, moisten edges of dough and fold up around the peach, pressing tightly together. Place in greased baking pan, sprinkle with sugar and put a piece of butter on top of each dumpling. Bake 40 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with hard sauce. Makes six dumplings.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Not Girl-Shy, Indignant Swain Answers A. J. S.

Here is one of my young readers, a BROTHER, if you please, who feels sure he is the BOY FRIEND mentioned in a letter to me.

Maybe he is. Maybe he isn't. Similar cases prevail the world over.

There is the sensitive soul who sees himself go by in everyone else's predicament . . . and again the conceited type who fancies others are taking notice of him, when they are not.

Miss Brunot

Ever have a fit of blues in which you were quite certain every eye was upon you, and disparagingly? Ever have a feeling of considerable consequence, when you were absolutely positive the entire street's glances were for you, and no one else?

Ever go in a new dress and a fresh hair-set, and feel your shoes pinch, and yet walk straight? For you were almost sure the people on all the front porches were staring at you. No, siree, you weren't giving them the benefit of seeing you suffer.

JUST A FLIRT

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a constant reader of your Speak Up, Sister, column. I am a BROTHER, though . . . I read a letter in your department, and I feel sure I am the fellow referred to. And as for being girl-shy, I am not such a fellow. The thing was, I was just a flirt, and she over imagined where my heart was concerned . . . I think our parting was silly . . . We are both too stubborn. This girl signs herself A. J. S. STILL HOPEFUL . . .

Where is the real he-man who would admit being girl-shy? . . . You are right, Still Hopeful, to say you are not . . . I feel certain, if you are truly the one referred to . . . or the party of the second part, as one would say legally, that I'm going to be a real peacemaker in this heart affair . . . Good luck to you!

This is summer time, and the season for patching broken troths. No two hearts should go lonely during the rose-blooming days . . . Also, you know that old poetic remark: "The course of true love never runs smooth" . . . It goes along all too often like a stretch of bad and winding road . . . Yes, we have our DETOURS when we are sentimentally inclined . . . bars are across the good boulevards, and we have to creep slowly along the side paths. Brakes on . . . and in second . . .

These are the pranks Dan Cupid plays on us to prove whether we really are in earnest. Also to prepare us for FUTURE hardships . . .

Marriage isn't easy . . . So courtship should be tampered with and provoked, to make sure it is made of the real stuff . . .

SEEKS MORE ADVICE

Dear Miss Brunot:

After having followed your advice to the last letter . . . I have found it a success . . . And am coming for more . . . I am a girl of 16, and considered nice looking . . . I used to go with a fellow of 21 . . . He was supposed to be a GOOD CATCH in my crowd . . . I am very much in love with his boy friend, who is 19 But he doesn't notice me very much.

I want to tell you of a little talk I had with him at a park. When we had a chance to talk alone, he started to speak of his friend who used to be my boy friend. When I told him I didn't like the fellow any more, he asked me why I was always walking in the direction of the place where he works. But when he saw I felt miserable over this he was so sorry he had said as much as he did.

Do you think he cares anything for me? BUSSY.

Yes, I think the fellow cares something for you. But he hates to butt in where he thinks his friend may still be interested. Or where he fancies you may still care for the other man . . . Let hm see plainly there is nothing between you and his friend, and by all means cease your walking past the old boy friend's place of business . . . And no doubt everything will be O. K.

It is queer about life and love . . . One doesn't always fall hard for the GOOD CATCHES . . . Sometimes it is the lesser person who attracts us . . . It is a good wholesome happening, too, for it lets the whole world know the sisters are not all gold diggers.

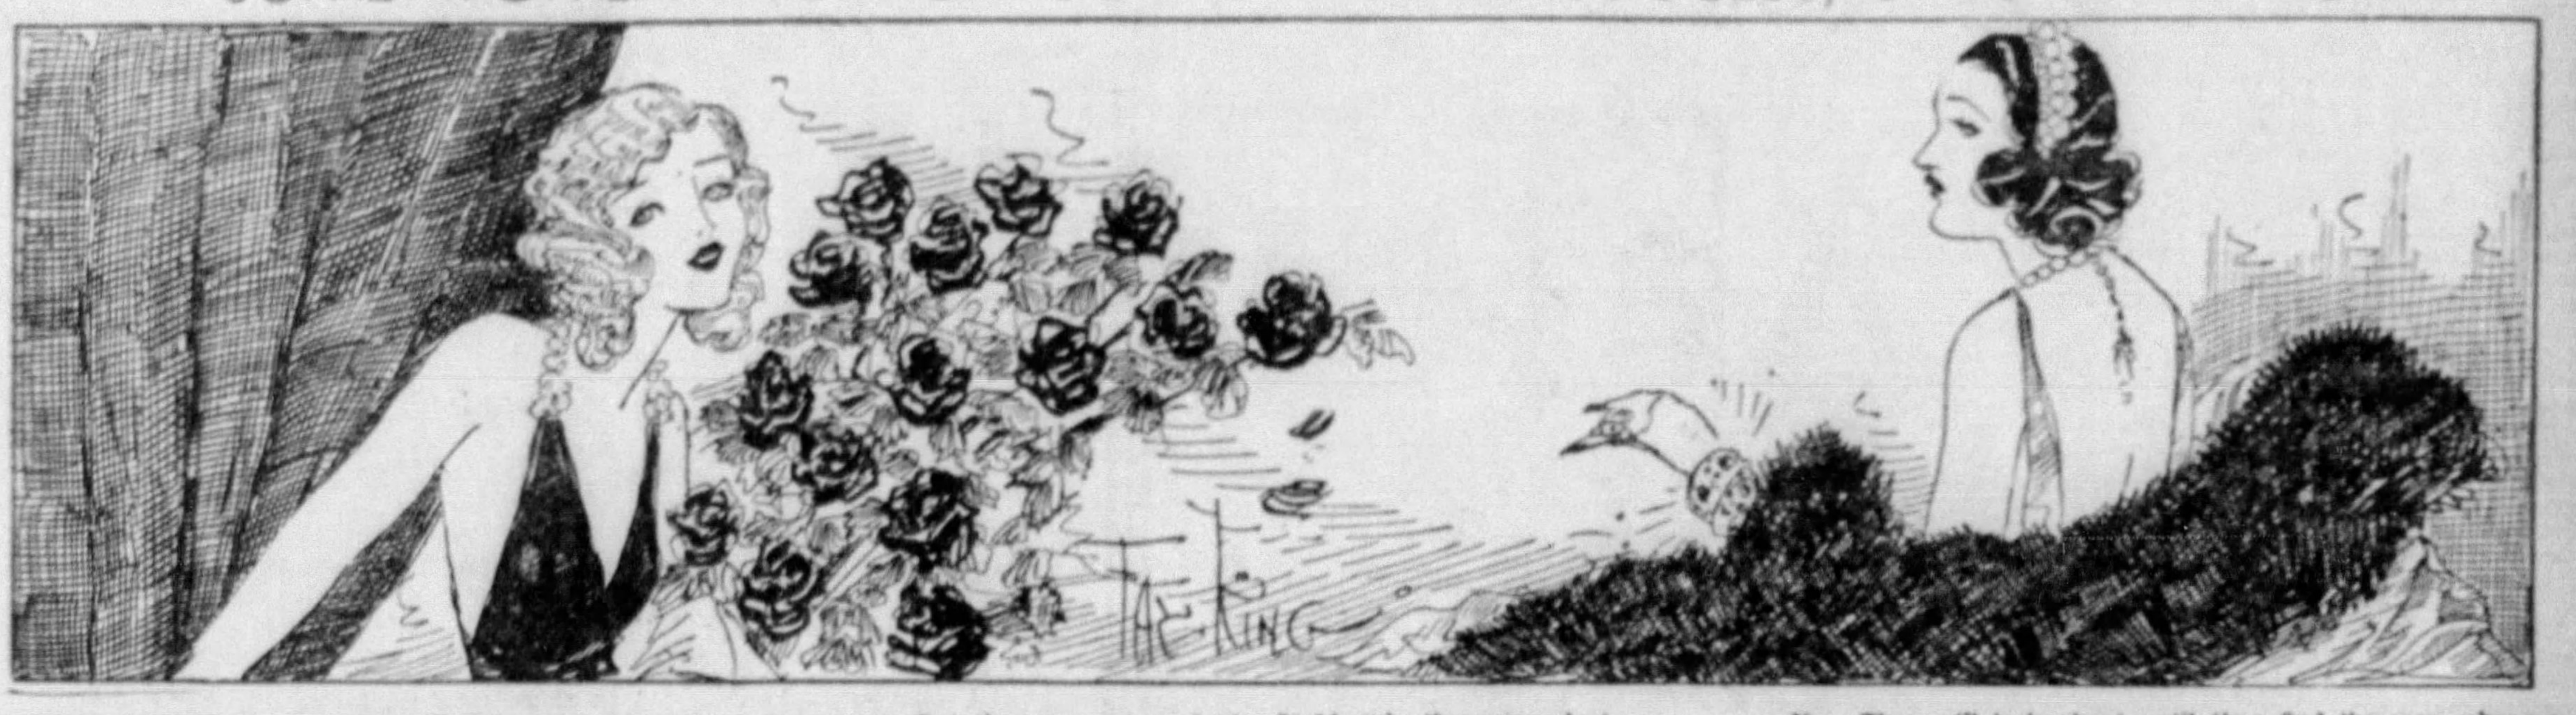
A JOBLESS PROBLEM

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a nice looking girl, and have my eye and heart on a certain fellow. He is the sweetest boy. Nothing bad about him, at all. He is 20, and I am 19. He is out of a job, and can't take me anywhere. I don't care to go anywhere, but he says a real fellow should entertain his girl. I told him I was willing to sit on the doorstep of my own home providing he is near me. He said I would soon get fed up on that, and he doesn't come around so often. But calls me up. Tell me a solution to my problem, please. IN LOVE.

The solution of your problem will come when the young fellow gets a job. I can't blame him for his attitude. A man must have some pride, or where is he. If yours is a true love it will accept the situation, and wait . . . A fellow must have principle and will power. Respect such, in your boy friend.

SOME WOMEN ARE NOT CONTENT WITH SUCCESS, SAYS FAY KING



By FAY KING

It seems some women cannot be content whether they attain their success in marriage or a career. We could name several who have made brilliant marriages. Life for them might be all leisure, luxury, gowns galore, endless entertainment and travel.

But they are not content. Stubbornly they struggle to succeed in some career in which they are decided flops.

On the other hand, we need not look about long to discover other women who have attained the highest success in some career. But are they content?

No. They will look about until they find the men who can make them most miserable, it seems, and will marry a whole series of them.

Contract Bridge :: HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Rebidding Minimums

It is perfectly correct to open minimum hands in either Rubber or Duplicate Bridge, but a player should not become obsessed with the idea that if he opens a minimum he must subsequently bid every time the bidding reaches him, even though he does have an apparent fit with his partner's Take-out.

A failure to appreciate this principle is at the root of many minor and some major disasters at the Bridge table. The West hand below is strong enough for an Opening bid. It is, however, one of those borderline cases where even though partner responds with a One over One in a higher ranking suit, the Opening bidder is fully justified in passing because the hand contains no Rebid whatever. Of what value is it that he holds four of his partner's suit—more than adequate trump support? He has already drawn on this reserve in making his Opening bid. This hand was played in Duplicate and produced a great variety of results. The best result was obtained where Mr. Howard Schenken was seated West and Mr. M. D. Maier East.

West, Dealer.

North: ♠ 6 5 3 ♡ J 6 ◇ A K 3 2 ♣ Q 9 8 7

West: ♠ A 8 7 4 ♡ A Q 5 4 ◇ J 6 4 ♣ 6 3

East: ♠ K J 10 2 ♡ 10 9 2 ◇ 9 8 7 ♣ A 5 4

South: ♠ Q 9 ♡ K 8 7 3 ◇ Q 10 5 ♣ K J 10 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Pass (1)	1 ♠ (2)	Pass (3)
Pass (4)	Pass

1—North, with an evenly balanced hand and no suit of more than four cards, can scarcely venture, even though he is not vulnerable, on a bid of two diamonds. He might easily be caught between two strong hands and pay a tremendous penalty for his temeritous part-score bid.

2—East has a rather close choice in the selection of his response. The fact that his partner can make a response at the level of one to his bid of one spade prompts him to select the shaded suit for his bid.

3—South, with honors in all the suits, of course cannot bid, but can only hope that East and West will go too far.

4—West would really like to bid two spades but he fears that by doing so he will give his partner a too encouraging picture of his strength. He decides that discretion is the better part of valor, and passes.

In the play, the Declarer made two spades, but at tables where less restraint was shown, much higher contracts were reached. As a matter of fact, even though West had bid two spades, East's hand was not strong enough to justify a Rebid.

Tomorrow's Hand

West, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

North: ♠ 10 9 4 ♡ K J 6 5 4 2 ◇ 5 ♣ K 9 6

West: ♠ A J ♡ 7 3 ◇ K 9 7 4 ♣ A Q J 3 2

East: ♠ Q 7 6 5 ♡ A Q 10 9 ◇ Q J ♣ 10 8 4

South: ♠ K 8 3 2 ♡ 8 ◇ A 10 8 6 3 2 ♣ 7 5

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

:-: :-: Hints for the Household :-: :-:

Olive oil and vinegar make an excellent furniture polish.

Bacon for boiling will have a better flavor if a dessertspoon of vinegar is added to the water.

A piece of thick felt tacked to the bottom of each table leg will prevent scratches on linoleum.

A teaspoon of marmalade will be found a splendid substitute for mixed peel in a cake.

After a jar of pickles has been opened grate a little horseradish on top of the contents before putting on the stopper. This will preserve the flavor of the pickles and prevent mold from forming.

Copper and brass ornaments which are tarnished will acquire a brilliant polish if rubbed vigorously with strong liquid ammonia applied on a piece of flannel. Polish afterwards with a dry, soft duster.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Never Too Young

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am only 10 years old and have always wanted to know one particular thing. Is it polite to say "Yes, ma'am," "Yes, teacher," or "Yes, Miss House," to my teacher? F.

Bless you, and friendliest welcome to my column. I believe that you hold the record as being the youngest lady who ever wrote to my column. Your letter was delightful, well-writtten and in fine form. Since you have this start in life, you will certainly go very far in learning and in accomplishment.

I'd love to have you get the charming habit of using the name of the person to whom you are speaking. So, to your teacher, say, "Yes, Miss House."

Honoring the Pastor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are having a reception at our church in honor of our pastor's anniversary, at which time the representatives of the different organizations are to give a short speech. Will you kindly let me know just what would be the correct or appropriate thing to say to him when one is called upon? READER.

Since apparently you will be the representative of your organization in the church, the theme of your speech would be an appreciation of the pastor's co-operation in the work of that organization, the honor and devotion that the members give him, and the high hope that he will long be associated with your church.

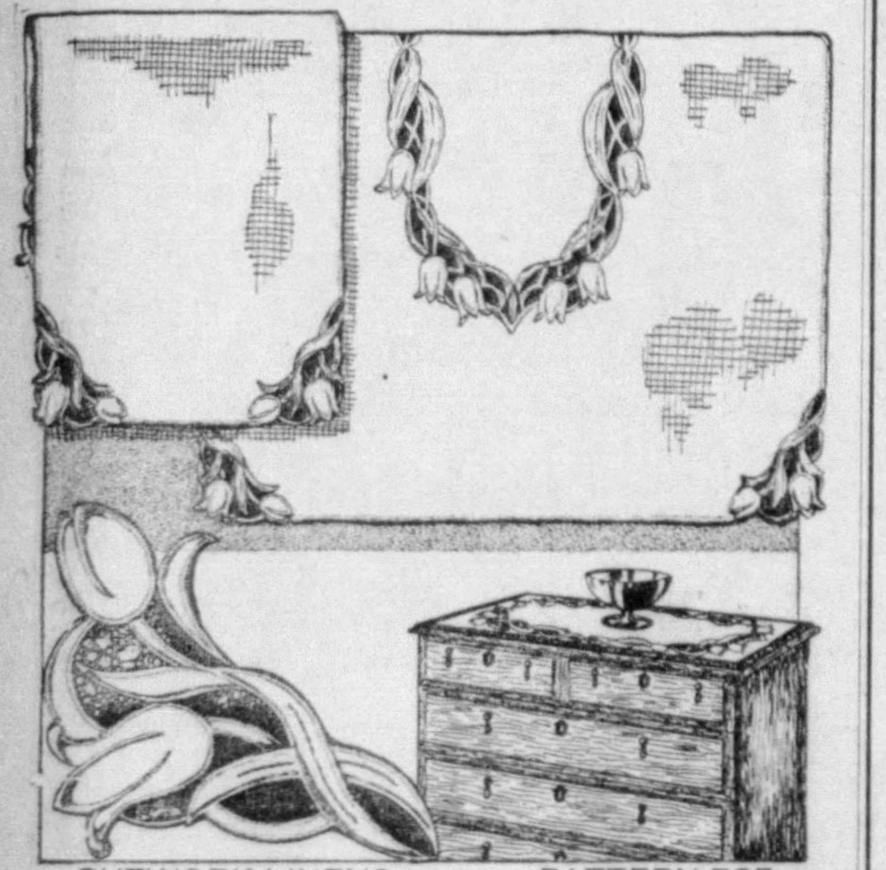
LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS



CUTWORK LINENS PATTERN 585

Though tulip time is over, it's always tulip time when it comes to cutwork, for this flower makes such a handsome design in this type of needlework. Here it is carried out in some lovely motifs that need no bars. Besides cutting down the amount of work, leaving out the bars also makes the embroidery stand out more effectively. This cutwork offers you the opportunity of making a variety of linens from a handsome table cloth down to the small linens that every household needs.

Pattern 585 comes to you with a transfer pattern of four 6 x 12 inch motifs, four 4½ x 6 inch motifs and six 2¼ inch corners for napkins or small linens; complete directions for doing cutwork, suggestions and yardage requirements for a variety of uses.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Boys' Bicycles Missing Too

Lillian's explanation gave me just the opportunity I needed to pull myself together after the shock of my mother-in-law's answer to my query as to whether the bell she had heard might not have been a bicycle bell.

I had asked the question almost carelessly, but at her prompt affirmative my thoughts had flown to Junior and Roderick, both of whom possessed bicycles, although their ownership of them was too recent to permit of their riding very much.

It was not possible, I told myself fiercely, that either small boy should have taken his wheel out upon the road so early. Yet the indisputable fact of their absence from home made me give credence to any hypothesis, no matter how fanciful.

One thing stood our forcefully. Mother Graham must not be permitted to guess that either of her beloved young grandsons was not to be found in his bed. I knew what difficulties I would have on hand if she should guess the truth. I knew also that, though Lillian had spoken casually of all the boys in the neighborhood as owning bicycles, she purposely had dragged in the name of Jerry Ticer as a particularly effective red herring across the trail of my mother-in-law's imagination.

RUSE WORKS

Would the ruse work? Relentlessly crushing down my own tremors, I watched my mother-in-law closely and saw, to my great relief, and I knew to Lillian's as well, that she had accepted the theory of Jerry Ticer's being the sounder of the bicycle bell.

"That's just about what that lad would do," she commented caustically, "ring a bicycle bell at this hour of the morning. It's lucky everybody's so tired after the wedding festivities, or he'd have had everybody awake."

"Yes, that's Jerry, all right," Lillian commented with a grin. "He probably was also the lad who was flashing a light around. I think I'll put a flea in his mother's ear. He's too old a lad to be pulling infant tricks like that."

She strolled with apparent aimlessness to the window from which my mother-in-law said she had seen the flashing, and stood half facing us, to all appearance absorbed in the curtains. When she spoke, she turned back to my mother-in-law apparently unconcerned.

"I'm the well-known cat for curiosity," she said, "and I would like to know from where Jerry did that fishing so that it would show in your window. Come on over here, Madge, and see if your lynx eyes can figure it out."

With nerves tense as the proverbial fiddle strings, I crossed to her side and stood with her, peering out into the grayness of the dawn.

"Don't let her guess anything," Lillian said from the corner of her mouth, in the noiseless fashion she acquired in her secret service work, "but let's get out of here as soon as we can. That flashing must have come from the bungalow."

I caught my breath in sudden panic at the remembrance that during his convalescence from his terrible illness, following the jab of a mysterious poisoned needle in the sealed envelope in Marion's lock box, Lee Chow at our invitation had spent much of his time in the bungalow in the orchard that Dicky had fitted up for a library workshop as a surprise to me.

Lee Chow! His trail seemed to lead everywhere. Useless to reassure myself by my knowledge of his being locked in a room upon this very floor, rendered unconscious and harmless by the powerful opiate which Hugh had given him. I felt that in some way Lee Chow was responsible for the disappearance of my small son and his cousin.

LEAVE MOTHER GRAHAM

How I ever gathered strength and poise to follow Lillian's cue I do not know, but I am sure my face looked as unconcerned as hers, when she turned again from the window and said, with just a tinge of chagrin in her nonchalance:

"Well! I guess I'm not as good a detecatuff as I thought I was. I can't figure out a single thing. Awfully sorry to have bothered you, Mother Graham. I do hope you can go to sleep again."

"I shan't close my eyes again," my mother-in-law declared stoutly, "but I might as well lie down and rest a while. That ape of a Katie won't have breakfast for an hour or two."

"The darling old fraud!" Lillian said softly, when we had gone into the hall, leaving Mother Graham lying down comfortably upon her bed. "She'll be asleep again in five minutes. Praise be to Allah! She never suspected a thing. What is it, Hugh?"

Hugh Grantland came toward us with lips that smiled but eyes that belied the mirth.

"The mystery seems to be solved," he said. "The bicycles of Junior and Roderick are gone. They're probably out on some crazy expedition of their own contriving."

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

The cure for the nail biting habit is the thorough manicure. Bitter applications do nothing at all. One nibbles because the cuticle is rough and shredded. Nerves at the finger ends are sensitive. They are a contributing element to the deplorable habit.

If frown lines are not to become permanent fixtures, they must be caught in their infancy. At the first faint shadow of an indentation apply a heavy cream and massage every night.

Place the thumb at lower end of line, first finger at the upper end. Hold the finger still, work upward with the thumb, ironing the crease smooth. Send the fin- around the circles with heavy pressume. Place first fingers opposite each other, crosswise of the furrow and rub briskly. Don't scowl. Scowling is what puts them there.

Occupational Diseases Conquered by Science

Dr. Copeland

We are greatly indebted to the brilliant work of scientists who have brought about a marked reduction in occupational diseases and accidents. At one time "silicosis" was a common disease of men employed in sand blasting, foundry work and mills, in the making of castings, sandstone products and glass, as well as in quartz, granite and asbestos mining. Today these occupational diseases are almost unknown.

As a result of undue exposure to silicates, a sand compound, workers became victims of such disturbances of the lungs as "anthracosis," "silicosis," "siderosis," "asbestiosis" and "pneumonoconiosis." These diseases with terrible names result from exposure to various kinds of dust which the workers inhale. Fundamentally they are identical, and all of them lead to gradual impairment of the health.

Great harm is done by continually taking silicates or other irritating dust into the lungs. It leads to chronic irritation and ultimately the formation of fibrous tissue and thickening of the lungs. As a result of this change, breathing becomes difficult and the lungs fail to perform their regular function.

If the disease is not recognized at an early stage and the workman is permitted to continue with his work, he becomes more and more susceptible to various infections of the lungs. He may contract pneumonia, which in many instances develops into tuberculosis. The heart becomes weakened because of the additional work placed upon it, and within a very short time the individual becomes a chronic invalid.

Fortunately, through better understanding of the means of prevention industrial medicine has conquered this disease. Mines are now equipped with ventilation systems, safety lamps and mechanical devices that detect poisonous gases and increased amounts of dust. The circulation of excess dust is prevented by wet drilling which diminishes the inhalation of irritating substances.

Where engineering facilities are not sufficient to control the dust, the workmen are made to wear masks similar to those used in war during a gas attack. In addition to these precautions, workmen who may be exposed to dust are given physical examinations. Men who have weak lungs or any tendency towards tuberculosis are not permitted to engage in this type of work. Working hours have been so adjusted that the danger of exposure to dust particles is greatly reduced.

A good many men are victims of their work. But it is gratifying to know that modern civilization is taking every precaution to minimize the dangers and pitfalls of workers employed in various forms of labor. State and federal laws are constantly being revised and every effort is being made to protect the health of these men and women.

Hostility To Bankers Heard

By B. C. FORBES

BANKER HARRIMAN'S trial and conviction have re-aroused public indignation against the banking fraternity.

Bitterness has not abated one jot or tittle, judging by verbal and written comments received.

Mr. Forbes

Manifestly, the majority of the public are convinced that bankers, particularly "Wall street bankers," played a leading part, in fanning the speculative orgy in securities and, second, in causing the country to fall to the uttermost depths after the panic.

WHEN J. P. MORGAN & COMPANY announced their ambitious plan during the boom for invading the public utility field on a gigantic scale—primarily through organizing the billion-dollar united corporation—I asked and urged a leading member of that international banking house to explain to me, for publication to the world, what social purpose they hoped to fulfill.

I put it this way:

"The public naturally assume that there is something in it for you: but what is there in for the benefit of the public?"

When, despite all my urgings, I could not induce the Morgan firm to make a statement, I could only conclude that the motive was solely one of profit.

The outcome has not been happy.

EVENTS DURING the last five years have caused the people to conclude definitely that America's bankers, as a class, were far more concerned about pocketing fat profits quickly than about exercising such business and financial statesmanship as would make for the permanent upbuilding, stability and prosperity of the country.

This is a most unfortunate, regrettable situation.

Not only so, but the way bankers as a whole have treated their customers all through the panic and the way they have refrained from granting loans since the economic tide turned, have aggravated public hostility towards our banks and bankers.

SAY THE PUBLIC:

"Our bankers are thwarting prosperity by refusing to grant loans."

Say the bankers:

"We are more than eager to lend money, but there has been and is a dearth of legitimate, sound applicants for funds—and, after all, our first duty is to see to it that we safeguard the money entrusted to us by depositors, so that we may be able to return it to them whenever they demand it. We are anxious to do a thoroughly safe business; but, after all that has happened, we would be false to our trust if we imperilled the money entrusted to us."

EXTRACTS FROM two letters received in the same mail are illustrative of the difference in the attitude today prevailing towards banks and banking.

Writes one businessman:

"If America's banks continue only to buy bonds and do not do their utmost to see to it that business be helped in order that the tax money necessary to pay interest on government bonds be earned, where will the banks finally get off? The only safe way for the banks to operate is to do everything to help business. Then, very soon, the right adjustment will come.

"Money put in banks is put in with the idea of helping business—not in order that bank officers can speculate and perhaps lose rather than gain from their gambling."

ENGINEER G. D. HOUTMAN presents this view:

"Capital is not being invested simply because money cannot be turned into a plant or hotel or office building, etc., that can pay.

"New plants cannot pay because capital has built too many plants already, and because capital has ruined its market by destroying purchasing power and ruining its customers.

"Sure, capital is lousy with idle funds. Capital has all the money that ought to be in our pockets. It is a good thing that capital has a lot of idle, surplus and (shall we say) superfluous funds; because if capital does not use these funds to put human flesh to work, capital will need them to maintain human flesh in a state of idleness."

ONE THING certain is that unless finance and business and industry can somehow exercise enough ingenuity to push the country forward, worse is in store for us all.

I favor courage, not folding up.

TUGWELL 'KEY' REVEALED BY SPEECH

By MERRYLE RUKEYSER

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Rexford Tugwell's recent address at Des Moines before the Iowa State Bankers' Association reveals why senators had difficulty in classifying him.

His thoughts are involved and indefinite. It would be difficult for an engineer to translate his conceptions into blue prints.

A structure cannot be built upon exceptions and word ducking.

Mr. Rukeyser

Contrast his mode of expression with the simplicity of Henry Ford. Ford has been trained in translating his ideas into automobiles. Accordingly, they must be structurally correct. When Ford sticks to his last, real wisdom often comes from his lips.

Some of the most direct of Ford's thoughts have been set up as mottoes on the inner rotunda of his company's exhibit at the Chicago Fair.

SOME FORD MOTTOES

Out of the 18 presented, the following appealed to me as the most significent:

"The farm and the shop each needs what the other produces."

"The recovery we need is our American spirit of independence."

"Wages for work. Profit to make efficient. Value for users."

"Never yet has enough of any good thing been produced for use."

"If you stabilize anything, it is likely to be the wrong thing."

"Industry is mind using nature to make human life more free."

WHY AUTO SALES GAIN

Another outstanding industrialist, Walter P. Chrysler, recently told me that three main factors were responsible this year for the improvement in automoble sales. He pointed out:

"First, the basic fact that, judged by previously established stands, the American people have a substantial deficit of individual transportation. Four years ago there were approximately 24 million cars on the roads. Today there are only about 20 million, a large per cent of which is made up of cars five years old or more and this percentage is ready for replacement. I do not believe that the demands of transportation can be permanently curtailed. People must have automobiles. It is fairly certain that they are not going to get along with fewer automobiles than they used to have.

"Second, there is no doubt that the financial status of a great many individuals have been improved, due variously to increased employment, higher wages and the receipt of government recovery funds. Automobiles, being an economic necessity for so many people in this country, this improved financial status has no doubt contributed to better automobile business.

"Third, automobiles themselves are better today than they ever were before. And the values obtainable in the various price classes are greater today than you could get at any price as recently as only a few years ago."

MAJOR TRADE LINES HOLD

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—The Dun & Bradstreet Weekly Trade Review said today that while the "trade tide undoubtedly is ebbing from the standpoint of sales and earnings" a gradual but irregular uptrend is noticeable in practically all major lines. It continued:

"It cannot be denied that crucial points lie in the path which business must follow during the next six months, but with the assurance given by the President that nothing is to be allowed to interrupt the recovery movement. Much is expected to be gained by the elimination of any unworkable code provisions, which may carry phohibitions detrimental to industry or call for the conscription of unwilling units.

"The trend in industrial indices is becoming more mixed, with new peaks being set down for some provisions, while in others the recession is more accentuated than seasonal.

"On the whole June was a satisfactory month for retailers with moderate gains over May recorded, and the general showing far better than it was in June, 1933."

STEEL SHEETS, BARS CUT

Steel bars have been reduced $2 a ton here and at Cleveland, according to filings with the American Iron and Steel Institute. New prices are 1.80c per pound, Pittsburgh, and 1.85c Cleveland, effective July 7.

Reductions have been made on sheets amounting to from $3 to $6 per ton, effective July 7. The new prices are—cold finished sheets, mill run, Pittsburgh base No. 2 gauge, $2.40 per 100 pounds; No. 2 gauge, $2.85.

Cold rolled sheets, No. 10 gauge, $2.50; No. 20 gauge, $2.95; hot rolled sheets, No. 10 gauge, $1.85; annealed No. 24 gauge, $2.45.

At Gary, new prices on sheets have been filed as follows: Hot rolled No. 10 gauge, $1.95 per 100 pounds; annealed No. 24 gauge, $2.55; cold rolled No. 20 gauge, $3.05.

Smelters Reduces Lead Price Again

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—The American Smelting and Refining Company today reduced the price of lead 10 points to 3¾ cents a pound. The company reduced the metal 15 points yesterday, bring it to 3.85 cents from the 4-cent level, prevailing for some time.

P. R. R. 50 Million Issue Offered to Public

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—The biggest piece of public railroad financing since early in 1931 was announced by the investment banking house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., which will publicly offer for sale on July 3 a $50,000,000 issue of Pennsylvania Railroad Company General Mortgage 4¼ per cent bonds.

This offering was regarded in Wall street as a forerunner of a number of new issues by railroads and other corporations, chiefly for refunding purposes, to take advantage of the favorable conditions currently prevailing in the bond market, and prompted in part by the clarifications in the securities act of 1933 through amendments passed at the last session of Congress.

Proceeds from the sale of the bonds will be used for corporate purposes, including purchase or payment of 15-year secured 6½ per cent gold bonds of the company due February 1, 1936, and other obligations maturing in 1935 and 1936.

The company has only $1,050,000 in equipment trust certificates due in the remaining months of this year, and its requirements over the next two years are estimated at around $12,700,000 including maturities, equipment trust payments and sinking fund requirements.

In making this offering Kuhn, Loeb & Co. will be subject to several provisions of the securities act of 1933, notwithstanding that railroad securities are not subject to its provisions and are under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Had it elected to issue no prospectus and refrained from advertising, no provision in the securities act would have to be taken into consideration.

Groups Urge Roosevelt To Boost Gold Price

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—The drive for inflation continues.

The committee for the nation, which has for some time been privately agitating for a boost in the gold price to $41.34 an ounce, the maximum permitted by present legislation, has this week made public a 1,000-word telegram to President Roosevelt urging him to act.

Various farm groups are said to be co-operating with the committee in its latest campaign, and silverites make it plain that they plan to pursue the silver money cause further at the next session of Congress.

In the meantime, prominent monetary authorities in Wall street are pretty definitely inclined to the opinion that the inflation drive will not accomplish anything, at least before another Congress sits.

In the first place, it is pointed out, expansion and cheapening of long term credit, both government credit and private credit, appears to be an important part of the current program, and any action which might prompt a flight of funds from bonds to equities and commodities, it is expected, will be scrupulously avoided.

But as a compromise, the Treasury is expected to work its silver purchase plan with vigor and enthusiasm during the next few months. This, some economists think, may tend to promote a somewhat inflationary psychology, but at the same time not sufficiently dilute the currency to cause any appreciable flight from fixed income investments.

The problem of adjusting the value of currency to meet the demands of various groups has been somewhat easier in the British Empire, some economists explain, than in the United States. The several different currencies has permitted devaluation of some more than others.

TO THE HOLDERS OF FIRST MORTGAGE AND LEASEHOLD 6½% SINKING FUND GOLD BONDS OF COMAGO SMOKELESS FUEL COMPANY.

NOTICE is hereby given, as provided in Article IV Section 2 of the deed of trust dated February 15, 1928, securing the above bonds, that sealed offerings will be received until 3:00 o'clock p. m., July 10, 1934, at the office of the Trustee, Central Trust Company, Charleston, West Virginia, to sell to it all or any part of the above described bonds for the purposes of cancellation and retirement, at a rate not exceeding par and accrued interest.

Such offerings shall be at a flat price for each bond with August 15, 1934, and subsequent coupons attached, together with the scrip, if any, issued August 15, 1928, and February 15, 1929, in respect of coupons of such bonds maturing on those dates.

Such offerings as are accepted will be those of the lowest bidders in an aggregate of Four Thousand Five Hundred Fourteen Dollars and Seventy-nine Cents ($4,514.79), which is the amount allocated to the sinking fund for this purpose. Should two or more holders of bonds bid the same lowest price, the number of bonds taken from each will be, as nearly as practicable, pro rata. Successful bidders will be advised promptly of the acceptance of their bids and payment will be made on surrender and transfer of the bonds on August 15, 1934.

The Trustee reserves the right to reject any and all bids as in said deed of trust provided.

Proposals should be endorsed "Proposal for the sale of bonds of Comago Smokeless Fuel Company" and addressed to CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY, Trustee, Charleston, West Virginia.

To the Holders of Certificates of Deposit for First Mortgage and Leasehold 6½% Sinking Fund Gold Bonds of COMAGO SMOKELESS FUEL COMPANY.

Depositors making offerings in accordance with the above notice should do so directly to the Trustee and in the event that the offering of any depositor shall be accepted by the Trustee, your Committee will, upon surrender to it of the Certificate of Deposit and payment of the depositor's proportion of the expenses of the Committee, forward the bonds represented thereby to the Trustee, who will then make payment directly to the depositor as provided in the notice.

WASTE UNDER NEW DEAL BAD AS OLD TIMES

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, June 29.—That the waste and extravagance of the government under the New Deal are as bad as the waste and extravagance of individuals ever were under the old deal, is indicated by our huge and growing public debt.

It doesn't make sense. We got into this mess by unheard of overspending in the post-war period. Now we try to get out by the very same means. Only we now spend through the government.

We got in by inflation, based on large gold holdings and an excessive use of bank credit. Now we try to get out by buying more gold (and silver) and piling up more bank credit.

In this respect, then, has New Deal "rugged collectivism" shown any more intelligence than was shown by the "rugged individualists?"

Most students of the depression agree that "debt" has been the great occasion for our troubles. They tell us how, during the war and the new era spree, nations, corporations and individuals went into debt beyond their depths. Possibly this may be charged to the account of rugged individualism.

But, if so, is rugged collectivism any better? Certainly the New Dealers have given us a bigger national debt. And what have they done for individuals? They have for the most part merely shifted individual farm and company debts to the broad back of your Uncle Sam.

That is what RFC and similar lending agencies mean. They take billions of private debt and "freeze" it with public debt. This merely shifts it onto the taxpayers of the community.

TALK ABOUT PARTY

We talk about the past excesses in speculation; and by drastic stock exchange regulation we lock the door after our money has been lost. "Never again!"

But at the very same time, we proceed to engage in the greatest speculative gamble in history. This we appropriately call the "New Deal," as though we recognized it as a sort of poker game.

Without any plan based on experience or on establishing economic law, we undertake to gamble on a gold buying "policy," a silver "deal," crop reduction, processing taxes, NRA, price boosting, etc. We take a chance on "priming the pump," with bets even that the government's credit will be ruined before inflation starts.

The whole idea of the "experimental approach" is a speculation. It has been put over on the plea that our only choice is the blue eagle or chaos—Roosevelt or ruin.

Talk about the high finance of the old days! What could surpass the methods by which the Washington financiers have been rigging the government bond market? They have turned the RFC into a bank "holding company." Then they trade their paper for deposit with their bank "subsidiaries."

UNEARNED PROFITS

Even the "brokers' loan" item has been rising on account of dealer speculation in government paper.

Under the old deal, many banks gambled on Bolivian and Peruvian bonds. Now they gamble on the "pump priming" operations financed by our Treasury.

Under the old deal, private "financiers" took our money away by manipulations and misrepresentations. Under the New Deal a little group of politicians are taking what is left by debasing our currency and debauching our banks.

So, I ask again, what good has it done to plunge from "rugged individualism" to "rugged collectivism?" Each and every weakness and shortcoming found in rugged individualism is also found in the rugged collectivism of the New Deal. What we need is to get rid of all "deals"—to quit gambling and get back to the everlasting virtues of honesty and straight thinking. Some day we will realize that there is nothing good in the New Deal that was not also good in the old deal.

Have we not pulled on the old bootstraps long enough?

Furniture Makers Guarantee Prices

CHICAGO, June 29.—(AP.)—Guarantee against declines in furniture prices until November 1 have been posted by nearly all the 500 manufacturers exhibiting at the American Furniture Mart, Dr. A. A. Haake, managing director of the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers, said.

Dr. Haake said that while the guarantees would tend to stabilize prices the next few months they did not apply to prospective price advances which the trade has been expecting to come within 30 to 60 days because of rising labor and raw material costs.

Mark Up in Tire Prices Predicted

AKRON, June 28.—Leading tire manufacturing companies are expected to advance the selling price of original equipment tires to be effective probably July 1. The advance will be irregular throughout the various sizes, with the maximum amounting to around 15 per cent.

MIDDLE WEST TO REVAMP

CHICAGO, June 29.—(AP.)—Charles A. McCulloch, receiver for Middle West Utilities Company, keystone in the Insull utility structure, predicts reorganization of the concern under the McKeown amended bankruptcy law.

McCulloch, who has directed the affairs of the firm for the past 27 months, stated:

"There is no question but that there will be a reorganization and I look for a plan to be submitted within the next 10 days."

Bankers and creditors, he added, had conferred all day yesterday and their meetings were expected to result in a definite action.

McCulloch filed the 1933 report of Middle West late in the day in the court of Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley.

Consolidated gross revenues for the year ended last December 31 were placed at $61,464,901, a reduction of 7.3 per cent from 1932. Consolidated net income, after deduction of interest paid on bank loans, notes and other items, was given as $80,880.

NEW YORK CLOSE WITH NET CHANGES

STOCKS DRIFT TO LOWER GROUND

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—Speculative forces apparently found no immediate stimulus for stocks in the President's address to the country and the equities market today climbed back in bed and resumed its more or less peaceful slumber.

Although most traders displayed little inclination to pick up shares, either for a "turn" or a "pull," there also was no especial selling urge in evidence. There were feeble rallies occasionally, but the drift was moderately lower throughout the greater part of the extremely dull proceedings.

Grains turned somewhat heavy on hedge selling. Wheat and corn dropped 1 to around 2 cents a bushel at one time. Cotton eased and rubber was hesitant. Continued strength of silver futures, however, was an aid to the commodities section. Bonds exhibited no definite trend. Sterling was reactionary in terms of the dollar and the gold currencies eased.

Announcement of a reduction in various steel prices was not altogether unexpected in Wall street in view of the lowering of automobile prices and the insistence of most consuming industries that steel makers should meet the cuts.

While there was some revival of inflationary hopes following the appeal of the committee of the nation to the President to boost the domestic gold price from $35 to the maximum limit to $41.34 an ounce, financial circles generally were of the opinion that such a step will not be considered by the administration, at least until the silver-buying program has been given a chance.

One of the principal arguments being advanced against further dollar revaluation at the present time is that consumer resistance is already being shown to higher prices in some lines and that additional increases might result in a sharp decline in trade.

The continued pressure of idle funds was seen in the sale of $30,000,000 of emergency unemployment relief bonds by New York state at a net cost marking a record low. Some market commentators expressed the belief that the investment urge must eventually affect equities, especially those of the higher grades.

GRAIN VALUES SWEPT DOWN

CHICAGO, June 29.—Material setbacks of grain values took place early today after an irregular start. Showers, reported at places in Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska, led to profit-taking sales on the part of holders of corn futures and to a cessation of aggressive buying.

Opening ¼ to 1 cent lower, September 62½-62⅝, corn soon underwent additional downturns. Wheat started ⅛ off to 1-3, at 5.70, and subsequently receded all around.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Raw sugar was unchanged early today at 3.15 for spots. Futures were quiet and there was little variation in prices. The market opened unchanged to 1 point lower under scattered July liquidation and selling by producing connections, promoted by the continued liberal offerings in the spot market. Trading was light and mostly in the way of evening-up for over the week-end adjournment with operators inclined to limit extensive operations pending fresh developments.

Refined sugar was unchanged at 4.75 for fine granulated with a fair withdrawal demand reported.

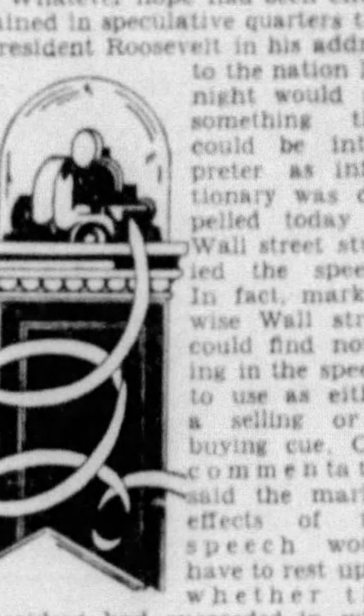
Market Lags as Street Displays Indifference to President Roosevelt's Address

Whatever hope had been entertained in speculative quarters that President Roosevelt in his address to the nation last night would say something that could be interpreter as inflationary was dispelled today as Wall street studied the speech. In fact, marketwise Wall street could find nothing in the speech to use as either a selling or a buying cue. One commentator said the market effects of the speech would have to rest upon whether the President had succeeded in winning any more investors of the country over to the side of the New Deal.



Contrary to causing selling by holders of silver, the Treasury embargo against silver exports as a means of thwarting international speculators in the metal, evoked a bullish response in the futures market and abroad. The silver purchase bill makes 50 cents an ounce the maximum price at which the Treasury can take over domestic stocks of the metal. Hence the Treasury effort to stop shipments of silver out of the country to be held for higher prices was interpreted by traders as meaning informed interests were expecting the world price to rise above 50 cents. A bull movement in silver continued in foreign markets. The London price for bar silver touched the highest mark since November, 1931.

The reduction in prices of bars and sheet steel effective July 7 will probably not have any effect on prices of automobiles this year and only negligible effect on 1935 prices. Auto makers have, in most cases, contracted for steel to be used in this year's cars at present prices, so that reductions in steel next month cannot affect this year's costs.

Bethlehem Steel Corporation's showing in the second quarter may prove to be the best since the three months ended September 30, 1930. In that period net income, after interest, depreciation, depletion, etc., amounted to $3,783,425, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to 63 cents a share on 3,200,000 shares of common outstanding. Much will depend upon results for June. Such a showing will compare with a net loss of $902,044, after all deductions, but before preferred dividends, in the three months ended March 31, last, with a net loss of $3,312,846 in the second quarter of last year.

Announcement of the offering of $50,000,000 in 4¼ per cent bonds by the Pennsylvania Railroad, the first major public offering of a new corporation issue since the securities act of 1933 became effective, arrived a little earlier than had been expected generally, but it was hailed with delight by the financial community. Seldom has there been such a dearth of new issues as in the last year. Now the bond market is declared ripe for some substantial flotations of high-grade issues and, with amendments of the securities act giving underwriters more courage in launching new issues, the Pennsylvania offering was accepted as the forerunner of other important issues over the next few weeks.

Current box office receipts and film rentals of Loew's Incorporated having been running ahead of a year ago, and earnings have been running at the same average rate as in the first half of the present fiscal year. In 28 weeks ended March 15, last, net was $3,973,472, equal after charges to $2.38 a share on 1,464,205 shares of common stock. On this basis, Loew's should earn around $1,600,000 for 12 weeks ended June 9, or around one dollar for the common. The company continues in its usual strong cash position, with over $10,000,000 cash and government securities on hand. But in view of the established conservative policy of the management it is unlikely any action will be taken to increase dividends until results for the full year are available.

SILVER RISES IN LONDON

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—Wall street silver speculators were rather morose today as they saw the price of white metal climb to the highest levels in three years in the London market, but found themselves blocked by Secretary Morgenthau's embargo from exporting silver.

Spot silver in London climbed ⅜ of a penny to 21⅛ pence per ounce, the highest price since November of 1931, and around one cent above the equivalent price in New York.

Silver futures rose nearly ½ cent for some deliveries in the commodity exchange in New York, but faced with the 50-cent tax on profits, and the limitation of 50 cents per ounce on the price which the Treasury may pay for speculative holdings, traders were not very active. Spot silver rose ¼ of a cent to 46¼ cents at New York, or ½ cent under the February high.

N. Y. Curb Suspends Canadian Alcohol

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—The New York Curb Exchange has suspended dealings in Canadian Industrial Alcohol, Ltd., new noncomolative redeemable non-voting preference shares, new voting common stock and new non-voting common shares, it was announced today.

It was explained that the exchange's action was due to the refusal of the Canadian government to grant supplementary letters patent permitting the company to put into effect a capital reorganization act recently approved by the stockholders.

CAR LOADINGS GAIN 4,223

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—The American Railway Association announced today that loadings of revenue freight for the week ended June 23 were 621,872 cars, an increase of 4,223 above the preceding week, 12,245 above 1933 and 122,879 above 1932.

U. S.-RESERVE LOAN PACT

WASHINGTON.—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced the terms of "a gentlemen's agreement" with the Federal Reserve System under which the Treasury will co-operate in the direct loans to industry program. He said the Treasury will furnish money to the reserve banks as they need it to make loans. Sums advanced by the Treasury will be matched by an equal amount furnished by the reserve banks.

Engineering Awards Show Gain for Week

NEW YORK, June 29.—All major classes of engineering awards contribute to this week's higher total of $32,055,000, reports the Engineering News-Record. Federal awards were up to $7,723,000, state and municipal to $17,174,000 and private to $7,158,000. These totals are ahead of the average of the previous four weeks and substantially ahead of the average week in June, 1933.

Loans to Brokers Shrink $23,000,000

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Loans on stocks and bonds to brokers and dealers by reporting Federal Reserve member banks in New York City decreased $23,000,000 during the week ended June 27 to $1,017,000,000 from $1,040,000,000 in the preceding week.

The record high for loans is $6,804,000,000, established October 2, 1929, and the record low $331,000,000 on July 27, 1932.

KITCHENWARE ACTIVITY

Active buying by chain stores was an outstanding feature of the kitchen tool and small housewares markets last week. The chains reordered regular merchandise for immediate delivery and took large quantities of extreme low-end products for use in July seasonal promotions.

NOTIONS TRADE ACTIVE

With current demand for notions holding well above normal seasonal levels, manufacturers are looking forward to an active fall buying season. Sewing materials and dress accessories were said to be moving freely at the present time.

RAYON YARN OUTLOOK

A better demand for rayon yarn is causing mill executives to look for a return of trading to somewhere near normal by July 15. In the past two weeks some fairly substantial orders have been received, particularly in the 200-denier styles.

JULY BOND MATURITIES

Corporate bond maturities during July will total $125,458,150, according to the Standard Statistics Company. June maturities amounted to $86,111,929.

LOCAL MARKET MOVEMENTS NARROW

Securities on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange remained in a narrow range today, with trading volume showing no change from the low rate of the past several sessions. The "big board" movement was somewhat irregular in the early dealings and volume continued to reflect absence of public participation in the market. The street was unimpressed by President Roosevelt's "report to th nation" last night, evidently seeing nothing in his remarks to warrant a change in the "stand-off" attitude which has marked the traders' attitude for the past month or more.

Dealings here were mainly in the lower priced specialties and brewings, with a scattering of small trades in the usually active fuel issues and standard industrials. Recent favorable dividend action by industrial corporations and railroads has failed to jolt the market out of its rut, but the accumulation of such developments, it is felt, will ultimately force a recognition of the business improvement these resumed disbursements and increases reflect.

COTTON PRICES TAKE SPURT

NEW YORK, June 29.—Cotton futures opened stead, unchanged to 4 points advance on higher Liverpool cables and continued dry hot weather in the western belt. July 12.38; October 12.52; December 12.64; January 12.69; March 12.78; May 12.87.

Initial buying orders were supplied on the advance to 12.52 for October by realizing combined with some scattered local and southern selling. The advance to approximately the high prices touched on the bulge earlier in the week attracted considerable profit-taking and the demand tapered off after the call with prices easing back to about Thursday's closing quotations.

October sold off to 12.46 with the general list ruling about net unchanged to 2 points higher at the end of the first half hour.

A private report was published later in the morning placing the end-June condition of the crop at 70 per cent of normal, the acreage at 28,576,000 and the indicated yield at 9,981,000 bales. These figures were considerably below the earlier reports, but apparently failed to stimulate buying, and the market was reactionary later in the morning. October sold off to 12.43, with active months generally ruling about unchanged to 2 points lower at midday, under realizing and scattering pressure.

TREASURY GOLD AT NEW HIGH

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP)—Monetary gold stocks of the United States climbed $11,000,000 to a new high of $7,546,000,000 during the week ending June 27.

One June 27 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,465,000,000, a decrease of $3,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with decreases of $44,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks, $9,000,000 in money in circulation and $2,000,000 in non-member deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and increases of $11,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $5,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency, offset in part by an increase of $68,000,000 in member bank reserve balances.

There was practically no change during the week in the system's holdings of bills discounted and of bills bought in open market. An increase of $26,000,000 in holdings of United States Treasury notes was offset by decreases of $23,000,000 in Treasury certificates and bills and $3,000,000 in United States bonds.

U. S. HOLDS TWO BEAVER PLOT SUSPECTS

Richard Thomas, 36, and James E. Harrington, 21, of Beaver Falls, two of the three men arrested last week and accused of sending threatening letters to Mrs. Nellie E. Beegle, of Patterson Heights, Beaver Falls, and attempting to extort $10,000 by threatening the life of some member of her family, yesterday were held for action of the grand jury by the United States Commissioner.

Kenneth L. Weir, 20, also named a defendant in the alleged extortion plot, was held under $1,000 bond pending a further hearing. The trio was arrested June 19 in a trap prepared by special agents of the Division of Investigation, Department of Justice, and state police. This occurred after Harrington, according to testimony, called at the Western Union office, in Rochester, and obtained a decoy package of money, left there by the officers.

The arrest of Thomas and Weir followed. Weir testified in his own behalf. He said he was approached by Thomas who promised him a "couple of grand" if he went to the telegraph office and collected a package. He said he refused, but admitted suggesting the name of Harrington.

He told of accompanying Harrington and Thomas to the telegraph office, and hearing Harrington say after visiting the office that no package was there. Harrington obtained the fake package several days later, it was testified.

Bond for Thomas was reduced from $10,000 to $7,000 and that of Harrington remained at $5,000. In default they were committed to jail.

OFFICER DENIES POLICE CHARGE

Acting Lieut. James Hanna, of the Swissvale Police Department, today denied allegations made against him at the time he and other police officers were suspended on charges of conduct unbecoming officers.

Hanna denied having entered the cell of a prisoner. He said the case against him was an attempt to "frame" him. Councilman W. J. Brisbin, chairman of the police committee of the borough, denied having explained the charges against Hanna and his companions except to verify the report that they had been suspended.

EYE-ROLLING MAXIE WITH TWO CHORINES IN HIS N. Y. STAGE ACT NOW IN REHEARSAL

CHAPTER XII

"This guy Schaaf is tough," said Ancil. "You've got to concentrate on training and be in great shape. Don't get your mind off your work by wiring or telephoning to Dorothy."

That was his first warning instruction to me upon my arrival at the training camp at Orangeburg.

Ancil gave orders at Wilson's place that I was not to use the telephone—except with his permission.

"Don't go worrying about this bum, Schaaf," I told Ancil. "I'll knock him stiff like I did the others."

"With a baseball bat, maybe," Ancil replied. "You're stepping into the big league now. You know a little more about defense than you did a year ago, and every once in a while I think I actually see you using a left hand. But if you aren't in 100 per cent shape, you're due for a rough, tough evening."

Thought Schaaf Would Win

Plenty of New York sports writers dropped around to see me in the gymnasium. I was slow, at the start, and under orders to go easy for a while. My sparring partners had no such order, and they paddled me a lot. I looked bad—I always do in a gym. For that particular fight I was at my worst.

Ancil was a great believer in road work—dreary, monotonous miles of it. If there's one thing I don't like, that's road work. I tried to argue with him against going on walks, lopes and sprints. But he was firm.

"Get out on the road and stop moaning," he said.

I went—but there was a trick in it.

Ducks Work to Make Love

I went on the road usually with one or two sparring partners and the first day I found a place that had a telephone. Fine! I sent the other birds on errands and called up Dorothy.

"Hello, darling," I said.

"It's awfully early, isn't it?" answered her sleepy voice. "Have you been reading those books?"

"Not yet," I told her. "There's always a gang around, and they'd kid me, and—"

"Well, I wish you'd find some chance to look them over. Pick out a chapter which says it isn't polite to telephone a lady hours and hours before she's finished her sleep—read that one first of all.

"Okay, sweetheart. How about marrying me?"

"Can't you think of anything else to say?"

"Sure. Be at the Garden and see me bump off Schaaf. And don't forget I'll be seeing you right after the fight, and we'll go places and do things."

"Is Schaaf crippled?" she asked.

"No; why do you ask?"

"Well, if he isn't, what will he be doing while you're bumping him?"

"Groaning. Don't forget our date."

After that I'd sneak one of the etiquet books in my pocket when I went on the road, find some nice resting spot, and read all about what to do with table utensils, napkins, your seat in a crowded subway when a dame prances in, and so forth. Then, when it was time for Dorothy to be up, I'd telephone her.

My sparring partners never squawked on me. That's because they didn't like pounding sod any better than I did.

Naturally, I wasn't in good condition when I climbed into the ring against Schaaf. Another thing that handicapped me is that as soon as I took my seat in the corner, with seconds and the crowd all around, the memory of my last fight came back.

Again and again it didn't seem that the fellow over there was Schaaf. It was Frankie Campbell. And through every round of the 10, I was remembering—and haunted.

Until that night (December 19, 1930), I hadn't any real idea of what a man could do with a good left hand. Schaaf showed me. He kept poking me on the nose and jarring me off balance every time I tried to charge in on him. He ducked my right hand for the chin without much trouble, poked me some more pokes, and by the time the fifth round arrived I was wondering what I could use for legs the rest of the distance.

Forced to Use Left

Schaaf forced me to be a body puncher that night—and forced me to use my left hand. If I hadn't done both, I would have been out of luck. I couldn't tag him with right hand swings for the jaw, and it was necessary to use that left to push him back and thus keep him from running over me.

I went the distance, and, although I had to absorb a worse pounding than had been given to me in all my fights before, I wasn't hurt. Just tired—never so tired before. Humbled? No, not me! I hadn't lost any faith in myself. I said to Schaaf:

"I'll pay you back next time, Ernie."

"Sure," he grinned.

As soon as I could I got into my street clothes and met up with Dorothy.

"Still alive, are you?" she smiled tauntingly. "Remarkable!"

How could a man help loving a girl like that?

COTTON EQUALS RECORD IN WINNING BRITISH OPEN

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Bucs Face Harder Test. Fall Against Good Clubs. Three Wins in 14 Games. • Finney Stars in Minors. Canzoneri Spills Dope. Speed Kings Meet Again.

It was all well enough to win seven of the last 10 games from the Braves and the Phils, but before there can be any feeling of security or confidence about their future, the Pirates will have to keep their improved form in evidence against the stronger clubs, the real pennant contenders, starting with the current series against Charley Grimm's Cubs. And the Bruin opposition threatens to be plenty tough. The Bears, who came here with seven straight wins to their credit, are in their best stride of the season after an early June slump. Chuck Klein, Kiki Cuyler and Babe Herman form one of the most powerful hitting outfields the game has known; Lonnie Warneke has recovered his pitching grip; Guy Bush is again taking his regular turn on the slab after an absence of three weeks, and Don Hurst is playing better ball than he played in the last year and half for the Phils.

Chuck Klein

The Pirates have not flourished against first-division opposition after a good start, in which they won eight out of 12 contests. Of their last 14 games with the accepted flag bidders, they won only three, all from the Cardinals. After dropping the final two games of a New York series, they lost three in a row in Chicago, took three out of four from the Cards here, were beaten twice by the Redbirds in St. Louis and lost three straight to the Giants at Forbes Field. Nothing can be gained by beating the second-division clubs if there isn't a great change for the better against the good ones, and an immediate start in that direction will be of great importance, as in 11 of the next 14 games the Bucs will be up against the Cubs and Giants.

DEMAREE AFTER HOMER RECORD ON COAST

Frank Demaree, the Cub outfielder playing for Los Angeles under option, and whose 27 home run drives featured the first half of the Pacific Coast League season, has an ambition to carry on his long-distance swatting to such a point that he will be able to break the league's all-time record for homers. The top mark for four-base blows in that loop is 60, set by Tony Lazzeri for Salt Lake in 1925.

There will be plenty of arguments as to the relative merits of the two performances if Demaree succeeds in hanging up a new record. Supporters of the Cub farmhand already are pointing out that Lazzeri had an advantage because the season of 1925 lasted 28 weeks while that of 1934 will cover only 26 weeks; that the light air of Salt Lake helped his drives, and also that he was hitting against a livelier ball than the one now in use. On the other hand, the Coast League undoubtedly was a faster and stronger organization in 1925 and Lazzeri had to bat against tougher pitching.

HIGH RATING FOR BUCS' FARMED CATCHER

Hal Finney, the young Pirate catcher sent to Albany in the International League for development, is showing to such advantage there that he is rated as being without a superior among the backstops of the circuit. In fact, according to an International League umpire who was asked to rank the maskmen, Finney has only one rival for the distinction of being the best receiver in the loop. That rival is Bill Lewis, of Rochester, who is the property of the Cardinals. The umpire, questioned on the subject, said it is a close fight between Finney and Lewis for the No. 1 spot, so close that it is difficult to make a choice.

Hal Finney

Scouts and critics who have been following International League doings closely predict that that circuit will send an unusually large crop of rookies to the majors for tryouts next year. In addition to Finney and Lewis, the outstanding players in the various positions are said to be: First base, George McQuinn, Rochester; second base, Roy Schalk, Newark; third base, Eddie Farrell, Newark, with Bill Brubaker, Pirate farmhand at Albany, pressing him hard; shortstop, Nolen Richardson, Toronto; outfielders, Freddie Sington and Alvin Powell, Albany, and Jess Hill, Newark; pitchers, Al Hollingsworth, Toronto; Walter Brown, Floyd Newkirk, Vito Tamulis and Charley Devens, Newark; Cy Blanton, Pirate property, Albany; Norbert Kleinke, Rochester, and Jack Salveson, Montreal.

CANZONERI NOT YET AT END OF TRAIL

The dope that Tony Canzoneri had reached the end of the fistic trail evidently was a little bit premature. He may be too far gone to have any chance of regaining the lightweight championship as long as Barney Ross can reduce to that poundage, but his ninth-round knockout last night of Frankie Klick, who had looked like a probable winner over him, indicates that Tony, a money-fighter as ever, has enough of his old stuff left to make him still the outstanding challenger for the title.

Though a sorry match for Klick, who was to have been given the next chance against Ross for the 135-pound crown, but lost it in accepting the Canzoneri bout because he "needed the money," the outcome was a boost for the honesty of boxing. It had been figured that Canzoneri, beaten twice by Ross, would not be as good a card as Klick if he were to meet the champion a third time, and that last night's fight was intended only as an extra gate-getter and to build up Klick. Tony washed out that impression.

FIFTH CUNNINGHAM-BONTHRON STRUGGLE

The battle of speed between Glenn Cunningham and Bill Bonthron, famous milers, has become almost a serial story. What is expected to be the final chapter will be written at the A. A. U.'s national championship meet, opening today in Milwaukee. The great flyers are to come together for the fifth and rubber test. Each holds two victories over the other. It may be Bonthron's last race on American soil. He is to run in England this summer and plans to retire from competition on his return to this country.

Bill Bonthron

There will be some other stirring duels in Milwaukee. If the injured leg which kept him out of the last week's National Collegiates in Los Angeles is sound again, Bob Kiesel will fight it out with Ralph Metcalfe for the sprinting crown; Walter Marty and George Spitz will settle their argument in the high jump, and Jack Torrance and John Lyman will continue their battle in the shot put. The meet is the season's climax, and may contribute several more record-shattering feats to the many already chronicled in track and field's most sensational year.

CUBS MAY LOSE JURGES REST OF SEASON

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

It was difficult for Charley Grimm and his Cubs to reconcile themselves to the loss of Bill Jurges as they took the field against the Pirates this afternoon, but Lefty and his diamond fighters were thankful to have such a great performer as Woody English to throw into the shortstop gap.

Jurges, one of the best shortstops of the sport, had his appendix removed yesterday before the Cubs left Chicago. Reports received by Manager Grimm today were of a favorable nature, but the boss of the Bruins realizes that Bill may be out for the remainder of the season.

The young hustler of the infield was threatened with appendicitis some time ago. His physicians finally decided it would be unwise to take further chances, so Jurges underwent the surgical treatment yesterday.

ENGLISH HANDY MAN

Woody English is no stranger to the shortfield role; indeed he was regarded as one of the best at the position before Jurges came into the picture. The versatile English then moved over to third base, where he gave a long run of fine performances. Like Pittsburgh's Tommy Thevenow, he seems to be at home almost anywhere on a ball field.

Grimm was highly satisfied with the third case performance of Stanley Heck, who now seems destined to get a lot of work at this base as a result of Jurges' misfortune. Hack was unable to show much in the Los Angeles battles last spring owing to a lame arm, but the rest has helped him a lot and his buddies think he will be able to "stay in there."

BIG DAY TOMORROW

Manager Lefty also is pleased over the showing of Kiki Cuyler and Babe Herman in the past few weeks. The former star of the Pirate outfield is back in the stride that marked him as one of the game's greatest players, and the erstwhile Brooklyn Fambino is rendering a fine account of himself these hot days.

The Pirates rested yesterday, the date being open on the Pittsburgh schedule.

The Buccos and Cubs are all set for the silver jubilee of Forbes Field which is on for tomorrow. The holiday spirit will prevail and there will be a number of notables here, including John A. Heydler and William Harridge, presidents of the National and American League; Fred C. Clarke, long time manager of the Pirates, and many another diamond celebrity.

The Cubs stopped off in Wheeling yesterday and defeated the Stogies in an exhibition game, 13 to 4.

CHILLYSAUCE

Joe Cronin leads the major league pilots in hard luck. Luke Sewell, Joe's ace catcher, was out of action for the first two months and hardly returned before he was "beaned" by a pitched ball. So he is lost to the Senators again.

A few days ago, Cronin saw his great firstsacker, Joe Kuhel, break his leg, which may take him out for two months. The two casualties probably mean "gooby pennant" to the Senators.

Joe says Kuhel is one of the greatest of first basemen. Said Cronin: "All you have to do is to get your throw within a reasonable distance of the bag and he will come up with it."

Otis Crandall's boy, Jimmy, who tried out as a Pirate pitcher on a couple of occasions, may be headed for a big-league berth in a new role.

Son Jim is now a star catcher for the Kansas City club of the American Association. He was going at a fast clip recently when he was painfully spiked. Glenn Wright, back with his hometown Blues, says Crandall is about sure to go up next year.

The younger Crandall is strong enough to play a tackle for Jock Sutherland, so you will know he will hardly be a tissue paper proposition for the baserunners.

First there was Pete Zivic. Then Jack came along and climbed with him to the fistic heights. Then a second brother pair, Eddie and Fritzie, moved through the preliminaries and then a campaign in California to reach main bout estate, while Brother Joe Zivic blossomed out as a referee. Now Fritzie has a young son, who may carry on the Zivic fighting tradition in the years to come. Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture shows the elder and younger Fritzie in a happy moment just before Daddy Fritzie began a workout for his 10-round battle with Eddie Ran, veteran welterweight, at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Monday night.

A real battle is anticipated when the Goodwill Industries and the E. J. Noftz teams clash today in bracket II of the senior division of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania amateur tournament at Marshall Field. Both teams hail from the Strip. The Noftz team will be seeking its third straight triumph in tournament competition.

Goodwill is made up of a number of young players who will give the Noftz a tough tussle. Young Henry Flowers will probably do the pitching for the Goodwill crew. Aloysius (Loyzak to his friends) Mizgorski has been playing a fine game for the Industries team. He is a real speed demon when on base.

Irving Brenner chalked up his third straight triumph when the Commercial Garage softballers defeated the Andersons, 9 to 2, in a bracket V game of the senior class. Louis Pugliano and W. Del Greco clouted home runs for the Commercials, while Leo Yimin and D. Bartirome starred.

SOFTBALL SLANTS

The Majestics, Trees Carlisle, Golden Panthers, All-Stars and Third Presbyterian Church teams, of the East End, in Bracket I of the junior division have been dropped from the Sun-Telegraph's softball tournament because they failed to file their registration cards with this office.

The Macks, of Ford City and the F. J. Broads, of New Kensington, scored triumphs in Bracket VI of the senior class. The Macks nosed out the Hurlbuts, 2 to 1, while the Broads went on a batting spree to blank the Croation Fraternal Union, 17 to 0. It was Thirdbaseman Oleksak's double that won for the Macks. He drove in both of the team's runs in the sixth inning. Firstbaseman Flynn, of the Broads, hit one of the longest homers ever made on the New Kensington field.

Wilmore and the Al and Gump Lieswyn All-Stars, of Altoona, have qualified to play in the second round eliminations.

All umpires officiating Sun-Telegraph tournament games are requested to allow any team to play out its game under protest if it so wishes.

The Tarentum Firemen and the Adams Botties, of New Kensington, will play their Bracket VI game of the Senior class today at Memorial Park.

Ira Rush, Hiller and Hagan starred as the S. A. O'Toole club defeated the Holy Rosary team, 9 to 5, in Bracket III of the Senior class. Carroll and Bert played best for Holy Rosary.

Elizabeth Produce scored three runs in the sixth inning to win from the Books Shoe, 5 to 3. Both teams play in Bracket IV in the Senior competition.

Koppers Coal won its third straight game by downing the Fidelity Trust softball team, 6 to 3, at Schenley Oval Field No. 2 yesterday.

The Fort Black Community Club won a slugfest from the E. J. McAvoys, 13 to 11, on the former's field yesterday. Moses hit a home run for the winers.

South Joins Mid-West, East In Regatta at Oakmont

And now the South joins with the West and the East to vie for honors in the William Randolph Hearst Gold Cup motorboat regatta under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and the Oakmont Boat Club, at Oakmont, two weeks from next Saturday and Sunday.

Bobby Haskins, of Richmond, Va., has sent in his entry for the class A and B amateur races.

Another eastern entry comes from Brooklyn in the name of Paul W. Hyatt, who will race in the two fastest amateur classes, C and F. He is the third eastern driver to sign for competition, the others being Fred C. Weissell, Jr., of North Arlington, N. J., and Warren A. Lucas, of Jersey City.

The western entries come from as far away as Indianapolis and Detroit. Many Ohio drivers are in the field.

KLICK STOPPED BY CANZONERI

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—One accurate left hook today had won for Tony Canzoneri another shot at Barney Ross and a chance to regain the lightweight championship.

That one hook raised a huge "mouse" about Frankie Klick's right eye in the fifth round at Ebbets Field last night and eventually forced Referee Patsy Haley to halt the fight in the ninth and award Canzoneri the victory on a technical knockout.

They had battled fairly evenly to the delight of 13,000 customers through the first four rounds. Early in the fifth Canzoneri lashed out with a left hook to his San Francisco rival's face. The flesh about Klick's eye puffed up instantly and before the round was over it was completely shut. From then on Klick, half-blinded, was a mark for Tony's fists. In the eighth another left hook broke the swelling open, and after 1:42 minutes of fighting in the next round Haley decided to stop the bout rather than permit the Far Westerner to chance permanent injury.

Wins Open

HENRY COTTON

27-year-old British professional, who today equaled the record which Gene Sarazen set in 1932 by winning the British Open golf championship with a 72-hole score of 283. Cotton's victory marked the first time the title has been won by a Briton since 1923. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

DEATH TAKES SOMERS

SANDUSKY, O., June 29.—(AP.)—Financial "angel" to four American League teams back in 1900 when Ban Johnson decided to establish another major league circuit, Charley Somers, one-time owner of the Cleveland Indians, died today after an extended illness at his home at Put-in-Bay.

Referred to as the father of organized baseball in Cleveland, Somers died at the age of 65.

He had been ill for several months, having been stricken with a serious liver ailment last April when he went to Put-In-Bay to recuperate.

Somers organized the Cleveland Baseball Club in 1900 and was president of the club for 18 years. With Ban Johnson, who died recently, he was looked upon as one of the founders of the American League and for many years was president of the junior circuit.

Mrs. Somers and his daughter, Mrs. W. W. Clark, were at the bedside when death came.

W. Va. Shoot Meet Awarded Keyser

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 29.—(AP.)—Trapshooters of West Virginia are going to Keyser next year for their annual championship tournament.

The officers are J. Sloan Arnold, president; W. H. McFarland, vice president; John Sanders, secretary; F. M. Cannon, treasurer, and L. G. Kincheloe, tournament director.

The election followed championship shoots in the singles contests yesterday. C. H. Bivens, of Elkhorn, broke 194 of 200 targets for the singles championship; Mrs. John Sanders, of Keyser, won the women's championship with 89 hits in 100 tries, and E. P. Smith, Jr., of Fairmont, took the junior title with 88—100.

HENRY MATCHES SARAZEN'S '32 MARK OF 283

SANDWICH, England, June 29.—(AP.)—Henry Cotton, 27-year-old British professional, today won the British Open golf championship with a 72-hole aggregate of 283, tieing the record for the tournament created in 1932 by Gene Sarazen.

After setting a record-breaking pace for the first two rounds, with a 67 and a 65, Cotton stuck his third round this morning in par 72 and faltered on the final round, taking a 79. He missed a three-foot putt on the final green in his bid to break Sarazen's record, but his victory nevertheless ended a 10-year winning streak by Americans.

TRAILED BY 5,000 FANS

Trailed by a gallery of 5,000 stampeding and cheering Britons Cotton went into the final round with a 10-stroke lead over the field.

The pressure of the terrific pace of the previous round coupled with the shouting, bothersome crowd combined to almost cause the Briton's collapse.

Par off the gait he maintained on Wednesday, Thursday and this morning, Cotton's nerves went to pieces on the first 12 holes, on which segment he lost seven strokes to par.

After seeing his huge advantage slowly slipping, he pulled himself together and settled down to finish the last five holes in even par for a 79, seven strokes over par.

Cotton won the title with five strokes to spare, finishing that many shots ahead of Sid Brews, pro at the Durban Golf Club in Natal, South Africa, who finished in second place with two great rounds of 70 and 71 for an aggregate of 288.

AMERICAN PROS TRAIL

The four invading professionals from the United States finished far down the list. Joe Kirkwood, the trick shot Australian, and MacDonald Smith, the veteran Scot now playing from Nashville, Tenn., were tied with totals of 292. Kirkwood shot a smart third round 69 and a 78 on his last round. Smith had a handsome pair of par 72's.

Denny Shute, the American defender of the title, wound up 18 shots behind Cotton, while Gene Sarazen trailed the new champion by 19 strokes. Shute had final rounds of 80 and 78 for 301, while Sarazen carded a 74 and an 80 for 302.

The moment Cotton knocked the ball into the cup on the final hole the crowd rushed onto the green and lifted him to their shoulders. They carried him towards the clubhouse while thousands fought to get close enough to shake his hand. He became the first Britisher to win the title since 1923, when Arthur Havers nosed out Walter Hagen by one stroke.

ESTABLISHES HISTORY

Even though Cotton "backed into" the championship, his performance here established history. As he started out this afternoon, he was 12 under par for 54 holes of the actual event and 17 under par for 120 holes played this week, including the 36-hole qualifying round. On the first day of this, he shot a 66 at St. George's to tie Bobby Jones' qualifying record. In the first round he shot a 67 to tie Walter Hagen's championship low round. In the second round he shot a 65 to break all low-score records for major championships in England and America.

Then he shot a 72 in the third round this morning to finish with a record 204. He needed only a 78 this afternoon for another record. But fate decreed otherwise.

The third and fourth-round cards of Cotton and of the American entrants:

Pro Grid League Confab on Tomorrow

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—The National Professional Football League will begin a two-day meeting here tomorrow with ratification of Detroit's entry into the circuit, approval of the 1934 schedule and decision on possible changes in the rules as the principal items of business.

The league, with Detroit replacing Portsmouth, will be a 10-club loop, the Chicago Bears and Cardinals, Green Bay, Cincinnati, Boston, Brooklyn, New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

WOOD BEATS JONES, GAINS FIFTH ROUND AT WIMBLEDON

HELEN JACOBS CONTINUES ADVANCE

WIMBLEDON, England, June 29 —(AP.)—Sidney B. Wood, Jr., American Davis Cup player and titleholder here in 1931, today advanced to the fifth round of the English tennis championships with a straight-set victory over the former Columbia University tennis and basketball star, Dave Jones, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

The slender, fairhaired Wood, one of the American favorites to regain the title from Jack Crawford, carired too many guns for his big adversary, rallying whenever Jones threatened to win convincingly.

HELEN JACOBS WINS

Helen Jacobs, American champion and title favorite, gained the fourth round in women's singles by defeating Joan Ingram, of England, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1. Helen was far off her game at the start, but gradually settled down and was in complete command of the situation at the finish.

Crawford, top-seeded favorite, easily won his way to the fifth, or "round of eight," with a 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2 victory over the young Japanese Davis Cup player, Jiro Yamagishi.

W. L. Breese, former Harvard star, and his English doubles partner, J. Clynton Reed, defeated the Germans, H. Kleinschroth and W. Menzel, 6-1, 6-4, 6-4, in a first round encounter.

STOEFEN ADVANCES

Lester Stoefen, towering Californian, joined Wood in the quarter-finals with a straight-set victory over H. G. N. Lee, English Cup reserve, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

Little Sarah Palfrey, of Boston, continued her sensational advance to the round of 16 with 6-3, 6-1 victory over Mrs. Kitty McKane Godfree, of England, Wimbledon champion in 1924 and 1926.

Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin, England's second ranking star, won a quarter-final berth with a 6-3, 6-1, 6-2 victory over L. Hecht, of Czecho-Slovakia.

In a first round doubles match, the French tandem of Jean Borotra and J. Brugnon defeated their countrymen, Marcel Bernard and Andre Merlin, 3-6, 6-1, 8-6, 6-3.

Soresi Wants Most Of Primo's Purse

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—It begins to look as if Primo Carnera, former heavyweight boxing champion, may have fought his losing fight against Max Baer for nothing.

Papers on file in the Supreme Court indicated that all the fight did for Primo was to reduce his real estate indebtedness to his manager, Louis R. Soresi, from $88,000 to $47,666.31.

Soresi filed an application with the court for permission to withdraw $72,000 of the $88,000 deposited by Madison Square Garden, promoters of the fight, in a bank. He also asked that an injunction restraining withdrawal of the money be modified.

The manager agreed to allow the remaining $16,000 to stay in the bank to cover a judgment of $15,773.72 obtained by Emilia Tersini, a London waitress, who claimed Carnera promised to marry her.

Millvale, Monessen Cards Completed

The card was completed today for the Fritzie Zivic-Eddie Ran boxing show at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Monday night by the signing of Charley Blozevic to box Harry Krause in the second five-rounder and Paddy Gray to meet Dandy Allen in the opener. Ran was due to arrve today to finish his training here.

The complete card for the benefit boxing show to be held at Tinplate Field, Monessen, Friday night, July 13, has been announced as follows: Tiger Joe Randall vs. Eddie (Kid) Wolfe, 10 rounds; Joey Speigal vs. Billy Holt, 8 rounds; Jimmy Belmont vs. Young Rudy and Max Elling vs. Jimmy Columbo, 6 rounds each, and Ralph Gizzy vs. Charley Blozevich, 5 rounds. Jack Dempsey will referee the main bout and semi-final.

Amateur Ring Stars Score K. O. Wins

ELIZABETH, Pa., June 29. — Amateur boxers had their knockout punches on display here last night as they battled through an eight-bout program at the local high school field. The show was part of the Elizabeth centennial celebration. Four knockouts, two of them of a technical variety, were recorded.

In a feature bout, Johnny Daniels, heavyweight, knocked out Tiger Griffith in the third round.

To the Sports Editor:

It is none of my business, but I've been wondering why those boys down in South America keep shooting at each other. Paraguay and Bolivia have made up their minds to make each other say "Uncle." It is kind of strange to think that somewhere in the world there is a war going on and no one outside of those fighting knows what it is all about, and maybe even they don't. They call it a Chaco War, which doesn't make it any clearer. But they must be mad about something.

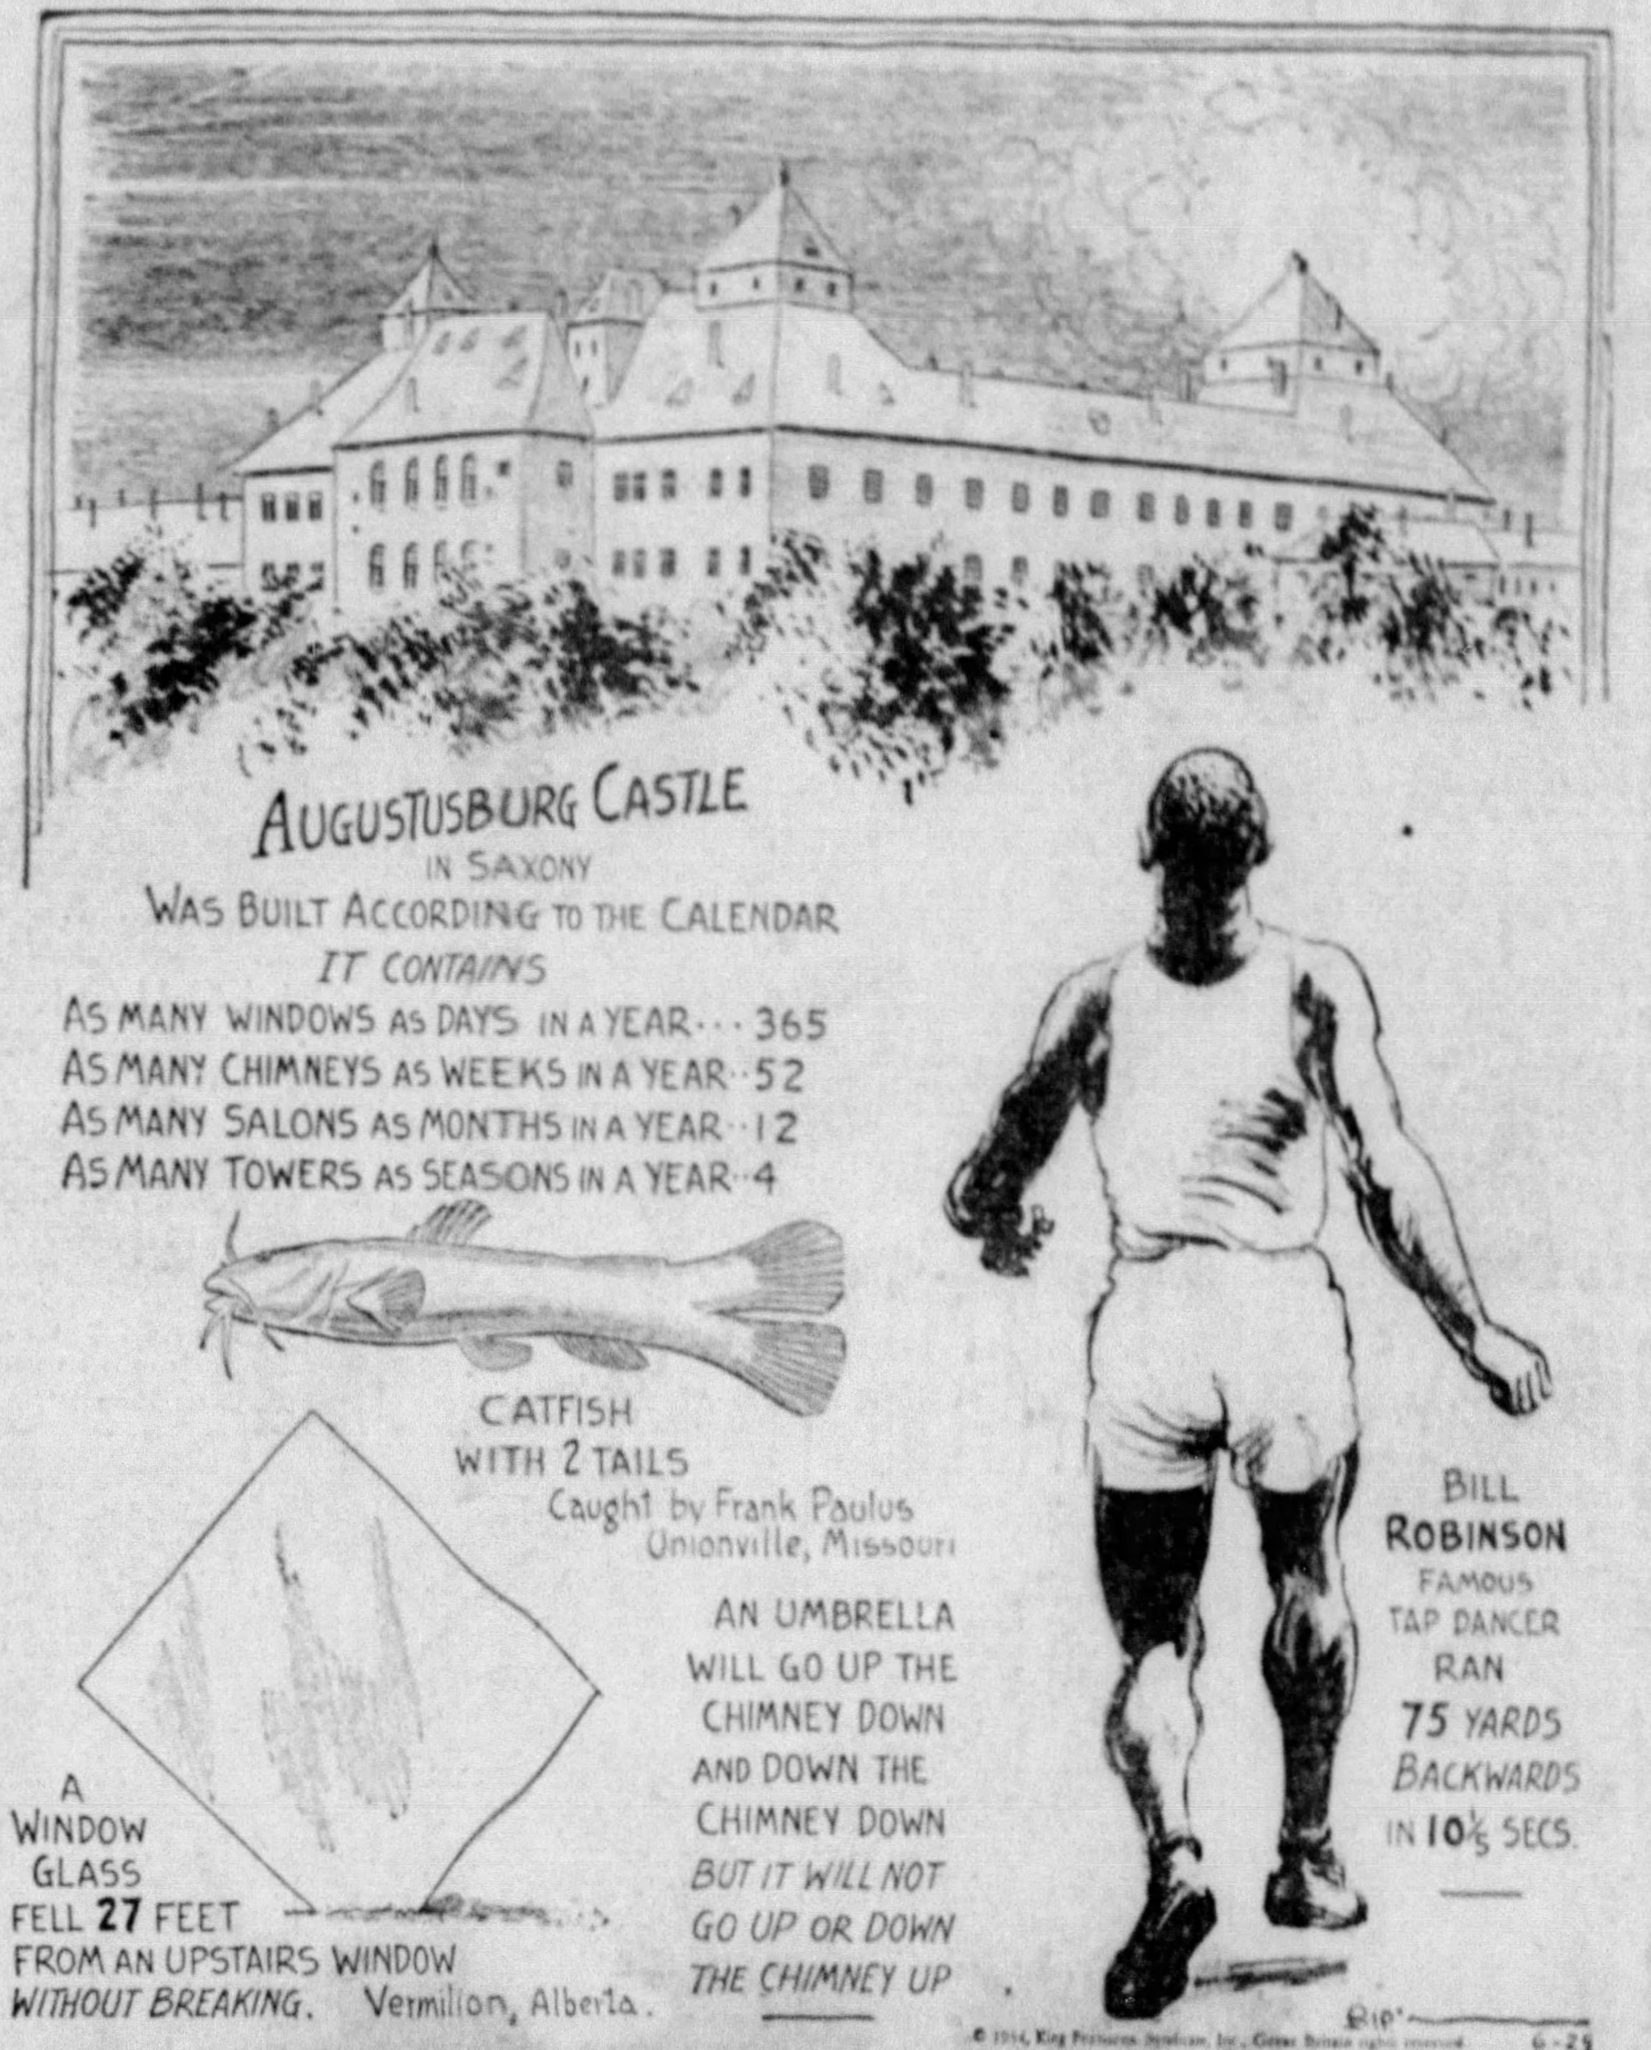
Believe It Or Not — By Ripley



EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: A TIME BEATING PREACHER—Rev. Jack Sparling, of Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex., enjoyed a race with time for many months when he was preaching semi-monthly sermons in different towns at the same hour of the day. Sparling would meet his Logan (New Mexico) congregation at 11 a. m., preach until 11:45 and then dash over to Pleasant Valley and meet that congregation at the same hour—11 a. m. Logan is on Central Time and Pleasant Valley is on Mountain Time, a difference of one hour. IMMORTAL PUNISHMENT — Casimir Martin Gomez, a municipal employee, of Soria, Spain, was convicted on hundreds of counts of embezzlement, fraud and malfeasance, in November, 1921. Spanish law does not forsee a concurrent service of punishment and so the delinquent was sentenced to serve numerous terms of imprisonment consecutively. The total time was 978 years. After he learned the total, Gomez remarked grimly that all the power of the State cannot compel him to serve the sentence in full.

Elmer Knetzer, veteran pitcher, and Chippy De Stout, classy shortstop, have aligned themselves with the Homewood Club for the second half race in the City League. Both of these players were with Dormont during the first half campaign.

De Stout, probably the best shortstop in the league, first signed with Homewood but went away to fulfill a minor league contract. Returning home, Chippy signed with the Dormont team. Knetzer should be valuable to Bill Dalzell. He has plenty of good games left in his arm, and his baseball knowledge is worth much to a manager.

Homewood threw a monkey wrench into the Book machinery last evening. Bill Dalzell's club threw a scare into the Olympia Park outfit by trouncing it, 11 to 4. The Books needed the game to clinch the first half title. Now the Mounties must go through with a postponed game with Mt. Oliver at the Frederick street grounds. If the Books fail to win this game, then they will be tied with Homewood for the crown.

Leo Carroll started on the mound for the defending champions, but the Homewood wrecking crew certainly took him to town. Bimmy Steele went to the rescue. The redhead fared little better, however, and with Miller holding the home club in hand, Homewood went on to win.

Two games are carded in the league this evening. Parmelee appears at Dormont and Homewood travels to the Salt Works to meet the Vaughans.

PARSHALL GETS TRIPLE WIN IN OHIO

CLEVELAND, June 29.—(AP.)—Dr. Hugh M. Parshall, of Urbana, one of the leading harness reinsman of the United States, won the $1,500 Ohio free-for-all trot at North Randall track yesterday in straight heats, with Morley Prisco, owned by Will Leber, Ephrata (Pa.) sportsman. The son of Bob Prisco trotted the two fastest miles of the season in a race, in 2:02 1-5 and 2:02, and was an outsider in the betting, being a $25 choice in pools totaling $142.

Besides the free-for-all trot, Parshall also won the second event, a 2:13 trot, in straight heats, with Mac Hanover, owned by Eugene Frey of York, Pa., and also won the first division of the 2:18 trot, with Benel, the Todd entry, which paid $33 for $2. He made it three victories for the day when he won the fourth event, a 3-year-old trot, with Muscletone.

TIGERS FEARED MOST IN AMERICAN

EASTERN TRIP SHOWS METTLE OF BENGALS

Mickey Cochrane's Detroit Tigers were back in the West today, no longer in first place but, paradoxically enough, more feared than ever by the rest of the American League.

The significant development of Detroit's long road trip into the East was not that they were forced to surrender the lead to the New York Yankees but that they played so well that today they were only a half game from the top.

Pennants are won on the road and there was none to rail at the Tiger record of 10 victories and five defeats in the East. The Yankees, despite a spurt that gave them 12 victories in 16 games on their home grounds, picked up only a game and a half on the Tigers while Cochrane's surprising club was on tour.

Playing a one day stand at home before leaving for another but shorter road trip in the West, Detroit squeezed out an 8-7 victory over the Chicago White Sox yesterday, in 10 innings, and remained only a half game away from the Yankees, who won a 4-0 shutout over the Washington Senators.

For six innings it was a pitching duel between Fred Marberry and Sad Sam Jones, with Detroit holding a 1-0 lead. But Marberry, who hadn't permitted a man to reach third base, suddenly blew up in the 101-degree heat, and Chicago scored six runs in the seventh. After that it was strictly a batting duel, with the Tigers tying the score in the ninth and winning in the tenth on successive doubles by Charley Gehringer and Hank Greenberg.

Bob Johnson's twenty-third homer and Jimmy Foxx's twenty-first helped the Philadelphia Athletics whip Boston Red Sox, 7-1, in the only other game played in the major leagues.

COLLEGE NET CHAMP BOWS

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—(AP.)—An 18-year-old giant killer from New England, who applies to tennis the "put 'em where they ain't" philosophy Willie Keeler brought to baseball, has blasted the defending champion from the national intercollegiate tennis picture.

In chalking up his 6-4 6-1 triumph yesterday to crush the hopes [of J]ack Tidball, ace of the University [of] California at Los Angeles, had [of] retaining his title, this youngster, Gilbert Hunt, of Massachusetts Tech, swept into the semifinals of the fiftieth anniversary [tou]rnament at Merion Cricket [Clu]b.

[T]he conquest of Hunt, however, [was] not the only surprise in the [quar]ter-final competition. Bill Reese, of Georgia Tech, mowed down third seeded Martin Buxby, of Texas, 4-6, 6-2 6-1.

SEEDED STARS COUNTY NET VICTORS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Second bracket battling in men's singles comprises the bulk of this afternoon's card of action in the annual Allegheny County tennis championships, in progress since yesterday on the rectangles of the Westinghouse Club on the Greensburg pike. Several first round jousts, however, still remain to be reeled off, while there is likelihood that Frank Broida, top ranked entrant, and Elmer Olsen, Fifth-Shady dark horse, may meet in third frame combat to ease the survivor a notch ahead of the field.

Seven of the eight seeded performers came through the inaugural unscathed. Russ Unger, Stanton ace and fifth on the list, was not slated for action till today. Broida, bearing Belmont colors, captured two verdicts, though young Pete Barber, blond Westinghouser, pulled a surprise by gleaning the initial set from the southpaw flash before succumbing at 4-6, 6-0, 6-0, and Tick Tichvinsky carried him to 6-2, 7-5.

Bill Haseltine, steady Philadelphian, who won the county crown in 1933, began his defense of the diadem with a protracted 6-1, 6-3 win over Bud Leyda, Bellevue youth. Meanwhile Drs. Dave and John O'Loughlin accounted for Gilbert Keisling, Twilight League leader, and Howard Clark, tourney chairman, respectively. The summary:

MEN'S SINGLES

First round: Upper half—Frank Broida defeated D. P. Barber, 4-6, 6-0, 6-0; L. M. Tichvinsky defeated Charles Glaser, 6-2, 6-4; Elmer Olsen won from Robert Bald, by default; Harbaugh Miller won from Dillinger R. Hixson, by default; Frank S. Smith defeated Arthur Thielemann, 6-1, 6-1; William Kiser won from Roy Heckler, by default; Ted Rosenthal won from Ralph Bald, by default; S. L. Burgwin defeated Ralph W. Massey, 6-0, 6-1; Dr. John L. O'Loughlin defeated Howard E. Clark, 6-2, 6-2; George Wilson defeated William S. Berrensen, 6-4, 6-4; Don C. Snyder won from Austin Famariss, by default; Stanley McCaskey won from William Smith, by default; Ralph Snively defeated Elmer C. Best, 6-3, 1-6, 6-3; William J. Clardy won from Robert T. Lampus, by default.

Lower half—William P. Haseltine defeated Crosby Leyda, 6-1, 6-3; E. R. Ashcraft led Joseph W. Madden, 7-5, 5-5, at dark; Paul Massey defeated Sam R. Keller, 6-3, 6-1; Robert L. Madden defeated Dick Cable, 6-1, 6-3; Paul G. Sullivan defeated Harry Wald, 1-6, 6-4, 6-4; Arthur J. Glaser defeated Keller Pollock, 7-9, 6-4, 6-0; Albert Lazar won from Charles Boyd, by default; Dr. David L. O'Loughlin defeated Gilbert Keisling, 6-0, 6-1; Gerald Maloney defeated E. A. Knoche, 6-1, 4-6, 6-3; John R. Brown defeated Ralph O. Watson, 6-3, 6-4; Robert Grier defeated Edgar T. Hammer, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4; Jack Keane defeated William Crowley, 6-1, 6-2; Neal O. Rumsey won from William A. McCabe, by default; Tad Anderson defeated Robert C. McGuinness, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Second round: Upper half—Frank Broida defeated L. M. Tichvinsky, 6-2, 7-5; Elmer Olsen defeated Harbaugh Miller, 6-3, 6-2.

The clever Amber Street squad holds undisputed possession of first place in the newly formed East End Twilight Tennis League as the Keisling loop swings through its third weekly round. The Amberites have yet to drop a verdict, while their nearest rival, Fifth-Shady, has suffered one setback in as many starts. The standing of the teams:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Amber Street	5	0	1000
Fifth-Shady	4	1	.800
First Baptist	3	3	.500
Westinghouse	2	4	.333

FATHERS, SONS SHARE LEAD

By TOM BIRKS

Carl Van der Voort and his son, Robert Van der Voort, of the Oakmont Country Club, and C. K. Robertson and his son, H. A. Robertson, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, were pacing the early finishers in the twelfth annual fathers' and sons' golf tournament at the Oakmont Country Club today.

The Robertsons and the Van der Voorts both turned in net 79s. The Robertsons scored 89-10—79 and the Van der Voorts reported 92-13—79. The scores:

C. K. Robertson and H. A. Robertson, Field Club	89	10	79
C. Van der Voort and Robert Van der Voort, Oakmont	92	13	79
A. M. Harper and J. Harper, Chartiers Heights	92	11	81
P. E. Green and T. E. Green, Butler	100	16	84
G. Wittmer and G. Wittmer III, Wildwood	100	21	79
F. W. Weir and F. G. Weir, Wildwood	104	16	88
W. B. Chapman and W. K. Chapman, Chartiers Heights	102	19	83
O. J. Binsford and R. J. Binsford, Butler	103	13	90
T. Wright and T. Wright, Jr., Fox Chapel	102	19	83
R. E. Jamison and R. E. Jamison, Jr., Hannastown	104	18	86

All officers, with the exception of W. T. McCullough, of Oakmont, a newcomer on the board of governors, were retained for next year. J. Frederick Byers, of Allegheny, is president; W. C. Fownes, Jr., of Oakmont, vice president, and George A. Ormiston, of Oakmont, secretary-treasurer.

The board of governors besides McCullough, includes Byers, W. A. Irvin, Field Club; A. K. Oliver, Fox Chapel; G. P. Rose, Allegheny; Tom Jamison, Greensburg; R. W. Smith, Greensburg; R. M. Gibson, Oakmont, and J. L. Marks, Oakmont.

The final matches in Sections I and 11 of the Women's team league are carded today. Section I clashes at Fox Chapel, and a battle royal between the Field Club and Oakmont looms. Oakmont has a one-point lead and today clashes with Fox Chapel. The Field Club meets Edgewood.

Section II goes into action at the Pittsburgh Country Club. Little interest marks the playing of these matches, since St. Clair has the title safely tucked away.

The Highland Country Club's golfers defeated a picked South Hills squad, 65 to 58 in a closely contested match at Highland yesterday.

In the feature match, the rival pros, Sam Parks, Jr., of South Hills, and Vince Eldred, met, honors being even at the completion of 18 holes. Both stars beat par, Parks carding a 66 and Eldred a 67.

E. A. Damrau and Mrs. L. G. Riley won low gross honors in the mixed foursomes played at Edgewood yesterday, with an 84. Low net was taken by J. A. Quinn and Mrs. A. J. Wyant, who scored a 71.

BOXER GIVES BLOOD, THEN SCORES WIN

First, because he so gladly volunteered for a blood transfusion for a friend, and second, because he so decisively defeated a rival of long standing in their fourth meeting in the squared arena. The two events occurred within a few hours yesterday.

Todd was called to a hospital for his third transfer of blood to Howard Mayberry, of Donora, a former star bantamweight boxer, injured in an automobile accident last Armistice Day.

Then Todd left the hospital and went to Connellsville, where he outpointed George Bittner, of Uniontown. It was Todd's first victory in four meetings with Bittner.

Once, during the fight, an incision in Todd's arm, from whence the blood was drawn, broke open. Physicians halted the fight and stopped the flow, after which the bout was resumed.

In other bouts on the card, Leo Sweeney won by a technical knockout over Billy Nilan in the third round; Billy Miller defeated Young Roreck; Steve Walters won by a technical knockout over Rabbit Ely; Dick Kozell defeated Curley Hughes and Emil Joseph defeated Belton Parker.

A. A. U. TITLE MEET OPENS

MILWAUKEE, June 29.—(AP.)—America's greatest track and field athletes began today an assault on existing world and American records in the forty-seventh annual running of the American outdoor track and field championships under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Junior events this afternoon and tonight occupy the leading spot on the two-day program as athletes who have not previously won a national championship competed for honors in the pole vault, broad jump, shotput, javelin, hurdles, distance and middle distance runs.

The only senior final events scheduled for today are the 10,000-meter run and the 5,000-meter walk.

Much speculation centered today about the condition of Glenn Cunningham, Kansas' great miler, who has been bothered with a twisted ankle on one leg and a strained muscle on the other. Trainers reported the injuries were responding to treatment and he most likely would be in top shape for his "rubber" match with Bill Bonthron, of Princeton, and Gene Venzke, of Pennsylvania, at 1,500 meters.

College Golfers Near Title Round

CLEVELAND, June 29.—(AP.)—It is Michigan against the South today in the semi-finals of the national intercollegiate golf championship.

Charley Yates and Frank Ridley, of Georgia Tech, fight it out across the heat-seared greens of Country Club for the right to enter the finals against either Charley Kocsis, of Michigan, or the Southwest's Ed White, 20-year-old Texas junior.

Kocsis yesterday eliminated a teammate, Woodrow Mallow, 9 and 8; Yates put out Bill Dear, 2 and 1; Ridley defeated Vince Fehlig, of Notre Dame, 4 and 2, and White downed Johnny Banks, also of Notre Dame, 1 up on the thirty-seventh hole.

Ebensburg Ready For Harness Meet

EBENSBURG, Pa., June 29.—Everything is in first-class condition for the big July Fourth celebration to be held at the local fairgrounds. Workmen are busily engaged putting the finishing touches to the improvements.

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Freddie Steele vs. Bucky Lawless, 10 rounds, Seattle.
Harry Fierro vs. Pail Lee, 10 rounds, Nashville.

Memory Test

Answers to yesterday's Sports Memory Test questions follow:

1—The Athletics scored only six runs in losing four straight games to the Miracle Boston Braves in the world series of 1914. The scores were 7-1, 1-0, 5-4 (12 innings) and 3-1.

2—Ty Cobb played in the major leagues 24 years.

3—The Pirates defeated Boston Braves, 2-0, in 21 innings, to set a major league record for non-scoring innings in 1918.

4—Jack Sharkey's record for his last three fights were defeats by Primo Carnera, King Levinsky and Tommy Loughran. He was knocked out in six rounds by Carnera to lose the heavyweight championship and lost the other two bouts on points in 10 and 15 rounds.

(See today's questions in Sports Section.)

Girl in the Family

By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER XXIII.

He went on telling her how he had worked his way through his freshman and sophomore years at college, waiting on the table in his fraternity house and working in a book store afternoons and evenings, and providing for his mother who had spent the last three years of her life in a sanitarium on the desert.

"I've always been able to make money," he said, not boastfully but in the level voice in which people usually make flat truthful statements. "And I know I'll be able to take good care of you, Susan, as soon as I've passed the doggone bar examinations."

"Well, then, everything's settled and there's nothing for us to argue about any more," Susan answered eagerly. "You look after your career for a few months and I'll manage Wallace and the family—and let's not have any more misunderstandings."

They stopped, moved by a common impulse, in the shadow of a tree that stood between the sidewalk and the road and kissed each other. It seemed to Susan, as their lips met, that everything was clear as crystal between them once more, and she walked into the house a half hour later humming "The Waters of Minnetonka" under her breath and feeling that, when the time came to make the break with Wallace and tell the family about it, she would be ready for it.

Synopsis

Lovely Susan Broderick lives in the old family mansion with her father, Morris, brother John, Uncle Worthy, his wife, Edna, and a spinster aunt, Lutie. Although they have lost their wealth the old folks live in a dream world of social prominence. They feel humiliated when it is necessary to take in a "paying guest." The family wonders what Susan's fiance, Wallace Steffen, young banker, will think. John does not like Wallace. While Susan is waiting for Wallace, Mr. Sholes, the roomer, arrives. Uncle Worthy reprimands her for talking with Sholes. Wallace presents Susan with a diamond and sapphire ring. Later, Susan comes upon the jeweler's box, stamped with the name of a firm long out of business. The Brodericks objected to Suan and John being friendly with their late mother's relatives, the Cullens. Susan tells Cousin Mary about Sholes. Wallace leaves on trip. Susan's father tells family he's going to be married. Susan leaves party at home and joins Cullen. Susan's engagement to Wallace is announced simultaneously with the wedding of her father. Susan realizes she doesn't love Wallace. Uncle Worthy's bootlegger calls. Susan and Allen declare love for each other.

Now Go On

Anna Leaves

Early Sunday afternoon Herbst, in a derby hat and a long black overcoat that made him look like a stranger, came driving into the Brodericks' yard and stopped his milk truck at the foot of the back steps.

On the porch stood the two small yellow trunks that Anna had brought with her to the Broderick house years before. On the top of one of them was a round hard cloth-covered ball as large as a young watermelon. It was covered with dangling wooden bobbins, and fastened to it with steel pins was a short length of shell-patterned lace. Anna called it her "lace pillow," and she had told Susan that she had made it out of scraps of cloth when she was a little girl in the "old country." Her cheap cotton umbrella stood against the trunk, and two large framed photographs were propped against it, a large colored portrait of Herbst and a photograph of his sister's wedding party, taken a year before. Anna was in the picture, smiling broadly and happily, one large hand on Herbst's shoulder and the other one holding a perfectly round bouquet of flowers.

All of these things Herbst and John, who came out to help him, carried down the steps and put into the back of the milk truck while Susan stood on the porch, holding Anna's two pots of Boston ferns, carefully wrapped in newspaper, that Anna was taking with her to Herbst's house where she intended to stay until she found another place as housemaid.

"Maybe we get marry," she had said to Susan that morning as she washed the last breakfast dishes she would ever wash in the Broderick's kitchen. "Herbst say we sure do if I cannot find a job."

She had seemed to be very cheerful all day and had made a pan of cabbage leaf rolls, for which she would never give anyone the recipe, and a devil's food cake for John who was extremely fond of it, and Susan had heard her whistling to herself in the kitchen as she peeled the potatoes for Sunday dinner.

Traces of Tears

But Anna was very pink and there were traces of tears on her face when she came down to the kitchen in her best clothes, a suit of bright blue cloth, trimmed with dabs of dyed brown fur. However, her smile was as wide as usual as she kissed Susan and John goodby.

"I was going to say goodby to Mrs. Broderick and Miss Lutie, but they are asleep, like always on Sunday afternoon," she said to Susan, climbing into the truck beside Herbst. "Goodby, I come soon and bring you some coffee kuchen."

Then, just as the truck was starting away making a noise like a threshing machine, she leaned out from the seat and called loudly to John above the noise:

"John! Mister John! I leave your goose grease by your room for you!" Every year she filled a jar with a mixture of turpentine and grease from the New Year's roast goose and put it carefuly away for John to rub on his chest if he should have a recurrence of the bronchitis that he had had every winter when he was growing up.

"Goodby!" she called again and waved her cotton umbrella at them in farewell until the truck vanished beyond the shoe fixery on the corner, and Susan and John went back into the kitchen which she had left swept and shining as usual. It had always been the most cheerful room in the house, with Anna's crochet work on the shelf beside the clock and her potato vine growing in a pot on the window sill above the sink. There had always been the sound of her voice humming as she worked, and there had been her love affair with Herbst to talk over. The room seemed very empty now without her, and the ticking of the clock and the sudden click of sleet against the windows had a melancholy sound.

"It's going to seem mighty funny around here without Anna, isn't it?" John seated himself on a corner of the kitchen table and pulled his pipe from his pocket. "Gosh, I thought the folks would hang on to her till the bitter end, whether they paid her or not! Susan, remember how she used to warm our coats and leggings here in front of the stove when we were going to school on cold mornings?"

"And how she used to put pennies in our lunch boxes sometimes so we could buy waffles from the man who drove past the school yard at noon?" Susan said. "Remember?"

"She's a swell gal." John spoke with a sudden brisk heartiness as if he were afraid of becoming too sentimental over her departure. If there was anything that he abominated it was what he called "sloppiness' in any form, and he often preached small slangy sermons to Susan on the importance of keeping one's mind as hard and fit as one's body.

"It's probably a good thing for her that she's lost this job," he remarked, pouring tobacco into the bowl of his pipe and pressing it down with his thumb. "She'll marry Herbst now and live happily ever after, helping Herbst with his dairy business."

He got up from the table, crossed the kitchen and carefully closed the door that led to the dining room.

"Susie," he said, "I have a chance to go out to Omaha."

"Omaha?" Susan's eyes stared at him blankly. "Omaha. . . . What would you go there for?' Omaha sounded as remote as Calcutta to her.

"To be assistant sports editor on a newspaper out there. A paper that belongs to Colonel Parsons," John explained. "He has a string of six or seven papers, and every now and then he shifts people around from one to another of them. He wants me and Gowen to go out to the Omaha paper to take charge of the sports desk at the end of this week."

"At the end of this week?"

"Yep. Gowen's said he'd go, and I feel pretty sure I will, too. Parsons gets sore at people if they don't do what he wants them to."

Susan had never seen Colonel Parsons, and she had met Gowen, the sporting editor of The Express, only once. She remembered him as a gray, dusty looking little man, much too stout and settled to be writing about such swift flashing things as tennis tournaments and World Series and prize fights. It seemed incredible to her that those two men, about whom she knew almost nothing, should be the two most important figures in John's life—that they should be taking him away from her.

John Going Away

"Do you want to go?" she asked him with difficulty because a large dry lump had come up into her throat and was sticking there. But while she asked the question she know that he did want to go. She could see the light of adventure in his face as he turned it toward the window and looked out into the gray sleet that filled the air. For trying new things John had always "taken the cake," as Lutie put it in her twenty-year-old slang phrase.

"Sure, I'm going to. The salary will be fifty a week, and if I make good, Connie and I can get married in the Spring."

"You've told her about it?"

He nodded and grinned. "Yes, and she's all for getting married right away and going out with me. She has some money of her own, and she says she's going to start a lending library out there and make some money, too." Susan saw him smile to himself at the thought of Connie and her enterprise.

"She won't have to do anything when you're making fifty a week," Susan said, and then she remembered all at once that John had promised to pay Aunt Edna ten dollars a week for her board until her father returned from his honeymoon. He would need that money if he married Connie.

"John," she said, "Dad will be back soon. He'll pay the family whatever I owe them then for my board here—and I don't want you to do anything more about it. With you gone and dad gone and Anna gone the household expenses here ought to be next to nothing. I can't bear the thought of letting you support me when I know you'd like to marry Connie now and take her with you."

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Riding a bicycle is probably just as good exercise as walking and you get farther in the same time. Coasting down the hills gives you a chance to rest up for the next hill.

We used to play hare and hounds on a bicycle. With a piece of chalk, the "hares" mark an arrow on the street showing the direction they are headed. It is up to the "hounds" to catch the "hares" before they get back home.

There is only one big danger, fellows. There are so many cars and trucks that it is dangerous on the streets if you don't observe all the traffic rules. And then be careful.

Some careless "bike" riders "wobble" on the street. Most automobile drivers are careful, and watch traffic closely. But there may be a car coming fast. If your bicycle wanders out into the street, a fast driver may not see you in time. And there will be a smashup.

One of the best ways Junior Patrol members can help others is to remind all their friends and their families that the streets are dangerous. Look up and down before you cross the street.

Even when you are riding in your father's car, if you are not old enough to drive yourself yet, practice being a careful driver. Think how you would drive the car, if you were behind the wheel. When the car comes to an intersection, you should plan to go slowly, ready to stop quickly.

And when you come to a main street where there is a sign that says "Stop." Then stop. That's what the sign means. And you will probably avoid at least one wreck if you always do stop. Stopping at places like that gives you a chance to look up and down the road to make sure that somebody isn't coming on the wrong side or driving real fast down the other—too fast to stop for you.

In spite of the drought, now that we have had a couple of good rains, the trees are lovely this year. See how many you can name.

Ten Grand « Daily Short Short-Story

By ROBERT FAHERTY

The last final of the evening paper on the desk screamed in 120-point gothic:

"TONY MARTI SLAIN; GANG'S RULE ENDED."

Big Jim Schultz fidgeted in his chair and pecked at the typewriter with thick, stubby fingers.

"Say, Loot," he said, "how do you spell suspicioned? I'd go on late watch for life if I could get out of doing these reports."

Lieut. Homan grinned.

"Go ahead, Jim. You know, the commissioner wants you to put everything down. You get a kind of picture in your head and you say it that way."

"Yeh, I get it. Like a story in the paper. I'm saying it this way. 'At 5:10 p. m. of the above date I was proceeding north on the west side of Market street when I saw a girl and a man standing near the front door of the place where Tony Marti has his dice joint. They walked away when a cab brought two more men there and the fellow put the girl into another cab and then came back and the three men went in.

"'A little while later I was proceeding south on the east side of Market when I heard something like an automobile backfiring, near Tony's place. But there wasn't any auto so I suspicioned there was a shooting. I proceeded to make an investigation . . .'"

Big Jim began to write.

Tony Marti knelt and thrust both hands into the little safe. His thick shoulders were hunched over. A ceiling globe diffused a yellow light over the little office, upon Tony's white shirt.

"Yeh," Marti grunted.

There was silence. The other two stepped near the safe, stopped and peered in.

"She's empty," said Regan.

Marti faced the pair.

"You saw me put the dough in there three hours ago," he growled. "Who's got it?"

"Listen, Tony," Zimmerman said. "Maybe we can make most of the dough back tonight. No use—er—doing anything. You and I and Slim will clean up if we stick together. Say, Tony, I been with you ever since we locked up, ain't I?"

"And Slim, he's been up at the flat with Romey and the boys. Weren't you, Slim?"

Regan's voice was knifelike.

"That's enough, Tony. Enough about—her."

Marti stepped toward Regan. The right hand and the automatic punctuated his sentence.

"You guys better not pull anything on me. Things are going to be on the up and up or there'll be a new deal."

Regan stood squarely, the right hand moving a little in the coat pocket. His gray eyes were wide open.

"You mean me?" he said evenly.

"I mean a guy would be a piker to go out for ten grand."

Al Zimmerman stepped back and leaned against the desk. His elbow brushed a heap of newspapers aside and the gesture sent something across the desk with a metallic clattering. It glinted in the yellow light, teetered for an instant at the edge of the desk and dropped to the floor.

Slim Regan saw it at the instant Tony, Marti's eyes swerved to it . . . a brass clip which fits into the hand-grip of an automatic pistol and holds the cartridges. One of its row of bullets was visible, round, brass-jacketed, big—of 45 caliber.

"Look out, Tony!" yelled Zimmerman. As Slim Regan shot through his coat pocket there was a futile little click from the automatic in Marti's hand. Marti crumpled and sprawled, inert, on the floor.

A gun flashed, silvery, in Zimmerman's hand and there were two orange jets of fire from it, almost at the split-second that Regan whirled toward him, shooting.

Big Jim Schultz' thick fingers pecked at the typewriter.

"Say, Loot, how do you spell 'cartridge'?"

The typewriter ticked on, then stopped. Big Jim looked proudly at the last lines on the blue paper and read them aloud:

"I proceeded to pick up the guns after I see Tony Marti is deceased and the wagon men take Slim Regan and Al Zimmerman to Tenth Street Hospital. I proceeded to the hospital and talked to the same and took their statements that said the house rod must not have had any shell clip in its handle when it was put into the safe.

"Knowing it was Tony that put the rod into the safe with the handle empty, I made my check-up by looking into the hole in the handle. Instead of shells I found money in the same. The total was ten thousand. It was ten bills. I proceeded to headquarters and turned the money over to the captain."

"You're sure you got the figures right for the commissioner, Jim?"

"Sure. It was ten grand."

The front-door salesman is maligned,
And quite unloved (by those refined,
We mean) because he tries to save
The housewife from an early grave
With fixtures and contraptions that
Will mop the floor, or take off fat,
Or open cans, or hold up socks,
Or come in handy cleaning clocks.
And though his articles may be
As useless as their guarantee,
We're sure his motives are the best
And that he's no malicious pest,
Although he seems in judgement to
Be lacking, for, with much ado,
He always comes to court a snub
Just when his public's in the tub.

Our Diplomacy Is Too Corrugated

There seems to be a well-striped tendency among the leading diplomats to lay their cards on the table before sawing the legs off that essential article of furniture.

The last Geneva conference was the one that indicated a desire for more amity and concord.

Why should the world fight when it can be just as miserable talking about it?

Why should men stab each other in the stomach in war when the same carving operation can be performed safely from the back in piping times of peace?

How many of the diplomats have the serenity of the world in view? How many are thinking of their own careers? Why doesn't Premier Skammawamm be honest and say, "Price at any Peace?"

If an ambassador owns a munitions academy you know he ain't going to leave the conference without trying to cootie it up.

This thing should be as easy to iron out as a summer necktie.

But, every nation is suspicious of the other country's intentions. This palsy-walsy business is as lasting as a barroom friendship. One day we hear that Russia has a secret treaty with Portugal not to grow olives on icebergs. The next day there is a rumor that Siam will purchase all the sisal and jute that the Eskimos can produce. Showing the whole idea of treaties is bogus philanthropy. Get all you can on credit and charge the rest. Don't steal bacon from your own farm.

The histories of great diplomats like Talleyrand, Disraeli and Bismarck prove that the dice had round corners. They pulled the wool over your eyes after you had paid for silk.

The best you get is the worst of it. So why should you step into the ring against a tough opponent when you can win the championship just by an exhibition of shadow-boxing?

The signatures on the treaties merely prove that fountain pens have killed more men than guns. America never did shine at any peace conference that we know of. Our idea of diplomacy is to dump tea overboard, whack 'em over the whiskers with a bed slat and to roar at the edge of the woods. Results prove that we are right. When we pat a pal on the back he swallows his tobacco.

We may not be suave but nobody punches our ticket twice for one ride.

Study Economic Reforms!

President Should Appoint Commission to Review Inconsistencies in Security Laws

In this quiet interlude while Congress is out of session, President Roosevelt should appoint a commission of competent men to review the fundamental new federal financial legislation.

Important milestones were passed in the enactment of the banking act of 1933, the federal securities act, and the stock exchange control act.

The general direction of such legislation was correct.

With further refinement, better co-ordination, and intelligent revision, the new trinity of laws will constitute the basis for a more socially useful banking system than the country has ever before enjoyed.

But these laws were passed hurriedly in the white heat of popular excitement over demonstrated evils in the old order.

As a result of the haste in drafting, inevitable inconsistencies and vagaries crept into the statutes.

Accordingly, unless they are properly amended on the initiative of their advocates, their very weaknesses will play into the hands of irreconcilable opponents who are slyly waiting for the time to come when they can lead a movement to scrap the constructive reforms.

An expert commission, giving representation both to scholars and to practical commercial and investment bankers, could study ways and means of making the new technique more workable.

On the basis of studies, such as the MacMillan commission made in Great Britain in 1931, the President could later recommend clarifying amendments to Congress.

This suggested procedure would add one more instrument to economic recovery, for, to the extent that the financial system functions well, the process of re-employment is facilitated.

The commission could formulate statutory changes which would at one stroke of the pen break the deadlock resulting from uncertainty as to the meaning of certain phases of the new laws.

Of course, without presidential intervention, the job of clarification would in due course be undertaken by the courts.

But it would take 10 years to build up a body of legal decisions which would eliminate all the essential ambiguities and inconsistencies.

Meantime, initiative would be discouraged by uncertainty as to the law.

For example, new financing—for job-creating purposes—would be restricted as long as directors of issuing corporations were in doubt as to their precise liabilities.

The very continuance of uncertainty as to ultimate decisions on these fundamental questions bears down on confidence, and thwarts recovery efforts.

The proposed commission, with wide powers of inquiry, could formulate the remaining legislative touches needed to create an organic banking system, which would operate effectively in the interest of the American people.

The President recognizes the need of appraising the practical consequences of what has already been accomplished.

If he acts in the manner suggested, he will be able to make specific suggestions to Congress when it reconvenes for putting his monument of financial reforms into a permanent form.

To the extent that the financial system is purified and yet made thoroughly workable, the Roosevelt administration will long be favorably remembered.

Clarification Needed

Manner of Collection Furnishes Another Problem in Tube Toll Controversy

In the absence of any definite allocation of money from the federal government, it was perhaps natural that the Allegheny County Authority, which will expend the funds when received, should not have been expected to promulgate any hard and fast rules as to matters of administration, particularly with respect to the imposition and collection of tolls on self-liquidating projects.

However, it does seem reasonable that the Authority now can make some tentative suggestions as to what it has in mind, remembering always that they may be subject to revision in the light of actual experience. The money has been granted. Perhaps some such frankness might in a measure placate the South Hills residents who so bitterly oppose the tolls.

So far the opposition has been based entirely on the theory that real estate values in that section would be depreciated because of the financial burden of the tolls. But there is another problem almost, if not quite, as serious. That surrounds the manner in which the tolls shall be collected, if imposed.

Manifestly the individual collection of a toll from each automobile using the Liberty Bridge and Tubes would result in traffic congestion many times worse than that now faced by the South Hills residents. The confusion of collection, of making change, of stopping and starting motors at a toll station, would mean such delays as to destroy all South Hills advantages.

If tolls are levied, some way must be found to collect them without increasing the traffic problem. It has been suggested that regular users of the Tubes might have a tag or an emblem affixed to the automobile, and for which a flat rate would be charged. Such autoists could use a separate traffic lane.

Such emblems would sell, perhaps, at a reduced rate, something less than the fee charged to transients, who would pay individually each time they used the Tubes.

Some clarifying utterance on this subject, either from the County Commissioners or the Authority—preferably the latter—might prove beneficial.

The toll question, so far as finances are concerned, is important, but equally so is the matter of inconvenience which might be caused through collection.

Motorists Can Aid

During Resurfacing of Boulevard of Allies They May Help With Traffic Problem

While improvements to the Boulevard of the Allies are proceeding there is inevitably some inconvenience for motorists accustomed to use this traffic artery to and from the East End, Oakland and Squirrel Hill districts. City authorities have made every possible provision for easing this problem while the necessary resurfacing is being done, and motorists themselves should lend aid by finding the least traveled and speediest routes to and from the downtown district.

Too much load should not be thrown on Bigelow boulevard, already congested during the rush hours. Fifth avenue and Forbes street offer alternative routes which are direct and not heavily congested, despite the presence of trolley cars.

"Sweet are the uses of adversity," wrote a philosophic poet.

And the same idea is expressed in Poor Richard's truism that "Experience is the best teacher."

During the prodigal years Uncle Sam ventured boldly as a foreign lender and foreign trader—and all he got out of it in the long run was EXPERIENCE plus ADVERSITY.

As a post-war exporter he found foreign nations, including even debtor nations, borrowing his money to buy his goods—and then repudiating their honest debts when it came time to pay.

Consequently Uncle Sam has had to change his methods.

Hereafter debtor countries which have defaulted their debts will have to put down cash when they buy from Uncle Sam.

No credit to welshers is his new policy, as expressed in the Johnson Act.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 29.—Thoughts while strolling: Manhattan's squirrel cagers flying round and round. And seizing upon strained laughter. Betzi Beaton is a blonde Dolores. Gracie Square sounds sissified. Nearest to a sneeze name is that new Russian author: Taitiana Tchernavin.

One word description of cartoonist Will A. Johnstone—grinny. No one has ever portrayed a hop-head like Junie McCree. Jimmy Thompson, Broadway baron, once silent backer of the Palais Royal. The corner Coffee Pots thinning out. And the bright lit cafeteria gets the play.

Whatever became of Joel Rinaldo? And pink-papered Yucatan gum? Nothing revives memories like old songs. Who can hum "The Tale of the Kangaroo?" Rudy Vallee, a notable hummer, can't. How talent will dignify the most absurd names. For instance Ginger Rogers, John Taintor Foote, Cissie Loftus, Hallie Stiles.

That rich Donahue boy has the face of one of those soup ad. cherubs. Dashiell Hammett is a "thin man" himself. Painfully so. Park Row's once most silk-stockinged editor, Julian Mason. A good screen team-up—Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook. Helen Morgan has the startled look of the uncertain doe.

One of my favorite people—Jack Dempsey. Young John Jacob Astor gets himself disliked—acting snooty. A bad time to be putting on the ritz, my masters. Frank Sullivan is on the stout side again. There's one way to stop blundering. Get into society. Then you make a faux-pas.

Vaudeville seems to have made its final bow. Its most recent try for a come-back sputtered out like a wet fire-cracker in two weeks. Movie stage shows such as The Capital and Paramount with a soupcon of variety, apparently fill the modern need. And there are not enough of the ardent week-after-week pew holders to inspire backers to carry on.

Woodrow Wilson, highest of high-brows, preferred vaudeville to any other type of stage entertainment. Charles M. Schwab was not a regular but frequent attender. Charles Dana Gibson liked vaudeville, as did Stanford White, C. B. Dillingham, Addison Mizner and Jack London.

So staunch was a vaudeville patriot's fervor for the art he would suffer the same routine from same performers year after year. ISN'T IT SO?

Doing nothing for others is the undoing of one's self.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

'As the Earth Turns'

Always and always there was the earth turning outside the kitchen window—and the seasons coming and going.

First, the winter.

"A busy downfall of flakes . . . drifts piled up over the steps and over the sawdust banking that covered the sills. Fence posts were hidden, and the rails; only a few apple trees in the back field and the pine in the corner at the end of the lane struck lines on the whitening air."

But inside the kitchen, where Len peeled apples for sauce, it was warm and still. The kettle simmered, the smell of cinamon rose in bubbling gusts, the old steeple clock on the shelf ticked softly and Len moved easily, contentedly through it all, feeling the friendliness of all the old familiar things—"the table set with the red glass sugar bowl and pitcher . . . the faded border around the new calendar . . . the black stove with a fat baby engraved on the oven door . . . the sagging couch with its flowered pillows . . . the worn, reddish chairs . . . the geraniums in the windows, the smoky fragrance of the fried ham . . . the yellow shine of the lamplight on the dishes."

Always Len and her kitchen were the same, moving with life as the earth and the sky and the water moved, yet, somehow, never changing. When winter passed and the turning earth brought spring, with apple blossoms beyond the window instead of snow—and a child coming and a man dying—Len moved with it all, giving herself to each need as it came, but losing nothing of herself as she gave.

Now "early spring sunshine lay pale and thin over the yard. The branches of the tree by the well were bare and restless, as if life quickened in them. New grass grew among the old by the step." The freshly cleaned house smelled of a soap, starched muslin, boiling greens.

Then presently it was summer, with the warm nights rustling with the small sounds of pushing life, and the farm work catching them all in its hot tide. Len's face shone, happy and flushed, above the opening of her blue dress. Her hair lay damp on her plump, ruddy neck, and her strong hands moved swiftly above the big pots of steaming pickles and preserves.

Then it was fall. The sky blazed blue between the scarlet and orange of the maple trees. There was a film of frost on the grass of mornings ... the sting of smoke along the air at twilight. And "Len must be packing away dried apples in paper bags or stirring cider, apple sauce or barberries in a big kettle on the stove; when the children had gone to bed she sometimes knit on the third white blanket for Ed's baby or on the red, ribbed stockings she always gave to men and boys at Christmas."

And then it was winter again, with the snowflakes whirring, whispering against the window panes.

The words go on. But you no longer realize that they are words. You have forgotten that you are reading a story called "AS THE EARTH TURNS," which Gladys Hasty Carroll wrote and the MACMILLAN COMPANY made into a book. You only know that an old song has awakened in your heart . . . a song which you once knew very well, but have long since forgotten.

The old song of the earth, which we all knew and loved once . . . which was the only song we did know.

But now it comes back to you. Following Len through her kitchen, through the simple round of her farming year, it all comes back to you. And with it a peace and quiet contentment you had thought you would never feel again.

For, of course, this is the way life should be. This is the way you always want it to be, really. Not rushing feverishly down city streets. Not bound to machines. But close to the earth . . . with roots that go as surely and deeply into the earth as any tree's.

Moving with the turning of the earth, as Len moved. Moving with life—not fighting back. Giving and giving as the earth gives—yet at the same time being filled.

Yes, with a rush of homesick tears, you remember it all. This is the song you knew once. This is the song that all America knew. Why did we ever forget it? If we could learn it again!

If we could stop our mad dreaming, our mad battling and find our way home again, out of the darkness and the storm, into the old, quiet kitchen . . . feel again the warmth and comfort of the friendly, familiar things . . . sit at last down in some quiet corner, at some simple task!

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

Matrimonial Teamwork

When you ask a happily married pair what charm or virtue it is that they love or admire most in each other, it is funny to see the look of blank bewilderment which comes into their eyes.

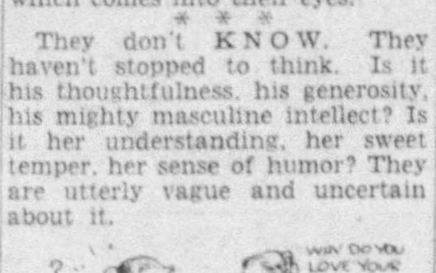
They don't KNOW. They haven't stopped to think. Is it his thoughtfulness, his generosity, his mighty masculine intellect? Is it her understanding, her sweet temper, her sense of humor? They are utterly vague and uncertain about it.



But if you should ask either of them what little failing they find hardest to bear with in their respective spouses, they wouldn't HAVE to stop and think. They'd KNOW right off the bat! And they wouldn't need a Greek dictionary to find a word for it!

What IS a "good husband," anyhow? Not a perfect husband or an "ideal husband," but just a common or garden "GOOD husband," such as every girl hopes to draw in the matrimonial sweepstakes.

Somebody is always giving a new formula for selecting a husband, a new system for picking out a wife or a new recipe for making a go of marriage. But a husband is like a cocktail, a mixture of so many ingredients that the only thing about him, of which you can be absolutely sure, is that you LIKE him—or that you DON'T.

* * *

Oddly enough, a good husband isn't always a good man. And many a "Good man," who obeys the law, observes all the Ten Commandments, pays his debts and keeps his wedding vows may be the most trying and insufferable of husbands.

An open-handed racketeer, a pleasant-tempered kidnaper or even a nice, genial bank robber may be a "good husband" (as so many of their gun-moll wives have testified) while the most upright and virtuous man in your community may be just a matrimonial headache. Carrying a gun in one pocket doesn't prevent a thoughtful man from remembering to bring the Little Woman a diamond bracelet or a couple of alligator pears in the other pocket.

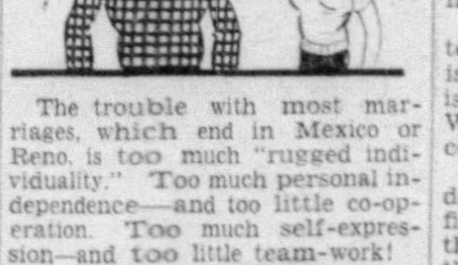
Nobody can tell any woman just what combination of qualities will make a good husband—for HER. Because the whole success of a marriage depends on the TEAM-WORK! And unless a man and a woman are gaited to do team-work—unless each understands where the other is heading and can keep the same pace, any marriage is hard pulling.



The trouble with most marriages, which end in Mexico or Reno, is too much "rugged individuality." Too much personal independence—and too little co-operation. Too much self-expression—and too little team-work!

What you need, for happiness in marriage, is not a "model husband" or a paragon of all the virtues, but a good running-mate!

President to Be First To Visit Hawaii

By James T. Williams, Jr.

WHEN President Roosevelt goes aboard the U. S. S. Houston at Annapolis for his Atlantic-Pacific cruise, he will blaze a new trail and follow several trails blazed by other presidents.

Mr. Roosevelt will be the first president to visit the Hawaiian Islands during his term of office. He will not be the first president to visit Porto Rico and the Panama Canal nor the first to visit foreign countries.

Theodore Roosevelt was the first president to pass outside the territory of the United States while holding office. In November, 1906, he paid a visit to the Isthmus and made a thorough inspection of the canal then under construction. He also went on a cruiser of the Navy and spent three days on the isthmus "devoting nearly every daylight hour to the inspection of canal work from one ocean to the other."

The canal was then in charge of the second commission and the secretary of that commission, who was later to write a book about "Theodore Roosevelt and his time"—Joseph B. Bishop, of New York—says of that famous visit:

"Every portion of the work, including engineering plans, sanitary arrangements and regulations for the civil government of the Canal Zone, was subjected to minute scrutiny. The zeal and tireless energy of the President put to a severe strain the physical strength of more than one of his companions."

Theodore Roosevelt Pleads for Order

RESPONDING to an address of welcome by the President of the Panama republic, Dr. Manuel Amador, President Theodore Roosevelt, having in mind the revolutionary record of Panama — a record of more than 50 revolutions in 50 years, said:

"The sole desire of the United States as regards the Republic of Panama is to see it increase in wealth, in numbers, in importance, until it becomes, as I so earnestly hope it will become, one of the republics whose history reflects honor upon the entire Western world. Such progress and prosperity, Mr. President, can only come through the preservation of both order and liberty; through the observance of those in power of all their rights, obligations and duties to their fellow citizens, and through the realization of those out of power that the insurrectionary habit, the habit of civil war, ultimately means destruction to the republic."

Secretary Bishop, who was on the platform when this speech was delivered, says that the closing sentence of the passage above quoted was delivered with great force, the President striding to the front of the platform and fairly hurling it into the faces of the assembled crowd of Panamanians.

Although it was a condemnation of Panama's "chief political industry for half a century," Roosevelt's biographer reports that "the Panamanians greeted it with shouts of approval."

And apparently the people of Panama took to heart the warning because the new republic has been fairly peaceful ever since.

Many Presidents Visit Canal Zone

IF President Roosevelt, during his cruise in the Caribbean or his visit to Panama, should repeat the ringing words of Theodore Roosevelt which the Panamanians so loudly applauded in November, 1906, the repetition might have a calming effect on the chaotic conditions in Cuba. Because they are so chaotic, the Cuban government will not have the opportunity to welcome the President of the United States as he passes through the Caribbean on his way to Hawaii.

Every President since Theodore Roosevelt except President Hoover has visited the Canal during his term of office and several have been to Porto Rico. President Coolidge went to Havana to open the Pan-American Conference, which was held there in 1928. President Wilson went to Europe and President Harding to Alaska. Mr. Hoover as President-elect circled South America.

It is a far cry, however, from the growing nation that Theodore Roosevelt helped to expand by the acquirement of the Panama Canal route and by the building of the Caual, to the dwindling nation that the seventy-third Congress has started toward an unknown goal.

No other Congress ever threw away 114,000 square miles of American territory with a natural wealth running into billions of dollars. This is what the seventy-third Congress did when it attempted to bind the American people to haul down the flag over the Philippine Islands a decade hence, regardless of whether at the moment an enemy is off Manila Bay or steaming to attack the Hawaiian Islands.

Health Commissioner Gives Advice on Vacation Safety—Chinese Health Rules

By Edwin C. Hill

VACATION! The perennial lure which rouses the jaded senses of throngs—mammas, papas and children; frolicking lovers, pale-faced clerks, tired of the humdrum of the workaday world; serious-faced couples whose scanty savings are barely sufficient to cover their expenses; prodigal society belles and beaux, undaunted spinsters who cherish the happy idea that big things generally hinge on little beginnings; middle-aged bachelors of wealth and leisure (if there are any left) — all summer migrators—all forming part of a trickle in the stream of human life.

New York City's health commissioner, John L. Rice, offers some beneficial suggestions of do's and don't's to vacationers, in which he says:

"Insist on inspected, pure water, or boil it. Stick to pasteurized milk. Choose a lodging with clean facilities and a kitchen above reproach; keep away from swamps, houses on swamps and houses without window screens. On motor tours, pass up the water in streams unless you boil it; avoid milk 'direct from the cow'.

"Get up early, walk before breakfast, take a shower when you can, but loaf for an hour after the morning meal. Take a nap if you feel like it in the afternoon, but do your main sleeping at night. Indulge in any sport you like after supper, and if it's dancing, dance, but get eight hours sleep. Contract a coat of tan by degrees, start with a few minutes the first day, but don't try to become browned in two days."

Perhaps it might be well to add to the above: Leave your cares behind and refrain from worrying. Many individuals find themselves obsessed by reflections and worries, resulting from one thing or another which they concentrate on and frequently magnify and, although they relax physically, they are mentally harassed and thus the benefits of their vacation are hindered. Most of us have, at some time or other, stayed awake far into the night troubled by some plight which we thought profoundly significant and which we now regard as a petty triviality. It is true that science and industry have progressed unceasingly, yet there really has been no drastic change in the makeup of man.

We have a definite heritage of instincts, passions and sensations. We are faced with struggles, intrigues, endeavors and other complexities of urban life, as our forefathers were. In fact, very little happens to us that has not happened many times to others and, in all probability, will happen many times again. It is a worthwhile effort to minimize our worries and regard them with proper calm, and as Dr. Rice suggests, to take our pleasures without exaggeration.

Health Biggest Problem to Most

HOW to remain healthy and get the best out of life is just about the most important problem in the existence of most people, short of speculating as to what the future life will be and the state of the temperature. That problem of how to stay healthy supports two entire professions and parts of other professions and vocations, to say nothing of the quacks and charlatans who feed around the fringes and ballyhoo their absurd nostrums.

It was an old English writer, none other than the patron saint of fishermen, Sir Izaak Walton, who said that health is the second blessing that we mortals are capable of, a blessing that money cannot buy.

And Gray, who wrote the incomparable Elegy, said that heaven's best treasures were peace and health. All through the ages there are clouds of witnesses to that. But to the Chinese, that ancient people, to whom time means so little, who fight with the terrible weapon of passive resistance; who know so many curious things and knew them centuries before they were known in the western world—the Chinese, I say, consider it a very simple matter to acquire and maintain good health.

Their rules are plain and specific; breakfast early in the morning. Take in the air of heaven through the nose. Never leave the house until you have broken your fast. This precaution is all the more important in times of epidemic, or when one must enter a house in which there are sick people. Take a good meal in the middle of the day. Eat the simplest viands; they are more nourishing. Beware of the delicate dishes invented only to tickle the appetite.

Rules of Diet Found Simple

EAT slowly; chew well; such mastication breaks the food into bits, charges it well with saliva, and prepares it for the stomach. Don't satisfy your appetite to such an extent that when you get up from the table you are surfeited; abundance of food torments the stomach and impedes digestion.

Sup early and frugally. Better increase the number of your meals than increase the quantity of food you take at each one. As soon as you awake in the morning, rub the chest in the region of the heart. Otherwise, by getting out of a warm bed, the cool air will take your system by surprise, suddenly closing the pores and causing various troubles. But if you beat your breast slightly with the palm of the hand, you will put your blood in movement at its source and guard against unexpected trials to your system.

Avoid swift transitions from heat to cold. In bed lie on your right side or on your left, bend your knees and go to sleep in this position. Every time you wake up, stretch yourself in bed; this will impart freedom to the operations of the heart. The heart is to a man what roots are to a tree.

If you decline from your original state of prosperity, say to yourself that what you have will suffice for you.
